MARYLAND SPEAKS.

Editor American Fancier:

In looking over the list of judges recently proposed by F. E. Orr (which I have no doubt will be confirmed) to place the ribbons at St. Louis, I notice the absence of the names of a host of the best and most popular judges in this country, men who have done more to build up the poultry interests of the United States than all the others. Perhaps, however, the judges whom I have in my mind did not conform with the rules laid down by the superintendent of the St. Louis show. They may have done as I did, when receiving that circular or catechism—thrown it in the waste basket. It is easy now to see why the judges' names were withheld until after the entries were all in. If the announcement had been made so that the exhibitors could have seen who was to pass judgment on their birds, I predict four thousand would have been nearer to the number than the one now given out. Geographically, the distribution is bad, but I will not stop to argue this point. Maryland has within its confinest one of the oldest and most noted judges in the land, a man who helped largely to build up the greatest show in this country of ours, namely Hagerstown. I allude to Geo. O. Brown. When such men are turned down it is about time to inquire who is the nigger in the wood-pile. Mr. T. E. Orr may not be at fault in this matter, but I wish to say right here that, if Mr. Orr is guilty of discriminating against such judges as Ball, Hales, Brown, Drevenstedt, Zimmer, Crangle, Nichols Stanton, Hewes, McGrew,Bicknell and a host of others, he is getting down more hay than he will have time to cock up.

MARYLAND MY MARYLAND.

September 28, 1904.

Mr. Howell, associate editor of The American Fancier, will furnish weekly reports on the egg and poultry market, and answer all questions submitted to him relating to commercial and practical poultry keeping. When replies are requested to be sent by letter, stamps must be enclosed and letters addressed to George E. Howell, 70 Christopher St., New York City.

Eggs.—Receipts for week, 58,830 cases. Market shows very unsettled condition, absolutely reliable white eggs sales not governed by quotations; the seller makes the price.

Ice house is being used quite freely, and ordinary fresh is finding an unusually quiet demand for this time of year.

We quote, fancy selected white, 28 to 30c.; ordinary fresh, 27 to28c.; mixed colors, fancy, 28c.; fair to good, 23 to 24c. Western fancy, candled, 21½ to 23c.; average best, 20 to 21c.; southern and southwestern, 17 to 20c, as to quality; refrigerator, 18 to 20c per dozen.

Live poultry.—Chickens, nearby and western, 12c per lb; southern, 11c. Fowls, southern and western, 12 to 12½.; turkeys, 12.

Dressed Poultry. — Philadelphia spring chickens, 7 to 8 lbs. to pair, 21 to 22c per lb.; mixed sizes, 18 to 19c; state and Pa. fancy, large, 16 to 18c; mixed sizes, 13 to 14c; small, 12½c.; western dry picked, 12 to 12½; Ohio and Michigan fancy, scalded, 13c.; other western, 11½ to 12c.

Spring urkeys.—Hens, 3 to 4 lbs. each, 20 to 25c.; toms, 18 to 20c; average run, 15 to 16c.

Old turkeys, 14 to 15c.; old fowls 12 to 12½c.; spring ducks, Long Island, 16½.; Eastern, Pa., Va. and Jersey, 16 to 16½c.; fair to good,14 to 15c.; spring geese, white, 16 to 17c.; dark, 14 to 15c.

Squabs.—Best, $1.75 to $2.75 per dozen as to color; fair quality $1.50 to $2.50 per doz.

The Sprague Commission Co., the largest handlers of poultry in the west, have just scattered their annual report broadcast.

Of Turkeys they say: "The crop is 15 per cent heavier than last year, but late.

The crop of chickens will be 20 per cent. heavier than last year, of which large quantities are yet unmarketed.

Ducks will be a heavier crop than last year by 10 per cent, prices for late years having encouraged more extensive duck raising. Geese have fallen behind last year's figures, the largest shrinkage occurring in Illinois, where a law has been enacted prohibiting geese from ranging at large, has discouraged extensive raising of geese in that state."

The object no doubt in compiling this report and favoring each poultry and agricultural journal with same, is a desire to get the firm's name before the poultry-raising world. Be that as it may, we are glad of an opportunity to give our readers the benefit of such reliable and trustworthy information on a subject which naturally interests them to a considerable degree. The man who does not post himself on the outlook and condition of his market, when same is so easily secured, is pretty well back in the rear of the procession.

With the present easy and quick circulation of news, no producer need remain in ignorance of the value of his products, no matter what part of the globe he inhabits. The mail, the telegraph and cable are in constant operation to and from the great commercial centers of the world. They in turn supply the news to the publishing houses and it is sown broadcast.

The laws of the country say no lottery shall be maintained or patronized within the boundaries of these U. S. Every walk of life is more or less a lottery, the chicken business being about as pronounced as any. We procure a setting of eggs and raise a brood of chicks, hoping the wheel of fortune will throw us out a winner; but alas, how often otherwise. Like the boy who came to the dairy for a half-pint of cream, he dug down into his trousers pocket innumerable times and brought up not the dime he sought, but a miserable copper cent. So it is with poultry showing; we go out for the capital prize, and come back with a blank. To continue the parable of the boy and his cream a little farther—eventually his search of his numerous pockets was rewarded by bringing forth the coveted dime. The persistent searcher and worker for first prize s generally also obtains his desires in the end.

When the authorities disagree about the perfect balanced ration for the production of eggs, then the poultryman must experiment and decide for himself. The whole thing is dovetailed to the operator's judgment, rather than to what the tables say. The object is to procure the most at the least cost; that is the final adjudication of the whole thing.

There is a question to be asked in connection with the St. Louis show,and it is this: Will the carload of birds exhibited by the mult-millionaire possess more merit, in the eye of the judge, than the small entry of the obscure breeder from the obscure town from whence cometh the obscure judge?

It is to be earnestly hoped the selection of the committee will prove its merit when it comes to the test, a man who knows enough to place the cards on the best birds and has the grit and stamina to cast aside alike, the temptings of wealth and the offerings of the unscrupulous, is the man who is fitted to judge where so much will depend on a decision. In such large classes, the rewarded will be few, and the disappointed many. Here's hoping not one deserving bird, that has earned the prize, will be in the latter classification.

Take the 800 White Wyandottes said to be entered, for instance. Such an outpouring deserves for an adjudicator the highest authority in the world, be it who it may. A "class B" man is out of place.

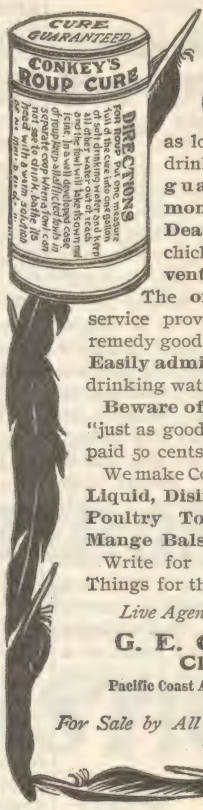
THE LANGSHANS.

I have bred, raised and exhibited seventeen kinds of poultry in a time, and have experimented with a lot of them as layers, sitters and table fowls. At one time I bred Barred Rocks, Siver Wyandottes, Buff and Partridge Cochins, Single Comb White Leghorns, Light Brahmas, Dark Brahmas and Black Langshans. They were all raised together, and fed the same kind of food; had the run of the farm and were tried two years on one farm, and with the exception of the Dark Brahmas were tried on two other farms for several years. I had two sisters who experimented some with the most of the above kinds for several years, and their experience was the same as mine, and that is: That the Langshans were the best winter layers nicely concaved backs. A Langshan of them all; they were the hardiest of any excepting the Light Brahmas, and were fully as hardy as they.

They were better sitters and mothers than any of them, excepting the Wyandottes, and were fully their equal. The Langshans were the best table fowls of them all. I always put fowls in coop for a week or two before killing for the table, and have always had them baked and eaten when cold, as no person can tell much about the flavor of fowls when they are fried in lard or boiled and eaten when warm. I have tried the Langshans with Barred Plymouth Rocks, then with Wyandottes, then with Cochins, Brahmas, Leghorns, etc., and in every instance I have found the Langshans more tender and juicy than any of the above mentioned birds.

I have considered the tests I have made fair, because all of the fowls were raised together and fed the same kind of foods. I took a four-year-old male once and dressed him for the table. He cooked up just as tender and juicy in as short a time as the average mature Langshan female, and was as good a table fowl as any other Langshan. That is more than I can say of any other breed of fowls. I find that there is a difference in Langshans—some have nearly white skin and bottom of feet same color; while others border on yellow skin and feet, although not classed as yellow. About twenty-five years ago Langshans had lighter leg and toe feathering than now, and according to the Standard a lot of them were disqualified, so Black Cochins were called upon to furnish feathers. There is where the yellow skin and feet came from, and fifteen to twenty years ago I bought birds and eggs from a lot of the best bredeers of Langshans in the country and the yellow feet would crop out occasionally. In 1885 a certain big breeder imported a lot of eggs from England; a neighbor of mine in 1886 got one of the cockerels to breed from, and more than half of his chicks had yellow skin. The breeders made such war on the yellow skin that it is seldom now that flocks show it, but there is a certain amount of that blood in nearly all flocks, as they bought and sold each others, stock that was from flocks contaminated with the yellow skin. Six to ten years ago, I saw flocks of White Langshans the same way. I used to see White Langshans with yellow feet and legs, short bodies and legs, large cushions—in fact, fair White Cochins. Now, they were certainly not sports.

A man who used to live at Springfield, Mo., told me that he had a Black Langshan hen that hatched two or three White Langshans every year from her eggs. I told him that sports were very rare, and he said not; that nearly one-half of the breeders of different kinds of fowls were producing sports. They don't have to do so now. I used to see W. P. Rocks look like coarse White Leghorns—but to get back to the Langshans. Take a flock of them and see if the birds having the whitest skin don't have the longest and smallest shanks and highest tails; often, tails going nearly to their heads. As long as we breed for a very concave back with no cushion in females, we will have high and thin tails in males. To get the bushy waterfall tails, with long, narrow side hangers in males, breed to females with some cushion and then from males with such. Stock of any kind nearly always partakes of the characteristics of their grandparents. I find that if a person breeds for clean middle toes, about the second or third generation he has either disqualified toes or very thinly feathered shanks on a lot of them.



A Langshan with short thighs is an abomination, and if shanks and thighs are medium in length when half grown, they are too short when grown. I believe that males that are squirrel-tailed are generally from females with nicely concaved back A Langshan has rather a long body, but with long neck hackle and upright tail, with a lot of saddle hackle makes a short looking back.

I wish some one would explain to me why all defects in fowls are not made disqualifications? The quicker we quit breeding from bad defects, the quicker we will get rid of them. As long as bad defects are not disqualifications breeders will sell them, and novices will breed them, and they are perpetuated. If they receive severe cuts they can't win, and what use has the fancy for them? The shortest way to get fine birds is to breed to birds with no bad defects. Nearly every revision of the Standard I have protested against some things in the Standard on Langshans, but of no avail. According to the Standard I can take a Langshan with a lot of feathers in back, body and wings, white at the tips, and they cannot be disqualified. We can breed the white out of Langshans and the side sprigs from their combs, but we will never do it by allowing it bred.

The old breeders know from experience that novices allow fine looking birds in their breeding pens, that have serious defects and they are intensified, and when he gets hard cuts in show, so that he can't win, he gets dissatisfied and sometimes disgusted enough to quit, and frequently does stop. If serious defects were made disqualifications and the beginners were told, and made to believe that it did not pay to get any but No. 1 birds to start with, I believe it would go a long way toward breeding a larger number of first-class birds. I know that you can talk and write till doomsday and you can't get some breeders to get out of the old way of breeding haphazardly, and to almost any old thing, to get fine birds. You can't get something from nothing, but it seems that a lot of people never believe it until they experience it.

I am interested in Langshans, and can't help but thinking that we are not advancing fast in breeding more perfect birds by allowing bad defects intensified. Ten years ago I became a life member of the American Langshan club and would like to know what has become of it.—J. W. Wale, in The Inland Poultry Journal.

DUBBING.

There has been a great deal of controversy from time to time on the subject of dubbing. Possibly the advent of the Dairy Show will revive interest in the matter, as the Game and Game bantams there have to be shown undubbed. I need not, however, here enter upon any argument as to the merits or demerits, or as to the cruelty or otherwise of dubbing, although it may be remarked that a great deal of exaggeration has been indulged in with regard to the degree of cruelty which an ordinary dubbing operation involves upon a Game bird. If a man has a conscientious objection to dub his fowls, he need not read this article any further, for it is intended to interest people who have made up their minds to dub their birds, and who want to know how to do the matter properly.

The age at which a bird can be dubbed satisfactorily is that of about four or five months, varying, of course, with the breed. The wattles should be first taken off with a sharp pair of curved scissors, which can be obtained from veterinary instrument makers, suitable for the purpose. Begin carefully to cut at the beak end, stretch the wattle down, and cut straight in the direction of the ear. When the wattles have been removed the comb can be treated similarly, cutting upwards from the beak end. A straight, firm cut is necessary, and in the case of the ordinary bird of the Game or Game bantams breeds, there is not likely to be serious bleeding, and what there is will usually stop of itself quickly when the bird is placed on the ground. To hold the bird means excitement and struggling, which tend to increase the bleeding; therefore, the bird should be set down at once, and the probability is that nothing farther will be required.

When it becomes necessary to dub a bird of one of the large-combed breeds, the matter is rather more serious. It is often essential, in fact, as a general rule, it is the best thing to do—to dub Minorca and Leghorn cocks before they are put in the breeding pen Their combs being very large, are liable to become frost-bitten during the winter season and are often a great nuisance to the birds, and spoil their value for breeding purposes, because a bird that is in a condition of misery, such as a bird will be that has frosted comb or even a sore comb, due to some slight injury, or, for that matter, an inconvenient comb, which prevents him from picking up freely, cannot prove a satisfactory stock bird. The comb of a Minorca, of course, is very much larger than that of a Game fowl, and the base is so wide that serious bleeding ensues unless care be taken. But it is not necessary to dub a bird like this close to the skull; for all practical purpoes the dubbing can merely consist of taking off the upper part of the comb. A clever hand with a little experience can do this in such a way as to leave the bird with a handsome, smooth comb, rising about half an inch from the top of the skull, which is not by any means unsightly. The way to dub Minorcas or Leghorns properly is to get a scissors-shaped clamp, which can be borrowed from any medical man(such as is used for the prevention of bleeding in certain surgical cases), and attach it to the base of the comb, then cut off that portion which is left above the clamp.

The quickest way to stop bleeding is to use the cautery. Yes, gentle reader, the cautery is a red hot iron, and the very thought of it makes you shudder! But it is not cruel to use this instrument if it be used properly. What is required to be done is to coagulate the exuded blood, and this can be accomplished without the bird feeling the cautery at all. The cautery, or red hot iron, to give it its worst name, to which I am referring, is that used by medical men. It is a small steel rod, about half as thick as a led pencil, which can be made red hot and kept so by the use of a benzine lamp apparatus attached to it; and with this half-pencil-like rod red hot, it is an easy matter to touch the exterior part of some effused bloor and coagulate it, and thereby to prevent any farther loss of blood.

The operation I have described on a Minorca or a Leghorn is, of course, the most serious dubbing operation that can be undertaken. I have no hesitation in saying, however, that the whole thing can be done without any pain whatever being caused to the bird, and with no loss of blood, so long as the comb is clamped at the start; if, however, the thing be done clumsily and carelessly, and a proper clamp be not applied, it is most likely that in the case of a large bird like the Minorca, the stream of blood that will shoot out will make the bird seriously faint before it can be stopped—even, perhaps, running the risk of causing its death. Such a catastrophe, however, would be due to nothing but sheer and willful neglect, and the man who is guilty of it deserves to be severely punished.—M., Poultry, England.

MINEOLA FAIR.

Grand Display of Poultry at 63rd Annual Exhibition.

The Poultry department, under the charge of Mr. Lott Van de Water, was one grand success. It was cooped and fed by "Spratts" and judged by "Stanton" of New York and Charles Smith of Woodhaven, L. I., N. Y. Both had three very busy days, this being the first year of the single entry system. The sixteen hundred entries brought out nearly every known breed.

The Wyandotte, Plymouth Rock, Brahma and Cochin families were fine. Mr. Magee is entitled to great credit for his fine exhibit of Buff Cochins, a beautiful display of Pigeons and Water Fowl. Bantams were the largest class they have ever had at this Fair.

Single entry plan seems to take well with the breeders.

And where thirty-five thousand people pass through the gate in one day is a grand place to show poultry.

The largest exhibitor in the poultry department was the Valdosta Poultry Company, of Valdosta, Georgia, winning 113 first premiums. Next came George Burn, of Ontario, with seventy-nine first premiums, the third highest being W. B. Sherry of Stony Brook, with fifty-five first premiums. Other premium winners were the West Broadway Poultry Farm, of Rhode Island, sixteen first premiums; William W. Titus, of East Williston, thirty-two first premiums; D. C. Noxar, twenty; I. W. Van Sise, jr., Woodbury, nine; Oceanside Poultry Farm, nine; Adolph Janicke, six; Timothy Tredwell, eighteen; Fred Woodruff, nine; F. H. Wells, one; John W. Masury, two; South Side Paultry Farm, five; Charles Magee, four; Herbert W. Smith, two; Robert C. Cornwell, three; D. S. Riker, one; Amos Williams, two; J. A. Bodine, four; Isaac Keator, two; Miss Rica Hopkins, two; Walter Roessler, one; A. A. Stoutenburg, two; Fred M. Sealey, four; Herman D. Aldrich,four; George H. Smith, two; Dr. Paul Kyle, four; E. Melere, four; Robert C. Cornell, one; H. P. Ketcham, one; Harold Craft, one; Andrew Sauer, three; E. R. Collins, six; Rowland Story, one; William F. Albers seven.

The Latest and Best Book on Success with Fowls

Questions on winning in the show room, giving methods employed by professional and expert exhibitors. These are sure to help you win. Questions about mating the breeding birds that will help you raise winners. Questions about incubators and natural incubation, diseases, feeding, houses and fixtures. It contains more than a thousand important questions with answers, covering all branches of the business. It contains more general information about poultry, both for exhibition and market, than any other two books ever written and this knowledge and instruction is placed before the reader in just the shape he desires it and in a form most helpful to both amateur and expert. The reader is not compelled to go over a lot of unnecessary comment to get one point as is usually the case. Every line in the book is interesting, because it means something and says it in plain language and in the fewest words. With this book in your possession, you have answers to the questions arising in your mind just at the time you want them, and what is of more importance, it will present vital questions to you, many of which you will otherwise learn by expensive experience.

It contains 150 pages, is handsomely bound, printed on good paper with fine large type, easy to read. In order to thoroughly introduce it, the price for a limited time will be 50 cents per copy, the regular price being $1.00. A fair idea of its great value to those interested in poultry cannot be formed without a careful perusal of its pages. It is sold with the distinct understanding and positive guarantee that if not as represented, or if purchaser thinks it is not worth the price, the amount paid for it will be promptly refunded upon immediate return of the book in good condition. We will send the book promptly upon receipt of 50 cents.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

THE KENNEL.

WE'VE STARTED SEVERAL POULTRY FANCIERS as breeders of high class collies in a small way. They report very successful results, deriving both pleasure and profit from same. Collies also are very useful as destroyers of chicken enemies, skunks, minks, weasels and even keeping hawks away. We breed both poultry and collies, (high class stock) and like them both, but of the two prefer the collies. Elegant puppies, bitches in whelp and other mature stock for sale nearly all the time. Illustrated circular free if you mean business. State just what you want. Maplelawn Farms, Hebron, Conn. 77-79

MONEY MADE

By Using Geyer's Champion Disinfectant & Vermin Destroyer

There are, in all classes of powders before the public, many calculated for the sure cure of lice and vermin and a dozen other purposes, yet are they reliable, and have they produced the results claimed?

In offering this compound, we offer a powder such as is not before the public, and fills a place that none other can for the purpose intended—a positive, sure disinfectant and destroyer of all vermin that invests either poultry, small animals, those of the barn yard.

It is a perfect destroyer of all disease germs, and produces a healthy odor wherever distributed. It is a sure cure for gapes, in young chicks.

If you are skeptical and don't believe in Powders or compouud because of many worthless ones on the market, we ask, please cast aside your prejudice and give this compound a trial. It is put up in 2 pound boxes. Price 25c. 560tf

TWELFTH ANNUAL SALE.

We will have our Twelfth Annual Sale for the month of NOVEMBER of the World Wide Known Egg Producer,

BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC.

On account of the late Spring this year, there were less birds raised than ever before, so the demand for fresh laid eggs will be the greater.

To help supply this extra demand a little BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC in the morning mash will do the work. It starts the pullets laying early and keeps them laying all through the winter. It helps the old hens through moulting and gets them to laying before the very cold weather sets in.

Those who have used BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC once will never try anything else, as it does more than we say it will do.

The regular price is 1 lb., 25c; by mail 40c; or, 5 boxes, $1.00.

We will sell during the month of NOVEMBER only a 1 lb. box, 15c; by mail, 30c! or, 7 boxes $1.00, shipped via express or freight from New York.

This is a big saving to our customers, old and new, and those wishing to double their profits should take advantage of this special offer.

At these reduced prices, positively no orders filled before November 1st nor after November 30th.

We sell all kinds of POULTRY SUPPLIES and all are listed in our Immense Illustrated Poultry Supply Catalogue, mailed free. Send for one.

Poultry in Canada

Experimental Work on the Government Central Experiment Station Farm, Reported by A. G. Gilbert, Poultry Manager.

Seventeen years ago the first annual report of this department was distributed among the farmers of the country. It contained information as to the breeds best calculated to make winter egg layers and rapid flesh forming chickens during summer, so permitting opportunity to make money at both seasons of the year. While the benefit likely to accrue from such a course of action was freely admitted, there was yet—on the part of many persons—a feeling of misgiving which found expression in the exclamation, Oh! but when the production of winter eggs and the superior quality of poultry is more general, prices will become so low as to be profitless. On the contrary prices have either remained stationary or advanced, and this notwithstanding an increased production. Comparison with the winter prices of ten years ago and those of last winter will give proof of this.

In the case of the city of Toronto, for instance, the advance, during recent years, in winter prices—in face of greatly increased production in the surrounding country—is most marked. In that city eight or ten years ago twenty-five cents would have been considered full value for a dozen of new laid eggs. Last winter the same quality and quantity of eggs sold for forty cents. A corresponding advance in the value of the superior quality of poultry may also be noted. Not only in the district surrounding Toronto has there been increased winter egg and superior quality of poultry production, but throughout the greater part of the Dominion. Why then should prices not have become lower? The answer at once suggests itself, that there has been a greater proportionate increase in the number of consumers. While this is doubtless correct, it is not the only reason. It may be interesting to note some of the causes which experience has shown to mitigate against a greater and more rapid production.

Experimental work for many years has plainly shown that the obtaining of eggs in winter and a better class of poultry is not so easy as at first glance may seem. Success is dependent upon conditions which are not only more or less exacting according to location, but complete knowledge of which is imperative to success. This is not always realized. The numerous letters received by the writer from different points show that many are anxious to get results before they know how to do so. And for that reason many try only to fail. On the part of the specialist expert knowledge is requisite. On the part of all, not only knowledge, but patience, perseverance, liking for the occupation and adaptability are necessary factors. Without them success is not likely to be attained.

A drawback to successful poultry development is oftain met with in the enthusiast who establishes a plant, buys a number of birds and then writes for information as to proper methods of management and feeding, which should have been first thoroughly learned. A letter received some time ago may be quoted as a case in point. It is as follows: "Dear Sir:—I recently had opportunity to purchase at a bargain one hundred Barred Plymouth Rock pullets, and I did so. Will you please tell me how to successfully manage them?" J. M.

It is hardly necessary to say that in such a case successful results are not likely to follow, and then poultry keeping is at once declared non-profitable.

Another drawback is the practice—frequently on the part of farmers—of keeping more fowls and the hatching of more chickens than can profitably be managed or reared. In report of last year methods of procedure calculated to lead to successful poultry keeping by farmers were given at length. It may be admissible to repeat in this connection a suggestion made in that report to the effect that "farmers should keep no more fowls than they can manage profitably; nor should they attempt to rear a greater number of chickens than circumstances will permit of their bringing to salable age as early in the season as is possible."

Another too common practice on the farms of the country and which retards poultry development--from winter eggs and better quality of flesh standpoints—is the keeping of "scrub" stock. Doubtless the practice is not so general as it was, but it should be abandoned. It has been shown in previous reports that "scrub" poultry are neither as good winter layers as pure bred birds, nor do their chickens make as valuable table fowls. Why have them? It is to be remembered that the cost of feeding a bure bred fowl is no more than that of the nondescript of much less value.

More particularly in regard to the superior quality of poultry there is found, as in the case of winter eggs, a far greater demand than there is supply. The demand is from both home and foreign market. That a superior quality of poultry suited to the most exacting tastes of home or British market can be produced by the farmers of the country has been demonstrated by the number and quality of the chickens grown in our poultry department, and many of which have been killed, dressed and exhibited at farmers' institute meetings, fairs, special meetings and poultry exhibitions throughout the country for many years past.

It has been urged upon our farmers with almost unvarying monotony that not only may they have the derisable chickens of plump and inviting appearance, but also excellent winter laying fowls by their conforming with the following essential conditions, viz:

The proper breeds.

Proper management and feeding of the same.

Proper care of the cnickens from time of hatching to the salable age of 3, 3½ or 4 months.

As to suitable breeds it has been shown that no mistake can be made in choosing one of the following varieties, viz.: Barred or White Plymouth Rocks, White Wyandottes or Buff Orpingtons.

Of these varieties and their duel qualifications as egg and flesh producers and the proper caring of their chickens, so as to have the acceptable market type as early as possible, detailed information is given in succeeding pages.

A practice which seriously retards the quicker and greater production of the superior type of market chickens is that of using a Leghorn, Andalusian or Hamburg male with pure bred or mixed fowls of larger size, presumably with the object of having better layers. While such a course may be permissible from an egg standpoint, it is not advisable for farmers to adopt who have the dual requirements of eggs and beter quality of chickens in view. The result is sure to be chickens of smaller size and much less value than those of the English or American utility breeds. Speaking to the writer on this subject some months ago, the manager of an extensive purchasing poultry firm of Toronto, said: "That the farmers of the country should be strongly urged to abandon the too prevalent custom of using male birds of the Mediterranean breeds for breeding or crossing purposes. We get," he said, "so many small chickens of Leghorn or Andalusian cross that we suffer serious loss. These chickens are sent with others, and we do not like to refuse them. They cannot be shipped to the English dealers, and we cannot put them on the local markets as good quality, so we are glad to take what we can get for them."

WHITE WYANDOTTE PULLET.
First at Toronto, Canada. Owned and Bred by J. S. Martin, Port Dover, Ontario

Occasionally a case is met with where birds of a large "first" or "mixed" cross are kept, and results in winter eggs and large chickens are said to be satisfactory. Inquiry generally elicits the information that all the good points in these fowls are owing to the use of pure bred males of the large breeds, thus conveying the moral that the nearer to the pure breeds the better the birds. In connection with "first crosses" it must not be forgotten that unless the cross is made every year by the introduction of new blood, it is apt to degenerate into the nondescript.

Although not in proportion to the demand there has yet been an increase of production in both winter eggs and better quality of poultry. It may be interesting to note some of the incentives which have led to past, and are likely to lead to still greater future production, viz.:

1. A rapidly increasing demand with continued high price.

2. A better appreciation by farmers of poultry as money makers.

3. Results of tried and successful practical methods given in experimental farm reports for the past seventeen years.

5. Practical instruction at farmers' institute, agricultural or special meetings from different sources.

5. Greater attention to and the developing of more space to poultry matters by agricultural papers.

6. Increased railway facilities whereby the higher price markets may be reached.

A remarkable feature of last summer's poultry and egg trade was the high price of new laid eggs throughout the country, but more particularly in city markets. During the months of July and August last, a period heretofore of lowest prices, new laid eggs were worth from 18 to 20 cents per dozen, the value gradually rising until 25 cents were obtained for them in September and 30 cents in October. Speaking of this unusual state of affairs, the Toronto Telegram, of 19th October last, says: "What the householders of our city want to know is why they have to pay 30 cents per dozen for new laid eggs at this season of the year?" And then follows the statement that one reason may be found in the changed methods of management on the part of many farmers, by which the moulting of their hens in summer is brought about with the view of having them winter layers. And such explanation, so far as it applies, is undoubtedly correct, for as soon as "bringing on the molt" during the summer is generally practiced by farmers, new laid eggs in autumn will surely be in less supply. The molting period, which occurs once every year, is really one of non-production, and it is only wise to have it at the time of year when values are at their lowest. In the poultry department—Experimental Farms Report—for 1896, page 288, full information is given as to how early molting for some years previously had been brought about, and farmers are advised to adopt a similar course. In 1901 report the subject is again referred to.

It is quite likely that the shortage of eggs during the autumn months will be followed by an increased winter egg production, and as a probable consequence a slight lowering of prices during that season. Should this take place the experience of recent years tends to show that any falling off in winter values will be compensated for by increased prices during the molting period. It is quite possible that a more uniform all the year round price for the new laid article may be the ultimate result.

The question is now being asked: "Has experimental research shown any likelihood of lower prices in the near future?"

In reply to this it may at once be said: "Not as long as the demand is greater than the supply, as it is at present."

So far instruction from our poultry department, and which is warranted by experience, has been in the way of showing farmers the best and cheapest ways and means of obtaining eggs and the superior quality of poultry at such seasons of the year as will bring them the highest prices. In this connection observation has shown that there is greater likelihood of a larger and more immediate supply of new laid eggs in winter than of the superior quality of market poultry in later months. For the reason that so many farmers have more time in winter to care for their laying stock (and which attention is absolutely necessary) than they have in the spring and early summer to devote to the hatching and rearing of chickens. This phase of the subject is fully discussed in poultry department report for last year, 1902.

Much experience has been gained since the first report of this department was issued seventeen years ago. Better methods of management and the more effctive application of different rations have made themselves evident from time to time, and have been noted in previous reports. But it has not been found necessary to recommend any other than certain breeds which, from the first, have proved themselves best suited to the requirements of the farmers as winter layers, and the progency of which make quick growing chickens. Rather has experience shown that a more general adoption of such breeds would be followed by still better results. The fowls of Plymouth Rock and Wyandotte breeds have always been advocated as essentially "utility bredes" for farmers, because experimental handling of them for many years has proved them to be such. To-day these breeds are placed by practical authorities at the head of the list of fowls best adapted to the wants of the farmer. Other breeds have come to the fore in recent years, notably the Orpington family of English origin, with its numerous varieties, and each with strong claims as prolific egg layers and flesh makers of acceptable market type. We have also Rhode Island Reds from the eastern states of America, with strong claims from utility standpoints. These breeds are now on their trial. If they have the merit claimed for them they will take rank with the best. If they cannot hold their own in competition with the other standard breeds named no sentimental regard or "bolstering up" will be found sufficient to keep them from a lower rating. It is a matter of congratulation that it has not been found necessary to make any change in the advice given as to the breeds best adapted to the requirements of the farmer. To have recommendd change without reason would have been to confuse rather than benefit.

The importance of strain has made itself apparent in no uncertain manner. Leters received from many points of the country show that much of the disease among poultry in recent years may be traced to inbreeding and the resulting lack of constitutional vitality. This has made itself very evident in the case of turkeys, the mortality among which in all parts of the country is much greater than it should be. In summing up the results of an egg laying contest held in England some months ago, the secretary of a leading poultry association of that country remarks "that the value of strain made itself more evident than ever. It did seem as if strain was as important, if not more so, than breed." Such being the case, farmers who purchase eggs for hatching or stock to breed from should ascertain that both are from strains of noted worth.

POINTERS ON MAKING POULTRY PAY ON THE FARM.

That the country or rural life has many attractions is evidenced time and again by the fact that seemingly at some portion of every man's life, whether his path be laid in the city or otherwise, he turns to agriculture or the raising of crops or animals. Of necessity many of these ventures must be a failure through conditions not being suited, and the parties themselves ill adapted to the work which they seek to carry on. Among the farmers themselves, raised from boyhood up on the soil, many make only a bare existence while others are comparatively well to do, simply from the natural business ability of the varying workers. With the strife and wars now going on in the labor field, many more will be attracted to the rural life as offering them an independent existence apart from the factory bells, the overseers, the section hands, and numberless other heads above them, all seeking to gain an existence for themselves and families.

Naturally the question which arises first is, 'How to make the farm pay." The old farmer's advice was good when he said, "Never spend a dollar." Proceeding on this method, it would not be very difficult to exist once the farm was secured and paid for, but the life would be hardly attractive to our city friends who have been used to spending their weekly wages for the comforts and luxuries of the home. On the farm the cost of living is much less than in the city, and if with this low cost of living we can couple a steady income, the success of the undertaking is assured. Along this line probably poultry keeping offers the most sure method of keeping the cash steadily arriving.

With the farms secured, the cash outlay need not be heavy for a venture at the poulty industry. The successful plants are not usually built up with large initial investments. The first question to be settled would be, What of the many methods advocated is the one best adapted to the particular farm or owner in question? This, of course, is for each one to determine for himself or herself. The intensive culture usually carried on in the city or suburban town back lot is very well in its place, but where birds are to be handled in larger numbers, and where labor enters more into the problem or the profitable end of the scheme, as on a farm, this does not work out as well. The more scattered or colony plan of housing seems to relieve the path of many stumbling blocks which beset the way of the long house and the large number of birds per acre which it necessarily carries.

The colony house itself in its initial cost is little, if any, more, and as an asset certainly a number of hundred dollars invested in small or portable poultry houses would be much more quickly and advantageously realized upon than an equal sum invested in one or two long houses that at best can hardly be sold for more than enough to pay for the cost of moving should we wish to venture into other fields after having made an attempt at poultry. The colony house quite open to the weather with very little attempt at warmth, costing less to build, and seemingly productive of better results the more it is tested, certainly seems to fill a much needed want.

Through a few months of the winter it may possibly entail a little more labor for the care of the birds with this method of housing, but at the season of the year when it takes the most time, there is usually the least else doing on the farm. What the farmer most dreads is to have the endless detail and care come in the hot weather when the pressure of other crops demands all of his time and attention, with the result that the chickens usually have to shift for themselves. This is one of the colony house's strongest points. Here is just where the poultry can shift for themselves with very little care, and still go on producing eggs and poultry, thus keeping the income steady.

The small colony house, whether it be portable or otherwise, has many advantages over the other method of housing. In the spring, an indoor brooder can be started in one of these houses in February or March, and run until the chickens are large enough to wean, at which time the brooder can be removed and the chickens continue to occupy the same house, the cockerels being removed at the appropriate time, and the pullets continuing right through until the following winter, when it becomes their home and the laying house, with the least amount of moving and other disturbances that always checks the growth to a greater or less extent. It is useful as a cockerel house, and for a small breeding pen; can be moved easily from one part of the farm to another, thus allowing the rotation of crops which is so beneficial to the soil, and of necessity must have like effect on the owner's pocketbook.

At the writers farm we have found that we could compound a mash of dry grain and meat food that can be fed in a hopper, using hoppers which need be filled only once each week, thus necessitating only two trips per day around the farm—one to carry water in the morning, the other to carry a feed of hard grain, and gather eggs at night. Mashes slightly varied from the one mentioned can be used for growing chicks, and with a simple addition of a hopper of hard grain and beef scraps we have a complete ration which the chicks balance to suit themselves, and grow and thrive with practically no attention aside from watering and housing at night. This housing at night is simply a closing of the colony house doors or roosting rooms.

To get our proposition on a business basis, we must eliminate every possible element of chance, and nail down all the sure things that present themselves. Poultry in large flocks seldom, if ever, thrive. Occasionally we find a man who has devoted a life's attention to this, and who gets results, working out the details along lines with which he is thoroughly familiar, but let a new man try this same method and it is almust sure to be a failure. It seemingly is not the nature of fowls to congregate in large numbers. On the farm in lots of a dozen to fifty with everything run 'wide open," no fences to stop them, and every condition almost as near nature as the birds of the air themselves, disease is seldom found. Results even here may not be all that we could ask for, but certainly some conditions here may be successfully copied that will assist us in keeping our flocks in a healthy condition.

Crowded quarters almost without exception mean trouble, whether it be newly hatched chicks or chickens just weaning from the brooder, or commencing to roost in the small coops so often provided for them. Colds and roup and their attendant evils are almost always the result of either ill ventilated or crowded quarters. There is ample money in the business to pay for the investment of the best utensils, houses, feeds, and stock, if the results are forthcoming.

If the farmers could buy milch cows during the fall of the year, milk them through a full year's time, and then turn them over to the butcher without over twenty-five per cent shrinkage in value, and during that time sell enough milk to pay for all the grain and fodder consumed, and enough profit to cover the initial outlay, where would the barns stop building in Massachusetts? That this is possible with poultry, not only possible but easily within the grasp of poultrymen understanding their business, is well known. Pullets bought during the fall months, carried a full year, properly fed and housed, will more than lay eggs enough to pay for the feed and the price paid for them, leaving the owners at the end of the season with the old birds to be sold at very close to the figures originally paid the year before.

Of course where these same birds are raised by the owners the cost is much less. With the prices for the past few years that have been paid for fat cockerels in our local markets, they would usually pay for the feed consumed by both themselves and the pullets in the same flocks, leaving the cost of the females in the fall represented only by the labor of the care of the chickens through the summer. Not everyone can produce these results,but it is up to us all to get as near to them as we can, and to carefully study as we go along the conditions necessary to produce them.

For a paying crop we are confident that poultry will offer many advantages over any other branch of the farm life. The milkman producing milk for the contractors throughout New England hardly realizes a new dollar for an old one, but his excuse is that it is the only way that "he can keep the farm up," and even this if he should figure up the value of his hay and his labor, we think the balance would be on the wrong side of the ledger nine years out of ten. The shrinkage in value of milch cows as handled on the farm will almost always amount to thirty-three per cent per year. This is seldom taken into consideration by the average milk producer. Market gardeners secure splendid crops and prices for them when the lucky turn of fortune's wheel happens to land them at the right pocket, but here the labor problem is getting more serious each succeeding year, and the sure things are not as near together as they were in the past.

Poultry business is not a bonanza or any chance to get rich quick, but it offers an attractive, fascinating field for those who are in love with the study of nature and with outdoor life. Once the conditions necessary to success are mastered, results are certain and productive enough of profits to satisfy any reasonable person, but to master these conditions means careful study and much painstaking observation. With the colony house previously referred to, the less intensive methods carried out, raising and maintaining the birds in smaller lots, fully fifty per cent of the dangers are eliminated, and the success so much more easily obtained.—P. THE PRACTICAL BREEDS.

Editor American Fancier:

I and doubtless many others of your readers, have read the articles in your paper, in which it is claimed the American breeds are the only practical breeds, with much astonishment. One writer seems to hold the opinion that they are the greatest utility fowls yet discovered. I have not seen any letters, however, stating in what way they excel the other breeds, and after keeping several of them myself, I have up to the present not found out. Their superiority must be so self evident as not to require mentioning. What does it consist of? Will not these writers enlighten us? I am just about to do away with the only American breed I now keep, and wonder how, keeping them at the same time as several European breeds, I can have failed to notice their marked superiority. When these writers explain,all your readers who now keep other fowls, will doubtless get rid of them, and overlooking the barndoor appearance of most of the American class when alive and their thick skin and coarse flesh when dead, will start keeping them. Those of us who are keeping Minorcas because they lay such large white eggs, or Dorkings on account of their wonderful table qualities, would like to hear which of the Americans excel them on these points, and if we really have in the American class, fowls so much superior to all others, how mistaken must those people be who persist in importing fowls from other countries! The American people go in only for the practical breeds, I shall be told, and their own fowls in this point excel all others; then what about the tremendous gain made by the recently introduced Buff Orpington? Do the laying competitions and experiment stations really prove any superiority in the American class? Do not they prove, taking all the evidence together, that a breed very little kept by the American people and not even much kept in England lays uniformly well. I mean the Andalusians. I do not keep them and therefore have no reason to puff them up, but I notice that though they seem to break no records, they always do well. This is of much more importance than that one pen broke the record and two or three pens did badly. American people do not keep them on account of their blue legs, but is this a practical reason? The American class are so hardy, but does not everybody know what has kept fowls for many years, that hardiness is much more in strain than in breed. It depends more on the fowls having been raised in a common sense way, than on their belonging to any special breed. I have had pens of the so-called delicate breeds that were quite hardy and also flocks of Americans that proved delicate. If the American class are so markedly superior, what accounts for the increasing gain made by European fowls in America, as they become better known here? As it applies to several breeds and has gone on for several years, it can hardly be called a boom. When I kept Creve Coeurs, and now also with Dorkings, I notice that Americans eating them,remark they have never eaten such chickens before and ask at once what breed they are, and often seem surprised to hear they are European fowls. Many of these people are strangers to me and have come into my ranch for a meal whilst traveling over the range, and as I shall most likely not see them again, I suppose they do not say it merely from politeness. Yet these people must all have eaten chickens of the American breeds On one occasion when I sent six (I thing) fowls to be cooked by an American, one bein g a Dorking, two Indian Games and three Americans, she asked me what sort of a fowl the white legged one was, (they were plucked when she got them) as she thought it the finest chicken she had ever cooked, and this lady (it will be painful for the advocates of the American cuasses to hear) kept Barred Rocks.She kept Rocks and yet thought this white legged Dorking the finest table fowl she ever cooked, and it was by no means a specially fine Dorking; and her reason for thinking it so fine, was that the flesh was so much more tender and cooked through so much quicker than the American breeds she was used to cooking. My Chinese cooks also have often remarked to me on the great superiority of the European table fowls and asked me how there could be such a difference, between one breed and another. I hear of immense entries at shows in the American classes, but we must take into account that of American poultry keepers for one who knows anything of the European breeds, a hundred know the American. When the European breeds become better known will the American be so much kept as at present? I rather doubt it. All or nearly all of the Americans keeping European breeds have kept American fowls and seem to think that in practical qualities the European breeds they are now keeping are ahead of the Americans. For in America you would, I believe, find few fanciers, that is few people who kept one breed because they admired it, whilst thinking another breed had better utility qualities, have said little about the color of the legs of the breeds, the modern dentist not supplying the American public with teeth calculated to eat the shanks of fowls. I cannot see that their color makes any difference; also it is possible to cut them off before cooking, if you don't like their looks.

Now let us hear how the American class surpasses the Orpingtons as all-round fowls, the Dorkings as table fowls, Andalusians or Minorcas as layers of large white eggs, Brahmas as layers of large brown eggs, Leghorns as to quantity of egg laid, or Indian Games as to fullness of breast. As regards winter laying, I believe nearly any breed will prove good winter layers if of the right age and properly housed and fed. Broilers, also, have a good deal to do with feeding; almost any breed are good eating up to three months old, and the chickens which made the quickest growth of any I have ever kept were neither Wyandottes nor Rocks, but Colored Dorkings.

The mere reiteration of the superiority of the American breeds, without stating in what it consists, is not convincing. C. CLIFTON.

A NOVELTY IN POULTRY JUDGING

The decimal score card system used last December by the Springfield Poultry and Pet Stock association proved so satisfactory to all concerned that it will be used again at the forthcoming show, December 13-16. The only serious fault found with the system last year was the fact that a few of the score cards were lost or stolen, so that the owner of the bird could not tell in what sections the cuts were made. Secretary Graves kept a complete record of the total score and was able to give the score of each bird. To obviate this trouble the Association has designed and will use a duplicate score card. By this means the secretary will keep a duplicate of each card and will be able after the show to furnish the owner of any bird a complete record of the score with the cuts in each section.

The decimal score card designed by I. K. Felch will be used because of its simplicity and the ease with which it can be applied to each and every specimen, variety and breed. The Association has engaged City Hall for the show, which is the largest hall in Springfield. The show will again be cooped with Empire coops and most of the judges who officiated at the last show will be present this year. Ten judges in all have been engaged, as follows: C. A. Ballou, W. H. Card, G. P. Coffin, M. F. Delano, I. K. Felch, G. H. Northup, T. E. Orr, A. F. Peirce, W. J. Stanton, J. F. Watson.

In addition to the very liberal cash prizes on all breeds and varieties the Association will again offer an attractive lot of silver cups as special premiums. There will also be many other valuable and attractive special prizes, which may be found printed in the prize list that can be obtained of Sec. W. R. Graves, Springfield, Mass.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1904.

Poultry is the title of a new paper to be published at Freeport, Ill. Mr. Miller Purvis is the editor, and we extend to him the glad hand, and trust he will make a success of the new venture. Mr. Purvis is a square, honorable man, a very good writer of vigorous English and knows what he is writing about.

"Truthful Jones" tells us that the next secretary of the American Poultry Association will be a western man.

We wish to assure Bro. Bates, of the excellent American Poultry Journal, that there will be held on the banks of the Cayadutta creek in a city called Johnstown, a show in 1905 or '06. It will be run on the square and the level, and all visiting fanciers and editors will be received in due and ancient form. The corner stone is being cut and will be laid shortly.

A show will be held at Charleston, S. C., November 21 to 26. Dr. S. T. Lea, one of the best judges in the country, a southern fancier and gentleman, will place the ribbons.

We asked George who will coop the St. Louis show and George didn't know.

We are glad to learn that Signor Burgotti will handle the Italian fowls at St. Louis. Handsome George is at home in the Leghorn alley.

"Billy" Greenman, secretary of the Cortland fair and show, sent the poultry awards by way of his latest automobile, and they are still touring the country. That is why they have not appeared in The American Fancier.

We were glad to meet the Hon. David A. Nichols of Shelton, Conn. at the Danbury Fair last week. He was one of the poultry judges. That is not all, he was one of the men that is respected in his own state, in fact a man that has been honored with public positions of great import because of his well-known fairness in dealing with his fellow men. The fact that the poultry fanciers of his own state stand by "Honest Old Dave" is the most conclusive and eloquent testimonial of his worth and ability.

We are informed that Shelton, Conn., will probably be the spot where some strictly specialty shows will be held in the future. It is contemplated to hold one year an exclusive Plymouth Rock show and the following year an exclusive Wyandotte show. Should this prove successful, annual shows alternating with these two American breeds will be the rule.

Amsterdam, New York, will have a show this winter, a club having been organized there for the purpose. As Johnstown and Schenectady are not to hold shows this season the Carpet City will fill the gap nicely.

Lakenvelders were out in large numbers at Danbury last week and attracted considerable attention. This new fowl seems to have striking qualities that are bound to make it popular with many.

The latest information regarding poultry entries at St. Louis shows Canada to be in the lead, with Missouri next. One-fourth of the total entries come from these two sections.

Hagerstown is on this week and as big as ever. Shows may come and go, but John L. Cost's show will go for years in the same popular and impressive manner, as long as he is the trusty pilot. And why not? John L. Cost is a fancier and a man who stands by his friends, no matter what storms may brew, or what enemies may say. Loyalty is his watchword, and his friends, and they are legion, appreciate it.

"Uncle Mike" Boyer in October American Poultry Journal says: "Winter is at hand." Move up this way, Uncle; we have both hands full of winter all the time. Still we grow a few chickens that give the other fellows a chill even at a hot show.

The Boston Poultry Show will be held at Mechanics' Hall, January 16 to 21, 1905. Mr. S. H. Roberts is the secretary, his address being, Box 800, Pawtucket, R. I. Full particulars regarding this great show will be made public shortly.

The decimal scorecard will be used at the Springfield (Mass.) Show this year. Last year Mr. T. E. Orr declined to use this card and stood up for the A. P. A. card. As he is to judge at Springfield again, will he repeat his performance of last year? If he does, there will be two sets of scorecards at Springfield.

We are led to make the above remarks after reading the notice under caption, "A Novelty in Poultry Judging," which appears in another column of this issue and which is the official announcement of the Springfield Show. Should both cards be used the caption would seem to have been born most felicitously.

Mr. William V. Russ, proprietor of the Excelsior Wire and Supply company, 26 Vesey street, New York city, has purchased the entire stock of Toulouse Geese owned bp Mr. Chas. F. Newman, of Staten Island, New York, which comprises the very best exhibition and breeding birds. Anyone interested in this variety of geese, and good specimens are rare, will do well to correspond with Col. Russ. Mr. Newman has retired from the business on account of ill-health.

Lest we forget. In reading over one of our exchanges we find fulsome praise bestowed on two Barred Rock breeders and the conclusion arrived at indicates that there are only two breeders of Barred Rocks in the United States. We had an idea there were several more.

An old line fancier writes: "What is this strange disease now rampant in this country whereby we are inflicted with the more or less handsome pictures and a eulogistic life of a lot of more or less handsome and sometimes less able pillars of the poultry business, in our poultry journals? It is rather amusing to those who are acquainted with the standing and reputation of some of these pushers for notoriety, but what is the germ that produces this epidemic?" The germ developed is due to commercialism; the disease itself is "Warts on the Coco," to use a Gotham phrase.

TRENTON NOTES.

Eight hundred entries sent back. That's going some.

More fanciers were there, day for day, than at the average winter show.

Only one of the silver cups was christened, and nobody knew what was in it. Someone said it looked like vegetable soup.

Wonder how it feels to take a girl to the theatre and then see her husband (that you don't know) standing at the door?

All the boys were talking Herald Square and several donated specials.

Allentown sent down a fine lot of birds and did well. Some of the boys came with them and all went away singing the praises of Trenton.

Newark was represented by a fine lot of birds and fanciers. But then, Newark and Trenton always have pulled together of late years.

President Duffy and wife, of the Fanciers' Association were welcome visitors.

Wonder where the health inspector was all week?

And she said "Pop" delivered the goods.

Wonder what made Gladney shy from Pop's "daughter?"

No. 8 was popular with all. And good fellows they were, too.

There was a big business done and at good prices. Just suited the boys.

Thirty-four Pekin Ducks! And when the ribbons were up, Hodges got chesty.

We hear Gladney will be on deck again at Herald Square with some of his own birds. Couldn't stand it any longer.

And Fox had a business engagement at 9:30. But the boss was on.

The fellows for St. Louis were kept busy telling all about it.

Everyone was glad to hear Newark was again in the field, and all promised their little help.

Rhode Island Red alley was quite an attraction, even among the gentle sex.

Judging done and ribbons up in 5½ hours. Pretty good for a country, fair, eh!

How they did go after the fellow who made the killing in Barred Rock alley.

Talk about learning the A, B, C's of the show business! Ask Applegate.

Thirty-two birds competed for the handsome Ivory Soap special. Was won by a Wyandotte cockerel with a White Rock hen for runner up .

The Deacon started to get serious and then someone got jealous.

The Parson got next right away quick.

Something to think over. Eight judges for poultry alone, all old timers. St. Louis has twenty?

Better luck next time, Charley. A hard hit, but go after them.

Some of the old timers were glad to even get a place .

Buff and White Rock Alley was a warm place. And by the by, the whites were of a quality seldom seen at any show.

No more until Herald Square, so be good. MONITOR.

Regardless of all aches, pains or ills.

Was just thinking 'tother day and my thoughts made me think.

Suppose the U. S. mail could talk, wouldn't it change many names on the breeders' column of the entry blanks of that show soon to be held in St. Louey?

Again says I to myself, "You're a lobster."

FROM 20 INCUBATORS TO 20,000

That is the unbeaten record of the Prairie State Incubators: 20 sold first year—20,000 sold in 1903. Prominent duck and poultry breeders favor the Prairie State because it's always reliable and gives high per cent hatches. The United States Government uses them exclusively. Be sure to send for our free, illustrated catalog full of pictures—among them photos of incubator rooms where 20 to 80 of our machines are in active operation.

PRAIRIE STATE INCUBATOR CO., Lock Box 38, Homer City, Pa.

Hang it all, don't I know it. Any one who tries to be good is a lobster for sure. Be careful, "that's all."

I will give to the first person sending in the correct gues, 1 year's subscription to the American Fancier. Now is your chance!

Here goes! Why is Roundabout Robby like Royal Baking Powder?

I'll make it 5 correct guesses and 5 yearly subs. Step up lively.

Did you see the program the entertainment committee put out? Gee,but wouldn't it jar you?

Who ever heard tell of Link Orr making a speech. He is better on hunting for votes for president.

Say, Drev., wish you would ask Georgie Bates to use either thicker paper or thinner ink in the American.

The copy you sent me was a corker. Wake up, "Batesie," old man, and send out a better book.

Notice your lobster says you are tender-hearted. Drev. must have no heart at all to print all my stuff.

How my eyes do stick out. $9,000 for that com. of 3 to feel. Be sure you use the right kind of mucilage on your fingers. A sponge won't answer.

Rulifson of Rochester is quite a gay duck with the pen. Good, boy, put them up again.

Those St. Louis judges! Well, well, dear, sweet-faced Delano is on the list.

Dr. H. F. Ballard of Chenoa, Ill., in Sept. issue of Fanciers' Gazette (just received Oct. 8) winds up a very interesting article about West Point, a boy and a hornet's nest.

Glad the Dr. thinks I can protect myself fairly well. You're all right, Dr. I do wish you would give Robby a call, as he needs some tonic of some kind.

The following puts me in mind of Robby:

He thought he thought great thoughts and thought
No other ever thought a thought
If others ever thought he thought,
They thought he thought he thought he thought.
—Ex.

That's right, Shureman. Blow your horn if you don't sell a shad.

About all there is of life and living is to be in harmony with those we have to live with or do business with

"Many will come but few will be chosen." Thus runs an old proverb of years and years ago. Verily I say unto you, very few have been chosen to judge St. Louis.

But, oh, my! how many came.

To those who refused to sign their pedigree for judging, I congratulate you.

To those who did sign and were turned down, it serves you right.

To those who were chosen, all I have to say is, May God bless you and protect you.

You are supposed to be the cream and to you alone the poultry industry now looks. If you make a false step, beware.

The more I think of it, the more I am sorry my name appears in disguise.

The A. P. A. will have an adjourned meeting. Wonder why?

Suppose to bunco a lot of ducks to cough up $10 perhaps, or $2, to have their name put in the list for one year.

They must have money to replank the bridge and cover the revision of graft?

At the same time, these adjourned meetings are a great help an benefit, both to the association and breeders.

It enables more to join and discuss the business and will make it more unwieldy for the politician to get his work in.

If Robby really wants to do the most harm to those who have the A. P. A. by the throat, he ought to get every chicken crank in America to join.

Still I must not forget the boy and the hornets' nest. Eh, Dr.?

I am going to St. Louis and will load up with lots of hot ones. If Drev. would only take a vacation and his foreman get full. Gee, but what a lot of hot stuff I could put in!

Looks as if Frankie Peck is going in the premium business.

Say, Drev., how can McGrew keep track of that $9,000 and he 2,000 miles away?

In traveling through this world I notice most all our great chicken writers are not chicken raisers. Funny, ain't it?

Chief Mills: I wish, Supt., you would promulgate an order that all judges must have a red, white and blue duster.

Supt. Orr: Your order will be attended to, most noble chief.

Chief Mills: And, by the way, the notion has just struck me that every exhibitor must use shipping coops of same size and color. Give directions to that effect.

Supt. Orr: But, my noble chief, it will be imp——

Chief Mills: Go and do as I command. It is not for you to think. The judges have been selected for their ability, honesty and integrity, but perchance one has slipped in that has not all these qualifications, we must protect and safeguard our show. I have spoken.

Chief Mills: Another thing. I had almost forgotten to engage a Pinkerton detective for every judge and admonish the detective to watch the villain closely, and the first false move, strike him to the ground. Let no one escape.

Exunt Supt. Orr with these thoughts: A centennial comes once in a hundred years, and by the time the next one comes I will be judging chickens in another world. And with a step like one with unstrung nerves, Thomas wends his way to the pike and is soon lost to the world. "Lest we forget."

Well, my dearly beloved brethren, before departing would like to hear from Sister Hunter about past experience. In a voice that sounds like the filing of a fine tooth comb, I heard the text. "In Depew." "I have struck it rich."

Say, Drev., 1 will have to drop out for a while. Matilda's mother is on a visit, so I have to go down to the farm and smoke. Like Kipling I say: "A woman is only a woman, but a good cigar is a smoke." Meet me at the A. P. A. meeting, Robby dear, with love.

WEST POINT.

POINTS ON GETTING FOWLS THROUGH THE MOLT.

The process of molting is a subject that interests, or at least should interest, every owner of fowls, whether he be the owner of 10, 100 or 1,00. Nature provides that all fowls shall change their plumage at least once a year. During this time very few birds will lay, and should a small per cent. of them do so it will only be in a limited way.

The molting period of a fowl's life is a very severe strain on it, and it is the breeder's duty to look well to the welfare of the fowls during that period. Because of its annual occurrence we often cease to regard the molt as an important epoch in a fowl's life, but nevertheless it is an event that means much to the careful breeders, and he who is wise will give the subject due consideration.

To throw off the old, dull, faded plumage requires of a fowl an enormous amount of strength and energy, and with fowls that are kept in what we must remember is for the most part unnatural conditions, the necessary elements of food must be provided that will enable the fowl to build up the new coat of feathers without too much of a drain upon the system.

In preparing fowls for the molting season, the first thing to be done is to separate the males from the females, and if at all possible they should be kept apart until the next breeding season. The male will be a much better breeder if kept by himself until the pens are mated next spring. One reason why so many aged cocks fail to properly fertilize the eggs is because they are "bred out" by being kept constantly with females.

The next thing on the program is to thoroughly examine the fowls for lice, as usually if there is a louse on them they will increase and weaken the birds just when the molting period requires all their vitality to produce their new suit of clothes. The perches should be built so that they do not touch the walls at any place, for the red mites or lice that do the most harm do not stay on the fowls during the day; they hide in cracks and crannies during the day and come out at night to seek their prey, and if the perches do not touch the walls they will have less opportunity to hide. The red mites or lice may be kept away by simply wetting the perches once a week with kerosene oil, as this is instantly fatal to them. The large gray louse that is sometimes found on poultry lives all the time on the fowl, and must be killed by dusting the fowl with insect powder. This must be repeated at intervals of three days for two or three weeks, in order to kill the lice that are hatched from the eggs that are always among the feathers when lice are present.

After the lice question is settled,the feed and general care is the all important subject. I have no exact formula to prescribe for feeding moulting fowls. During the process the fowls need more animal food than at any other time, and we would advise you to keep animal meal or ground beef scraps constantly before the fowls. Grit, oyster shells, granulated bone, and charcoal should be accessible to the fowls at all times. Table scraps and milk in any form make variety. Green food should be supplied every day, and in abundance, for in warm weather the fowls relish fresh vegetables and grass above almost anything else that could be given them, and no food is so conducive to their health, and keeps them in such good condition.

We would advise you to not feed the fowls mashes during the moulting period, as it tends to a looseness of the bowels, and this is not healthful. But if you do feed mashes do not under any circumstances mix a lot of cayenne pepper or condition powder with them, as they do a great deal more harm than good. Bear in mind that a healthy fowl requires nothing but good, wholesome food. If the fowls do not thrive, te best thing to do is to reduce the food, and give a variety.

Cracked corn, oats and wheat make the ideal summer feeds. Our bill of fare is equal parts of coarse cracked corn and oats in the morning,and either wheat or equal parts of wheat and oats in the evening. Sunflower seeds are good to help loosen the feathers, but should be fed sparingly, else they will make the fowls moult too quickly.

The runs should be spaded up fresh, and, if possible, a portion of the earth kept well moistened through the warm weather. The fowls will often wallow in it all day long through the arm weather, and at no time in the year will they enjoy the bath as they will in the next sixty days.

Above all things, do not let the fowls suffer from the heat. If the pens do not contain shade trees, shade should be provided in some other way. Fowls cannot molt quickly and properly if compelled to suffer from heat.—R. B. Sando, Potsdam, O., in Farm-Poultry.

A HOUSE WITH CURTAIN FRONT.

One of my poultry houses has attracted considerable attention, it being unlike any other in this vicinity. In many respects it is similar to ordinary houses built for the occupancy of poultry. It has a shed roof, is seven feet high in front, five feet high at the back; is 15 feet wide, 100 feet long, faces the south and, allowing 5 feet of floor space per hen, will accommodate 300 fowls. No special effort was made to make any part of the building warm, except the back, which was covered with one-inch boards running up and down, a coat of coal tar put on, then a covering of single-ply tar felt paper, and siding over this. The nests are two feet from the floor beneath a platform under the roosts, which run lengthwise at the back of the building. The floor is tight, being made of matched boards, and the platform under the roosts is also made of matched stuff, so that no draft of air can reach the fowls from beneath. The roof is covered with three-ply tar felt roofing, and is consequently air-tight.

The unique feature of this house is that of its curtain front. These curtains are made of muslin dipped in linseed oil, and are tacked to frames which are hinged at the top. These are used in place of windows, are lifted up and hooked to the rafters during pleasant weather in winter and are usually kept open both day and night during the entire summer. On extremely cold days only part of the front is opened, but very seldom indeed is the weather such even in this climate that at some time during the day the entire curtain front is not thrown open and the invigorating, life-giving sunshine invited to come in. In a building, whether it be dwelling house, cow stable, pig sty or hennery, where ventilation is perfect, and the sun's rays have ready access, harmful germs and microbes will be strangers.

As a further protection to the fowls against cold and storms without, other curtains are let down from the roof to the platform, thus enclosing the fowls at night in a small room, which soon becomes comfortably warm by the heat emanating from their bodies. This curtain is only let down when the nights are cold, and when it is closed, whether the winds blow high or blow low, behind the scene life goes merrily on.

It will be observed that the fowls in this building, even in the coldest weather, have little protection, except shelter from the wind. In a house constructed on this plan, I consider activity one of the essential requisites to success in poultry culture. To this end, nothing is omitted that will cause the hens to hustle; in other words, they are expected to get a "gait on." The roosts are on hinges, and are turned back in the morning, so that no fowls are able to sit on them during the day. The entire floor space from end to end and from front to rear is used for a scratching shed. It is covered with straw or some other litter to the depth of about four inches, and in this the morning feed is given, scattered as one would sow grain in the field. It consist of small grains only—wheat, cracked corn or buckwheat, with an occasional mess of oats. An effort is made to keep this straw clean and perfectly dry. If at any time it becomes foul or from any cause damp, it is removed and new litter substituted. The front curtains must be let down during a storm from the south.

At noon a hot mash is fed in troughs—not enough fully to satisfy, injure the fowls and damage the litter but just what they will eat up clean in a few minutes. To give this feed in proper quantities requires judgment and familiarity with the needs of the fowls. If too much be given, their search for grain in the litter will cease and laziness result.

At about 3 o'clock comes the feed of fresh-cut meat and bone, all they will eat daily, carcasses of cows, horses, sheep, goats, mules and asses—any animal not dead by disease—thrown in the mill and ground up bodily, bones, muscle, hoofs and tallow, all go to make up this important ration. One reason why this feed is given at the time named is that earlier in the day many hens are upon the nests, and thus would be deprived of this food so necessary to prolific winter laying.

At night corn is given, all they will eat. The last drink (by the hens) taken, the fountains emptied, the front curtains buttoned down, the roosts dropped, the eggs gathered, the roost curtains adjusted, good night said and the sexton goes home with the key on his shoulder.

Last year, from our flock of about 425 hens, eggs to the value of $960 were sold. This includes only moneys received from eggs sold at market prices, the bulk of them being shipped to New York.

I have other poultry houses than the one described, but this one is cheap and meets the requirements for which it was designed. The quite prevalent opinion that poultry houses should be made very tight and warm is incorrect. More eggs may be laid for a short time in winter if the hens are warmly housed both day and night, but for continuous, profitable laying and good healthy fowls, let them be sheltered from the wind, good care given, exercise made compulsory, a room at night in which the combs will not be frosted, and the results will be more satisfactory. Pure air and sunshine are nature's efficient remedies for many of the ills of the animal kingdom. They ever seek admission into our buildings, but too often, alas, too often, they find the doors closed against them.—J. D. Clegg in The Country Gentleman.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

The Orpingtonated advice to the American Fancier which appeared in a recent number of one of our most reliable poultry journals, is read with regret, so many of our brainiest Americans, who have developed anglomania, have gone from among us. Astor, Mackey and Croker, think what they might have accomplished in the chicken business had it not been for anglomania, but to meet with such alarming symptoms in an editor whose name has been the synonym for Reliable is enough to make every American poultryman broody.

It would look less serious if our esteemed editor had shown only those usual ephemeral symptoms of the disease which are commonly met with among recently returned tourists, such as sport plaid trousers and a lofty content for things American. Had he said that the Plymouth Rock was not the only pebble on the beach or that Rhode Island Red wasn't a tint compared with British scarlet, we would think that after a proper period of incubation he would come out of it, but when he finds that not only American but every other foreign invention except his richly cooked Orpingtonated British idea is a misfit, it looks bad.

Professionally, as a physician, I should advise a little more travel—a trip to the continent. Take a turn in Holland and learn something about the beauties of the Dutch language and Lakenvelders. Then study French. Faverolles is a good word to start with. He may not "catch on" at first, but it has staying qualities and gets there when he learns what it means. I would suggest a liberal investigation of "unheardofs," which, from a British point of view, are like jokes: they require labels, or must be looked up in the catalogue.

This itinerary, following a little preparatory treatment by American specialists at St. Louis, ought to do much to restore his normal cosmopolitan equilibrium.

Eggs.—Receipts for week, 53,517. Same conditions prevail as mentioned in last week's report. Strictly fancy nearby is hard to get, but the average fresh egg is plentiful and finds but an indifferent demand. We quote: Fancy selected, nearby white, 20 to 30c per dozen. Mixed quality and brown eggs, 25 to 27c.; poor to fair, 21 to 22c.; fancy western candled, 21½ to 22c.; fair to good, 18 to 19c; Kentucky and Tennessee, 16 to 18c.; refrigerator, 17 to 19c.

Live Poultry.—Receipts, 36 cars. Fowls and chickens, 12c per lb; turkeys, 12c.; ducks, 60 to 80c. per pair; geese, $1.00 to $1.25 per pair; pigeons, 15c per pair.

Dressed Poultry.—Receipts about 84,000 pkgs. Arrivals have been light, but no improvement in quality. Phila. chickens, 7 to 8 lbs. and over, per pair, 23 to 24c. per lb; mixed sizes, 17 to 19c.; Penna. fancy, large, 17 to 18c.; State and Penna., mixed sizes, 13 to 14c.; under 5 lbs. to pair, 11½ to 12c.; fancy dry picked western, large roasters or small broilers, 14½ to 15c; Ohio and Michigan, scalded, 13½c; other western, 12½ to 13c.; southern, 11½c; fowls, 13½c; turkeys, spring, 18 to 25c; geese, eastern, white spring, 16 to 17c; old, 15 to 16c.; ducks, spring, 16 to 17c; dark, 14 to 15c.; quite squabs, $2.50 to $2.75 per pair; dark, $1.50 to $1.75.

New York Daily says: At the regular meeting of the Actors' Union Sunday night the Association of Egg Candlers was organized, under the name of the Egg Inspectors' Union No. 11,254 of the American Federation of Labor.

On motion of the Actors' President, it was voted no actor while handing out tragedy on the boards, would be subject to a close acquaintance with the stale egg, so far as it lay in the power of the new union to prevent it.

It is a notoricus fact that the finest grade of nearby eggs come to market in the meanest looking crates, either old, knocked to pieces returnable crates, or second hand gift crates, which we fellows down here keep sending to the country, until the bottom drops out or the express company throws them in the North River.

On opening a crate of western eggs I was greatly impressed with the method of packing, each of the four spaces on each side between the crate and the filling, was packed with a fine grade of excelsior, making it impossible for an egg to shift with the customary rough handling.

Recent observations lead me to ask, does the moulting period affect the color of the yolk of the few eggs deposited at this period?

My attention to the universal pale color of the yolks just now has been called to the subject by several whom I would call good judges of what constitutes a perfect table egg.

The Leghorn egg, for which at present the New York epicure is stripping large slices from his roll, at its best is just now it is almost colorless, and if only a fair looker when broken, but just now it is almost colorless, and of little in appearance to tempt the appetite.

There is no equal in beauty to the clear white shells of the Leghorns when served on the table, but when broken how disappointing.

Breeders who appreciate this fact will try to overcome it. I am of the opinion the greater amount of green food laying hens are supplied with in connection with yellow corn, the richer the yolk. At this season of the year there is nothing cheaper or easier to get than green food; for this reason be liberal with it.

I have occasionally seen during the summer months, marks of Leghorn eggs presumably from hens having free range, so rich in color that before a candle the yolk would stand out in bold relief, like a framed picture, when viewed through the transparent shell.

I would rather be the losing member in a crap game, than be obliged to handle some marks of eggs I have seen. Small, dirty, cloudy before the candle, and at intervals more or less frequently—rotten.

Nothing but laziness and stupidity allows an egg, a thing so easily prepared for the market properly, to reach this stage. Promptness in gathering and promptness in shipping tells the whole story. How easy to provide suitable nests—much easier than to get the hens to patronize them just now with egg intent—and how much easier to pack and ship while the bloom of freshness is still upon them.

Sorry to have disturbed the tranquility of Seneca Falls, by those Orpington observations. I did not premeditate murder; merely stumbled on the bunch of Orpington chicks and looked them over.

On Saturday I had further proof that my contention regarding the chicks was right. Two chicks, a Brahma and a Plymouth Rock, hung side by side in the market. The Brahma looked the larger, but on the scales weighed one-half pound less. A pair of long legs and a long neck doesn't show the weight when thrown on the scales. From the general appearance and condition it seems most certain the two chicks were from the same brood, both growthy and both typical of their breed; but one had put its growth on the body, and the other at the extremities; one dressed one-half pound more. A hundred would have dressed fifty pounds more and sold for eight dollars more in the market.

THE STORY OF A POULTRY FARM.

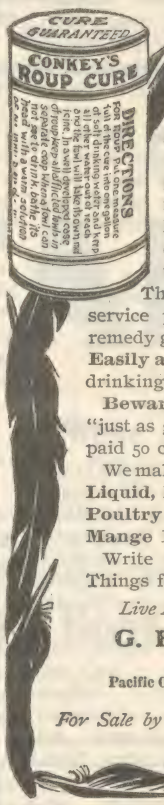
The Struggles, Trials, Experiences and Successes of a Practical Poultry Fancier.

By W. H. Card.

Finance, system, feed and care all have their places in this problem of hen culture, as brought out by my experiences, but I soon discovered the need of grit and sand, or, properly speaking, courage, to keep going when things looked the darkest, and at such times a mixture of philosophy and phiggering taken slowly between meals would work wonders.

"It's a long lane that has no turn," and the cyclometer showed only 1½ miles to market.

"Everything looks alive in the dark, and it's easy figuring when looking on the bright side." When a poultryman loses one hen out of a flock of ten, he is not much disturbed, but ten out of a flock of 100 almost gives him nervous prostration, till a little P. and P. shows him the losses are no greater in one case than the other.



And a little more figuring shows that the losses in large flocks are not as great in proportion as in small flocks, if proper and regular care and feed is given, and then again P. and P. brought to my notice the fact that if one hen had a million lice, more or less, there were enough on 1,000 hens to make a man stop figuring and get to work P. D. Q. with a good lice paint and powder and keep at it, or the vermin would scare him out of business. Many times problems of like nature would confront me. Things I never dreamed of, which never come to one with a small flock, or are not particularly noticeable, but numbers would magnify to such proportions that unless P. and P. was used, would send my courage to the zero point quicker, and I soon became aware of a certain fact, that would-be henists go out of the business, not because of pecuniary losses, but because of being unable to stand the grief (so to speak) of those unexpected happenings and shocks, losses and disappointments, so certain and so peculiar to the hen business, especially on a large scale. One man of my acquaintance goes so far as to say that he believes that at the time of the creation that, when the hen was made, confusion reigned supreme.

And so I've come to this point in hen calculations (which helps me amazingly), to figure up general results at the end of the year, and to make no prophesies or calculations before hand.

A most apt saw, "to not count your chickens 'till they are hatched." It saves lots of time and many disappointments.

And in turning the leaves of my experience book, I find that my hindsight has my foresight beat to a standstill.

Over the main door to my poultry house is an old cover to a fruit box on which is stenciled "Keep Cool." I see it one hundred times a day, and I need to see it for the sake of my peace of mind. After long years with hens, I find that you can count a hen's brains by her teeth, that she knows enough anyway to be on to every make-shift that a poor man has to put-up to keep her in bonds and is able to find every flaw or weak spot in it; that a 50c broody hen, with one flop of her onery wings, can knock $500 worth of religion out of most any common man; but an even temper in a hen roost means more eggs and better growth, a satisfying business and a more enjoyable occupation.

In short, "Keep Cool" means dollars and cents, but there are times when philosophy has no show with a hen on the war path.

THE HERALD SQUARE SHOW.

I take pleasure in announcing that the premium list of the Herald Square Show, which will be held at the Herald Square Exhibition Hall, New York, from Nov. 28th until Dec. 3d, exactly six days, is now ready. The Exhibition Hall will be opened to the public on Monday morning, Nov. 28th, at 8 o'clock. The judging will begin on the same day at 12 o'clock. Any exhibits, therefore, not received before 12 m. on Monday will be debarred from competition. Exhibits will be received on Friday and Saturday, Nov. 25th and 26th, and will be placed at once in coops. The Association expects that the judging will be finished by noon Tuesday. We have engaged some of the most talented judges,men who have become famous among the fanciers for their sound judgment; they will be requested to do their hard task most conscientiously and intelligently, and will adhere to the rules of the American Poultry Association.

We need not repeat that the Herald Square Exhibition Hall is the largest, finest, best ventilated,and lightest hall in New York city. It was built especially for an exhibition hall only two years ago. The situation is superb—Broadway, Sixth Avenue and Thirty-fourth street—is the heart of the city.

Numerous clubs have made requests for special classes. We granted them and we hope now that all the classes will be filled. In chickens there are 427 classes; in Bantams 131; in Ducks 64; in Geese 28; in Turkeys 31; in Ornamental Fowls 18; in Pigeons 399. We have provided more classes for all varieties than any other show ever held in New York; we nave 121 more classes of Chickens, 38 more in Bantams, 86 more in Pigeons, etc.

The Association believes that it is very liberal in cash prizes and special prizes. The first prize money in poultry, except Turkeys and Pheasants, is $2.50, and the second prize is $1.00. For exhibition yards the first prize money will be $4.00; the second prize money will be $2.00. In Turkeys there are four money prizes. The first prize money for Pigeons in classes of four will be $2.00, and the second prize will be $1.00.

The entry fee for poultry is $1.00 and for Pigeons and pet stock, 50c. Entries will close Nov. 7th. The Empire Cooping Co., of Fultonville, N. Y., will coop the exhibition. More than 500 people have written us to mail them a premium list. Four of the largest incubator manufacturing concerns have engaged space from 50 to 75 feet respectively; also a number of supply stores, besides the Atlantic Cat Club and the New York Bronx Canary Association will exhibit in corpore. We have not the least doubt from the present indications and from the most encouraging remarks which we receive daily, that our large hall (about 200x300 feet) will be more than filled. We have been compelled to make a clause that no more than 4,000 entries will be received.

The comfort of our visitors will be well provided for. Benches will be placed in the main aisle; an information bureau will be established in which will be clerks constantly in attendance. A stenographer and typewriter will be at the service of the judges and exhibitors alike, free of charge. Mr. Walter S. Gladney, who has been for a number of years the superintendent of the Trenton Poultry Show, will act in the same capacity at the Herald Square Show. Under his able management we feel justified in saying that all exhibits will be well cared for.

KNACK OF SELLING EGGS.

Getting the eggs is only one factor in making a success of the egg business. Much depends on finding the best market, writes Homer W. Jackson in the Live Stock Report. There is always a market for eggs at some price, but between the low level of huckster or corner grocery prices and the "fancy nearby" price in the city there is a wide range. Yesterday in a store on the Boston market I saw eggs offered for sale at 21, 25, 28, 30 and 35 cents a dozen. That is margin enough to make all the difference between success and failure; and yet the man who produced the highest priced eggs has no secret processes and no advantages that others can not have. Any one else who cares to do it can furnish as good eggs, and when it once becomes known can get as good prices.

An unknown man could hardly break into the market and command the highest prices at once because there is reputaton back of those 35 cent eggs. That also is not hard to get. These eggs were strictly fresh; they were of good size and clean, and all were the shade of brown which Boston requires in the highest priced eggs. The 21 cent. eggs were all guaranteed good, but they were "floaters" (eggs in which the white has become soft and watery through age or temperature—two or three days in a hot room will make a floater of a fresh egg). They were also dirty, of mixed colors and some were small in size.

So long as eggs are sold or "traded out" at the corner grocery quality does not much matter and good prices are impossible. The first step is to break away from this custom and ship to the city where quality is appreciated. And yet it seldom pays to ship to the city if the eggs must be consigned to commission men, because they are not able to get the best prices. No fancy grocer will attempt to supply his trade from the stuff he is able to pick up on the open market. It is useless also to pay commissions when the eggs can be shipped direct to the man who wants them, and it is a comparatively easy matter to find grocers in every city who are glad to receive consignments direct from the producer and to pay an advance over the regular market, if the stock is worth it.

The first condition in trying to establish such a trade is to have layers enough to be able to accumulate a case of eggs before the first ones begin to show age. This depends largely on the temperature. If the eggs are kept in a cool, clean cellar they will not be injured by holding for a week or even two, though, of course, the sooner they can be shipped the better. They should be gathered daily and never allow the hens to sit on them; eggs from stolen nests are seldom fit for a fancy market; never send any of doubtful age or quality; all soiled eggs should be washed and laid out to dry on a cloth without wiping. If they are stained, dip them in vinegar and rub the stain off; keep the cracked and small ones for home use. This is all that is needed to make the eggs grade as fancy, and it pays to take the trouble.

One more matter of importance is to become personally acquainted with the man to whom you are shipping. Acquaintance and friendship count for a good deal in seeking this trade, and acquaintance and reputation for square dealing are back of all high priced eggs—and everything else, for that matter. Therefore go to see the man you deal with. And then watch the market. Know what the price is, and if your grocer does not keep close enough to it ask for an explanation. Do not be unreasonable. Remember he has to take risks and loses a good deal by breakage at times. But if he is not able to pay you the price you are justified in expecting, try some one else. The producer of strictly fancy eggs can be independent. It is only the seller of common stuff who has to be meek and humble.

WISCONSIN STAE "SILVER CUP" POULTRY SHOW.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the eighth annual exhibition of the Wisconsin State Poultry Association to be held at Oshkosh, Jan. 23-28, 1905. Last season the Association advertised a Silver Cup show, and offered eleven handsome trophies to exhibitors. The result was a large entry of remarkably fine specimens,many of which later found their way to Chicago, or are going to be exhibited at St. Louis this fall. This year another Silver Cup show will be held, and over fifteen silver cups will be hung up by the association and its friends. But this is not all. An annual state appropriation places the association on a most firm financial basis, and the cash prizes will be larger this year than ever before. When ten birds are entered in a class the prize money, offered last year, will be doubled. Merchants of the state, poultry supply houses, and others promise a long list of specials. Coops at this show are free and the exhibition will be held in Co. B. Armory, the largest, best lighted, most centrally located, and most expensive hall in the city. The central location of Oshkosh always brings together a large number of fanciers who pay good prices for the stock they buy. Three lines of interurban cars from twice as many large towns and cities bring large crowds of people, among whom there will be many customers for exhibitors. The officers are now at work on a catalogue that will rival anything ever gotten out in the state, both in outward appearance and the announcements it will contain. It will be ready for mailing about the 15th of November, and you should get your name on the mailing list at once.

SAY, Mr. Poultryman! Do You Know

THAT your hens can be made to commence laying earlier and lay longer, producing Higher results in egg yield,
Each bird showing a 25 per cent. increase?

How one hundred pounds of H-O Poultry Feed will go farther than two hundred pounds of any other feed?
Our say-so is not the authority on which these claims are based?

Practical experiments show that spring chickens will start to lay early in October (do yours?) and will continue right through the winter if you

Mr. F. H. Shellabarger as judge is sure to give satisfaction. Everybody knows of him, and score cards over his signature are valuable property for the fancier. Before making any plans for exhibiting remember the importance of the Wisconsin State Show. A prize won here means more in advertising than at any other show in the state, and the prizes are larger and specials more numerous than at any other exhibition in this section of the country, entry fees considered.

MEAT FOR CHICKENS.

In concluding a report of experiments in feeding young chicks the Rhode Island Experiment station says: The use of the proportion of animal food will pay handsome profit through decreased mortality and increased weight of the chicks. In feeding bear in mind that chicks in a state of nature spend practically all of their working hours in search of food, and that they do not fill their crops in ten minutes every two hours. Feeding should be, as far as the time of attendant renders profitable, a continuous process, but by no means a continuous gorge. The experiment which led up to this conclusion was with an incubator hatch of 219 chickens. These were separated into lots of about fifty each and placed in similar brooders. For thirty days all conditions were kept alike except the rations. Pen A was fed a balanced ration of grains, meat and green food. The chicks grew and thrived, and not one chick showed symptoms of digestive disorder. The deaths amounted to 3.9 per cent. In pen B all animal food was withheld, the deaths were 9.5 per cent., of which 75 per cent. had bowel trouble. Pen C was fed on grain alone, all animal food and all green food being omitted from the rations; the deaths were 32.7 per cent., of which 76.5 per cent. showed digestive trouble. In pen D all grain food was omitted; the deaths of chicks were 63.7 per cent., of which 85.8 per cent. showed bowel trouble. All the living chicks were weighed at the greatest average weight for all

This experiment shows conclusively that outside of the brooding and conditions during incubation chicks may be killed by improper feeding. Where one does not wish to buy the prepared beef scraps the bones and scraps from the table will go far toward feeding the baby chicks at first if put in shape so they can eat them.

DAYTON SHOW.

The Dayton Fanciers' Club wish to announce that owing to the numerous inquiries for entries, and the space of their show room, they have been compelled to limit the entries to fifteen hundred (1500). They have engaged Mr. Theodore Hewes as judge, and others are to follow. A number of specialty clubs have chosen this show for their state meet, and from all present appearances this show will this year exceed the expectations of its promoters. The exhibitions of The Dayton Fanciers' club are already recognized as one of the shows of the middle west, and this year will no doubt be their banner year. There will be only one show at Dayton this year, and all intending exhibitors should apply early to Carl W. Lenz, secretary, Reibold Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, for entry blanks and information, which will be gladly fuurnished upon request. This is the show that sets them all a-talking.

AGAIN .

The Berkshire County Poultry and Pigeon Association claim their dates, which are Dec. 28, 29 and 30, 1904, at the Town Hall, Lenox, Mas. This will make our eleventh annual exhibit, and each one, as the years roll by, is an improvement on the preceding one. We have a beautiful hall, best of light and ventilation, and try to use everyone alike. We have secured the services of the Hon. David A. Nichols as judge, which should prove a hit. We have had him before and know what he is, and there are others. Our premium list will go out about Dec. 1. Come and see us.

FROM THOSE WHO KNOW

CRYSTAL SPRING DUCK FARM, Oil City, Pa., June 8th, 1904.

Dear Sir:—The 26 New Model machines, which we purchased of you some time ago, were fitted up and installed and have been running very successfully for the past season. We have 55 of the old Cyphers Incubator Company machines, which with your New Models gives us a total of 81 machines in our new incubator cellar. With regard to your new Model machines would say that they are satisfactory in every respect, are more accurate in temperature, hatch a larger percentage, and more vigorous ducks and chickens, and the workmanship on the machines is superior. I only wish that you could see your way clear to take off our hands the old Cyphers Incubator Company machines and replace them with your New Model machines without too much extra expense to us. If this is possible to arrange we would like to have it completed before commencement of next hatching season. Very truly yours, PATRICK MCEVOY, Manager.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

By Using Geyer's Champion Disinfectant & Vermin Destroyer

There are, in all classes of powders before the public, many calculated for the sure cure of lice and vermin and a dozen other purposes, yet are they reliable, and have they produced the results claimed?

In offering this compound, we offer a powder such as is not before the public, and fills a place that none other can for the purpose intended—a positive, sure disinfectant and destroyer of all vermin that invests either poultry, small animals, those of the barn yard.

It is a perfect destroyer of all disease germs, and produces a healthy odor wherever distributed. It is a sure cure for gapes, in young chicks.

If you are skeptical and don't believe in Powders or compouud because of many worthless ones on the market, we ask, please cast aside your prejudice and give this compound a trial. It is put up in 2 pound boxes. Price 25c. 560tf

TWELFTH ANNUAL SALE.

We will have our Twelfth Annual Sale for the month of NOVEMBER of the World Wide Known Egg Producer,

BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC.

On account of the late Spring this year, there were less birds raised than ever before, so the demand for fresh laid eggs will be the greater.

To help supply this extra demand a little BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC in the morning mash will do the work. It starts the pullets laying early and keeps them laying all through the winter. It helps the old hens through moulting and gets them to laying before the very cold weather sets in.

Those who have used BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC once will never try anything else, as it does more than we say it will do.

The regular price is 1 lb., 25c; by mail 40c; or, 5 boxes, $1.00.

We will sell during the month of NOVEMBER only a 1 lb. box, 15c; by mail, 30c! or, 7 boxes $1.00, shipped via express or freight from New York.

This is a big saving to our customers, old and new, and those wishing to double their profits should take advantage of this special offer.

At these reduced prices, positively no orders filled before November 1st nor after November 30th.

We sell all kinds of POULTRY SUPPLIES and all are listed in our Immense Illustrated Poultry Supply Catalogue, mailed free. Send for one.

HAGERSTOWN

The Finest Exhibition in Its History---Quality Supreme---Banquet and Parade Attended by Many Fanciers, Special Report by G. O. Brown, Associate Editor.

History repeats itself. Hagerstown poultry show again scores its usual characteristic success. The poultry exhibit was recognized as the leading attraction of the big fair, which the western fanciers were surprised to find "as big as any state fair." The poultryman who visits Hagerstown for the first time comes with the expectation of finding a big display of poultry, but he is surprised to find it is even greater than he had imagined, and the quality of the birds is a revelation. While there were not quite as many birds as at some former shows, probably at no other fall show has there been such uniform excellence in the classes. Each judge had classes that required the most careful consideration, so keen was the competition. Leghorns are always a strong class at Hagerstown, and while some of the old timers were conspicuous by their absence, "there were others" on deck with "strings" that contained many neat and natty specimens of the Leghorn family that were entitled to blue ribbon honors. The single comb whites numbered nearly one hundred. The old birds were in remarkably fine condition; the young were in fine show form, and some of them were wondrously well developed, as fine as is usually seen in December shows. It was the same with the S. C. Browns, and the Buffs. Where the competition is as close as it was at Hagerstown, it would be better to have all the birds of a class on one level. Where some are two tiers high, the first prize bird, if he is on the upper tier, and the second prize one on the lower one, there is unfavorable opportunity for visitors to study or compare the difference in the specimens. Sometimes the judges' awards or decisions are criticized unnecessarily, simply because of the two points of views of the winners as thus looked at.

Brown Leghorns, ever since the late Dr. Dorsey commenced to show his specimens at Hagerstown, have been a prominent class, both in numbers and quality. The rose comb browns exhibited at this show are uniformly good, fine in color, clean cut, typical Leghorns with neat combs. The evolution of the buff Leghorn has been remarkable, and at this show the continued improvement each year has been a school to many. The males are coming to the front of good solid, even buff all over. Speaking of buffs, we wish every one could have had opportunity to walk down the line of buff Rocks and Wyandottes. We inspected the winners after the blue cards were placed and found them almost ideal. Like the Leghorns classes, there were still enough high class specimens left to make five more prizes in each again and still have good birds left.

The Barred Rocks, strong as usual, added a line or two of care to big Theodore's dome of thought before he got them placed. Welles' breeding pen was deserving of special mention. All are of the same shade and size. One pullet could have had first place had she been in single competition.

White Rocks were simply a grand lot. The cock bird shown by Mr. Burroughs of New Jersey is the best White Rock ever shown at Hagerstown. He was broad across back and breast, fine in shape, good eyes and comb, splendid legs and beak—in fact he had combined more good points than any White Rock I ever saw. Buff Rocks a regular buff dream, a symposium of buff, many wonderful specimens.

The Wyandottes, fine as usual, with a string of white specimens that was a show, so to speak, within a show. Mrs. Turner's prize hen won the Ivory Soap special. The winners in the Silvers were strong pointers; goldens also good. The buffs enough to break the heart of any judge to tackle them. It was no easy task to select the winners.

The Asiatics were numerous as usual, except in Brahmas. Buff Cochins are always a marvelous class at this show. Mr. Rudy has few successful competitors, though this time he met specimens that caused him to share the honors. Partridge Cochins remarkably good and in condition good enough for a winter show.

Games were a good class, though the specimens were not in as good condition as usual; some of the finest ones gave evidence of being overshown—too long on the road.

French class contained good Houdans, La Fleche, and Creve Coeurs. Dorkings hardly as strong as at former shows, little in numbers or quality. Black Spanish good. The first hen was a fine specimen.

Polish well represented and specimens of high degree were plenty,making the competition keen.

All varieties of Hamburgs were shown, Silvers leading. A number of Sultans were shown. Nearly every breed was represented, but neither time nor space can be used to go into detail on all the breeds. It would not do, though, to skip the bantam family, as there were over 500 of these miniature beauties, and Bantam alley was one of the most prominent places in the building. It is doubtful if any show ever hand a stronger lot of Pekin ducks. Whew! such specimens. Talk about size—well, if we should try to explain the reader would say it was a California story. An idea of the size of the show may be had when it is known there were 112 breeding pens shown.

Wednesday evening the annual parade by the poultrymen took place. They were led by a full fife and drum corps. The judges rode in carriages. Each man had a special badge, a white cap, and a cane cut from Cedar Mountain. Messrs. Theodore Hewes and Edward Sheldon acted as captains. The paraders marched around the square, and disbanded in front of the City Hotel, and then went in a body to the banquet at the Hamilton House. The menu: Tomato bouillon, fried oysters, celery, queen olives, cold slaw, tenderloin of beef, with mushroons, sweetbreads en caisses, a la Reive; Julienne potatoes, chicken croquettes, small peas, tomato mayonaise, peach ice cream, assorted fancy cake, oranges, bananas, grapes, cheese, crackers, coffee, and while coming down the course, "Sherry," Claret" and "Hamilton Punch" were dispensed. At the head of the table facing the two long tables running clear across the dining room, were seated in the order named, the following: Miller Purvis of Illinois; J. F. Crangle, of Connecticut; J. H. Drevenstedt, New York; F. B. Zimmer, New York.; David A. Nichols, Connecticut; Geo. E. Howard, District of Columbia; Geo. O.Brown,Maryland; Levin Stonebreaker, Maryland; John L. Cost, Maryland; W. J. Stanton, New York; Theodore Hewes, Indiana; Col. J. W. Dodd, Virginia; A. E. Warner, Maryland, and A. L. Sparks, New Jersey.

The toastmaster was Geo. E. Howard, and he simply did himself proud. Among those who responded to toasts were the following: G. O. Brown, Hagerstown Poultry Shows of the Past." He briefly told some of the ancient methods of judging poultry, etc.

A. E. Warner, "Hagerstown Poultry Show of To-Day." Mr. Warner said in part that Hagerstown was a preparatory school for young exhibitors; as well as a graduating school. They always employed skilled judges, whose ability was beyond question. It is the educational center of the young poultrymen of this country. Eastern and western judges sit here in harmony at the same table. He passed a high compliment on Mr. Drevenstedt's judging of the Brown Leghorns. No other show in this country had such loyalty shown it—all knew justice would be done them. John Cost will see that every man gets it. He congratulated every prize winner. The management, he declared, was up to date, and the hospitality unsurpassed. No other show has such a gathering of fanciers. Col. Dodd, in an oratorical flight, lauded John L. In a beautiful word picture he portrayed the characteristic scenery in the vicinity of Hagerstown. Told how he had watched the growing strength year by year of the poultry department of the fair. As long as you have the board of directors, there will be no friction known. A. L.Sparks made some general remarks. Said he had come 200 miles to see the show, neglecting his business to do so. To him the trip and the day was a memorable event. Christopher Columbus discovered America on this date and Mr. Sparks' birthday occurred on the same date. Here he found a brotherly, fraternal feeling experienced nowhere else. No graft; no cliques. He ended his remarks by telling an amusing anecdote of a deacon. W. C. Denny made some "various remarks." He was always interested in securing the best good to the greatest number. Was greatly gratified to be at Hagerstown. Made some remarks about the coming St. Louis show. Hagerstown show is the equal of any show, all things considered. Good birds and good fellowship. Exhibits are probably the best ever seen at any fall show, and this result attained when the great St.Louis show is only 10 days off, shows great loyalty. James Skiles made brief remarks about the Pittsburg show, and expressed his enjoyment in visiting Hagerstown.

Theodore Hewes said there was no East, West, North or South in poultrydom. It is only the ignorance of some who imagine it. Comparing fall shows, the west is not in it. Would just as soon have the ribbons of a Hagerstown show as any poultry show in this country. Many birds here could doubtless win in St. Louis. Ideas here are advanced, and there is no friction. West and East have about the same quality in winners. He said the St. Louis was a poultry exhibition conceived in ignorance and conducted in graft. He severely roasted the St. Louis arrangements. Briefly sketched the work done by the A. P. A. committe.e He said no judge had a right to criticize other judges until they have had a trial. If they fall down, let them fall. Will freely criticize the work of the St. Louis judges if they are the best friends he had. He praised Mr. Denny's ability and said "but there are others and God only knows where they will land. A poultry fancier knows no politics. Said he would copy the Hagerstown show methods in Indianapolis state show, white caps, canes and all.

Miller Purvis said he gave up going to St.Louis show to come to Hagerstown. The poultry industry to what it is on account of the special poultry poultry press. Poultrymen more loyally support their press than any other calling. He explained the value of the poultry press to fanciers in general. If it was not for this earnest devotion to the poultry press there would be no poultry shows; no improvement of breeds. All fanciers are in a sense brothers, with a fraternal feeling. It takes a good fellow to be a poultryman. There is no other industry he would rather be identified with than poultry.

John L. Cost. He thanked all for their liberal patronage, and with much feeling showed his appreciation for the kind remarks made to him. He ended his remarks by giving a story about G. O. Brown explaining to a lady exhibitor at one of the Baltimore shows why her bird did not win a premium.

J. H. Drevenstedt, in response to the toast of the "Vacant Chair" (John Glasgow) said: "The chair is empty, the glasses are full, and my heart is full, that's all." That John Glasgow was feelingly remembered by all was very emphatically demonstrated. Mr. Levin Stonebreaker delivered the address of welcome. Mr.S. is a rising young lawyer and his address was excellent. There is probably no other poultry show where as many poultrymen congregate from as many different states as at Hagerstown. Mr. Stonebreaker remarked to the writer as he gazed over the throng: "I am suprised to find such an intelligent looking lot of men; they are greatly beyond the average on such occasions." After all, it is no great cause for surprise, for the average fancier is a man with a kindly heart, often as tender as a true woman's. Such conditions belong to the real fancier. As there was so much said in praise of our John L. Cost by the speakers, I have purposely "cut it out," or else I would have to fill the American Fancier and crowd out the ads. also.

Some of the fanciers who visit the Maryland show are out for a good time always. It is a good place, there are good peopie, a good many are there, good fraternal feeling always prevails, "everything goes" on the occasion; therefore it is a good opportunity for a good time. Some of the staid citizens of the state who came to the fair dressed in a straw hat and a solemn countenance, and black frock coats that dip knee-ward on the front corners, called some of the "boys" "Indians." Therefore, knowing that the only Simon pure Americans were Indians, the "boys" concluded the "dub" was, after all, a compliment, and were willing to recognize they had Indian blood in their veins. Probably the skeleton head of an Indian that hung suspended by watch chains in the window of the jeweler in the City Hotel had something to do with it. The jaw would open and close according to the number of fingers held on the glass; would respond 25 times to a quarter held against the glass, or a 50 cent piece. Anyway, the boys got together and formed an Indian club,one that no one can swing, you know; just a sort of tribe connection wherein the pipe of peace is prominent and where the braves can swap stories of a nature that would scalp the afore-mentioned citizens who spoke of them as red men. The following comprised the Indians: Grand Sachem G. O. Brown, Big Medicine Man John L. Cost, Sitting Bull Geo. E. Howard, Red Cloud David A. Nichols, Laughing Water W. J. Stanton, Man Afraid of His Horse F. B. Zimmer, Scarfaced Bill W. G. Minnich, Rain in the Face A. L. Sparks, Wabash Chief Theodore Hewes, Devil Stick J. H. Drevenstedt, Shack Natty Jim J. Fred Crangle, Wampum Brave A. O. Schilling, Spotted Tail Brave Miller Purvis, Squaw-face Butt-in A. E. Warner. While the Indians will be known as the Maryland Indians, they will never desert the sacramental traditions of the Tribes they represent. The Wabash Chief will always he an Iroquois. Rain in the Face a Jersey Red, Spotted Tail a Modock, Scar-Face Bill a Sioux, Wampum Brave a Seneca, and so on respectively.

Wednesday evening an Italian harpest and violinist appeared in front of the City Hotel. The Wabash Chief went out, took one of the violins and "worked" with the harpist until the crowd congested so the police had to make make a way through it for pedesrians. Can the Chief fiddle? No. He is a violinist who gracefully bows out the sweetest strains of music in a way that sets every one to keeping time with their feet. It was a revelation that the Chief had so much music in his soul. While he was intently "fiddling," two handsome girls came along and one exclaimed, "Oh, Maggie, see the giant Italian fiddling!" The Chief spoke to one of the waiters at the banquet who weighed about 200 and had a most solemn face on. He asked him if he ever had a grin on, but he was an ebony statue until the chief put his hand at his wampum moccasin and produced a quarter, then the face brigatened like heat-lightning in a black thunder cloud, and his row of ivories looked like a new grave yard. The Chief was satisfied. "Man Afraid of His Horse" clung close to Big Medicine Man every time he passed the Indian skeleton head. Sitting Bull admired every lady that wore white ostrich feathers in her hat. "Red Cloud" was a "big injun, say little, think heap." "Laughing Water" was inclined to visit all the Pike attractions. "Scar-faced Bill" wanted to scalp every kicker. "Rain in the Face" wanted to find "a man who had a dollar." Shack Natty Jim had a chill Wednesday night, and the other Indians gleefully covered him with the bed clothes of 13 beds, two bed springs and a single cot to hold them in place —but it wasn't Big Medicine Man's prescription. Spotted Tail Brave was to remain over until next week and hunt hidden treasure with the Big Medicine Man. "Devil Stick" showed he carried his voice with him. He stepped out in the street and announced to the paraders to break ranks and adjourn to the Hamilton to the banquet. His voice went down the line, passed clear on to the bluffs at Pen Mar, 10 miles distant, echoed back through Cumberland valley, re-echoed to South Mountain and is still supposed to be reverberating amid the surroundings described by Col. Dodd. "Wampum Brave" said there were "heap handsome squaw, small feet, no war paint on em." Squaw-Faced Butt-in warmed up to his subject at the banquet and was duly applauded. "Grand Sachem" tried to act the part of a sedate chief, but didn't impress any one with the fact except himself.

Next year is to be the golden jubilee of the Hagerstown fair, and arrangements are already in progress to make the event the greatest that ever happened. Everyone knows what that means, for the officials are not only liberal minded, but they set a pace that other fairs try to follow. Let us all make our arrangements so we can work for the coming jubilee, for it will be a big boomer for the poultry industry everywhere.

G. O. BROWN.

JUDGE HEWES' REPORT.

The following special report by Theodore Hewes will prove of interest to Rock breeders:

Barred Rocks. A large class and very even in quality; winners,especially in females, close together and under the score card would vary but little. In males, first cock in advance of all others in his class; 2nd, 3d, 4th and 5th will make good specimens, but were in bad moult, and hard to decide on their merits; all good, however,and worthy of prizes at this, the greatest of all fall fairs.

Hens. 1st, a remarkably good one, although shown eight weeks, she was still able to take the first money in a walk; 2nd and 3rd, quite a bit darker than first in color, but very even and barring parallel in all sections. Second hen in shape the best in class; 4th and 5th, a trifle light and white barring too wide for black, and last tip of feather uneven; black failing in th finish that is so much desired by the breeders of Barred Rocks.

Cockerels. A nice lot throughout. 1st, well finished, color harmonizing in all sections, specially good in head points, a trifle off in color of legs, but easy winner in his class. 2nd and 3rd owned by same exhibitor; 2nd won on account of being better finished; 3rd cockerel will be the better in time and by December 1st will probably run the first cockerel a close race. 4th and 5th, a trifle leggy; will make better cocks, as birds of this type take longer to develop.

Pullets. 1st, the brightest colored specimen in the single entry class. Not as good in shape of back as we would like for the first premium specimen,but so good in all other sections that we could not get away from her for the first money. 2nd and 3rd, undoubtedly sisters, showing the same shape and color characteristics, and very good throughout. 2nd pullet a little out of condition owing to heat the day class was judged. but showing up bright before latter part of the show. 4th and 5th very much alike in color. The white barring a little too wide for black and not as good in finish as we would like to see.

In breeding yards, there were four pens of more than average merit. First pen undoubtedly one of the best that has been shown this year, east or west. Two pullets in this pen are the best that I have seen this year in either hens or pullets. Cockerel compared favorably with first cockerel in single entries. The pullets referred to are certainly wonders and we trust we will see them at the World's Fair,and if there it is dollars to doughnuts they will be in the money. 2nd pen, not quite so well finished as first; the females were good throughout and pen nicely mated up. but the two pullets in first pen made them an easy winner over 2nd. 3rd, 4th and 5th, only a trifle behind second, and considerable time taken to decide which would have the money.

Buff Rocks.—A big class and while not specially strong in any individual specimen, good throughout and one of the hardest of the classes that I judged at Hagerstown to select the winners. It would be hard to say which, if any, bird excelled the other, as the winners were all good, and especially so considering the season of the year. If we were to select one for our own use, the bird that struck us as being the most correct, taking chances on what the finishing feathers were like, believe I would give preference to second cock to any single specimen in clas.

First hen, good in shape, excepting a trifle knocked at knees. 2nd and 3rd a little short; more on the Wyandotte type, but so good in color that they were easy winners. Cockerels. A good class, and so very near alike that quite a bit of time was required to select the winners. The entire exhibit was good in head points, and with a little more finish would be hard to beat.

Pullets, 1st, 2nd and 3rd, sound and even throughout; good combs that would stand when birds are fully matured and not show the excess in size that is quite common in this variety. But little difference in 1st, 2nd and 3d in color, and all of them with their adult plumage, or so nearly complete that one could form a fair estimate of their value for winter exhibition. Some very good ones were left out of the money owing to condition of combs, having been forced perhaps for this one exhibition until the combs had fallen over, or had become so badly twisted that we were compelled to set them back.

White Rocks. One of the largest classes out for some time, and with quality to burn. First cock, a wonder; I believe the best shaped male bird I ever saw in Plymouth Rock class, regardless of variety, and I believe I voice the sentiment of the Rock breeders both East and West when I make this statement. The specimen showed quite a little cream in plumage, due largely to his condition of moult, and legs in score card show would perhaps be cut one point, but for general make-up,—comb, size, shape in every section—he was an easy winner of the special for best shaped Rock in the show, and undoubtedly would win first money at St. Louis were he entered.

1st, 2nd and 3rd hens, very much alike in shape; 1st hen not quite finished in tail, but a body that but little fault could be found with. The hen, like first cock, had just come through moult and showed more or less the creamy plumage the White Rock breeders are so anxious to get rid of. 4th and 5th hen, not quite through moult and not showing to the best advantage; 4th especially will make a specimen for winter exhibitions hard to beat.

Cockerels. Good in size, but not shaped so well as the pullets; somewhat gawky and overgrown; will take about six-weeks to shape them into show specimens. First, an easy winner in the class, both in shape and color; 2nd, a large bird and not quite matured; 3rd, a specially fine colored specimen, but lacks the finish that is necessary to make a show specimen; 4th and 5th, large birds that will make fine cocks, but somewhat awkward as cockerels.

Pullets. Some of the best we have found this year, and but very little difference between 1st and 5th—in fact, more time was taken to award prizes in pullet class than all entries in single class, and even with the five awards, four exceptionally good specimens were left out entirely. They were good in shape, comb, color and Plymouth Rock characteristics. This can be said of all the five pullets having ribbons and four more that were only a trifle behind them.

Pens. 1st, a better matured male, with pullets almost if not quite matured; 2nd pen showed rare quality, but tails were not full in pullets and cockerel showed quite a bit of creamy chick feathers in neck and saddle.

Hamburgs. Not a large class and many of the specimens showed the effects of a long summer's siege. In Silver Spangled the quality was in first cock, cockerel and pullet. One of the best specimens in the show—a hen—through some error in making entries did not compete. She would have won first had she been in competition and the error was not discovered in time for the exhibitor to correct it.

Silver and Golden Penciled, a small class and young birds not very well matured, and is next to impossible to judge the quality or color in the condition we found them at Hagerstown.

Blacks, very good,especially in cocks and cockerels. 1st and 2nd cock and 1st and 2nd cockerel,very good in head points and about as free from purple as we can expect to find a specimen at this season of the year.

Buff Leghorns. In Single Combs, a big class and good quality throughout; 1st cock, the best one we have seen this season and one that will surely be heard from at St. Louis; 2nd cock,good in color, loses some on the shape of comb and color of lobes.

Hens. An even class, but not of such high quality as the coccks. Cockerels. Good throughout and every specimen winning a prize in this class a credit to the breed and their owner; sound in color, good Leghorn type and specially strong in head points.

Pullets. First, far ahead of the others in the class; well finished, with comb turning over nicely on one side; solid in color from comb to end of tail and of the even shade that it would be hard to find fault with. Other winning pullets in the class were very even, some being strong in one point; others in another—in fact, it took longer to place the fifth awards in this class than it did the 1st and 2nd.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1904.

We are pleased to announce to the readers of The American Fancier that we have been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. G. O. Brown as associate editor. Mr. Brown has for many years been the agricultural and poultry editor of the famous weekly edition of the Baltimore Sun, and when the latter was given up as a publication, Mr. Brown settled on his farm near Baltimore, and will engage in thoroughbred poultry culture. He will conduct a department in the American Fancier in the future called "Brown's Budget," and while it will be chiefly devoted to the Southern poultry interests, it will not be limited to those above. The report of the Hagerstown show is from the pen of this old veteran, and he was the one to first make this show known to the public.

There are several other reports written by Theodore Hewes, F. B. Zimmer and D. A. Nichols incorporated in the above report.

It is needless for us to add more than a brief summary of the classes we had the pleasure of handling at that grand exhibition.

Beginning with the Silver Wyandotts, we will say the class was one of the best, if not the largest, ever seen there. The first cockerel was a beautiful bird, silvery, fine breast lacing, nice wings and a surprise in the development of shape and size. The pullets were the evenest lot we have handled in many years, first being a fine open-laced bird of good type with the most perfect wing lacing and primaries we have yet seen, second a trifle darker type but laced all over, reminding us of the famous Ada Rehan type, exhibited by Dr. Beckett over ten years ago. But third and fourth were almost as good and there were others that would capture prizes at the best of shows if the "other charmers" were away. The old birds, although in moult, showed fine quality.

White Wyandottes, a beautiful lot, notably first hen and winner of Ivory Soap special for the whitest bird of the show, first and second pens first and second pullet and cockerels that soared pretty high in quality.

Buff Wyandottes, a hot aggregation, the star in the lot being the first cockerel, a woder in color and as sound in tail and wings as we ever saw in such a light bird, and the others were close to him, albeit somewhat undeveloped. Cocks, hens and pullets excellent. First pen a beauty in evenness of color.

Partridge were shy in numbers and fair in quality. Silver Pencilled, white not large classes, were surprisingly fine, first and second pullets being about as good as we have yet seen. There was a small but good class of Blacks.

Orpingtons, quite a good lot, but blacks and buffs competed together, which was a hardship on the latter, the former having the advantage in weight and size.

Brown Leghorns were magnificent. The quality in the single comb variety was so high that it took a long time to examine the birds. Such an even lot of beautifully colored females we have not handled in the past decade. Some thirty pullets in line and not a poor one in the bunch. The first pullet was Leghorn in style and shape, had a fine comb and head, an even soft brown tint on the back and wings, even the secondary blending with the back feathers in perfect harmony, the breast being red, free from shafting and penciling in a remarkable degree. But there were others nearly as good, losing only in color of legs and head points. The hens were equally fine, the only defects in some being the color of the legs. Cockerels, another treat, first being stylish, fine in comb and head points with a hackle and saddle that had the color and striping even in both sections, second almost as good and a trifle larger in size, the rest so close that there was considerable work to place the awards. Cocks in not as good feather, but first was a beauty in color. Rose combs equally fine, if not as numerous.

The Pittsburg Fancier's club was finely represented by the "Smoky City Twins," Ed. Selden and Jas. Skiles. They know the good old Maryland city and its big show, and everybody else knows these two excellent fanciers. They will be present next year at the great golden jubilee of the Hagerstown Fair and bring not only "Joe" Hilldorfer but several others from Pittsburg.

Speaking of the Golden Jubilee which will commemorate the fifteenth anniversary of the Hagerstown show, John L. Cost informed us that preparations are in progress for the gathering of the largest and greatest collection of fine bred poultry and pigeons ever seen there, and a reunion of fanciers such as never before has been held in the United States.

Miller Purvis was at Hagerstown in the interest of his new paper, "Poultry." To judge by the cover, it will be a winner. Purvis also "took" the crowd with his camera.

Room 1 at the City Hotel was a place where history was made. Nearly all the judges and several newspaper men camped there. There was heart-to-heart talk and drives from the shoulder. The air was red and blue, because of Beagle Zimmer's new song entitled "The Red and the Blue," so well referred to by Senator Nichols in his report elsewhere.

Geo. E. Howard, editor of the Feather, proved himself a royal entertainer and a capital toastmaster.

"Big Theo." Hewes, the Wabash chief, made a hit judging Rocks. He worked hard, long and faithfully had hot classes and came out with flying colors.

Deacon Ivory Sparks has joined the Indians and is now called "Rain-in-the-Face." Most appropriate name, for he has weathered many a storm and has had the salty moisture of the old Atlantic ocean over his kindly old face on numerous occasions. While his tongue speaks often and his pen writes fluently, nevertheless his heart is still—in the right place.

George L. Harding, who was en route for Washington with his family, could not pass Hagerstown by and spent several days there. "Uncle Sam's" foods were represented also and will be, as long as Mr. Harding and John L. Cost are among us, and there is a Hagerstown show.

That the good, unselfish work of John L. Cost is appreciated is eloquently transmitted by wire in the following telegram:

Newark, N. J., Oct. 12, 1904.
John L. Cost, Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 12, 1904.

The spirit of the Feathered Tribe is in Hagerstown to-day. We are sorry to not be with you. Press of business is our only excuse. We express to you and colleagues our regrets for not making good my promise to be present, Ingram, Rackham, Bailey, Kirscher, Sinnock, Craig and Wolfe join me in best wishes for the only Hagerstown and Cost.

EDWARD F. DUFFY.
Pres. Fanciers' Poultry Association of New Jersey.

Permit us to add that the spirit that moved the sending of that telegram was that of a fancier as unselfish as the man it was sent to. We know Mr. Duffy well and all the rest of the Feathered Tribe of New Jersey And they have struggled hard to make a great poultry growing state represented among the great poultry shows of the United States. And they succeeded where others have failed. And why? Simply because they have catered to the best interests of the fancy, have paid every obligation, when they could have escaped them by dropping out of sight and allowing the public to slowly forget their existence. Did they do it? No! They shouldered the burden and start anew with inspired confidence in the future. In this age of commercialism, this fanciers' spirit is a very refreshing and healthy sign.

The St. Louis show is on next week. It is the largest poultry exhibit ever catalogued. It commands respect for that alone. Whatever shortcomings there may be in the cooping and in the judging should be laid at the door of those responsible for the former and the selection of the judges. It is manifestly unfair and un-American to criticise a man's judgment in advance. No man is guilty until proven to be. The judges selected have duties to perform and we believe they will give their best servic for the occasion. They have hard tasks in store for them, but this should only spur them on to their best efforts. Should they fail to please when judging classes assigned to them, true sportsmanship demands a silent acceptance of their judgment. No kicking or squealing. If blame must be attached tack it on to the powers that selected them. The judges are not to blame. Should there be cause to suspect collusion between exhibitor and judge, the usual remedy is at hand. But let us say in conclusion to all who exhibit: Take your medicine.

HARTFORD'S GREAT POULTRY SHOW.

Arrangements have been completed for the eighth annual exhibit of the Hartford-Manchester Poultry Association at Foot Guard Hall, Hartford, Conn., January 24-27, 1905. This spacious building is in great demand, being one of the largest floor space buildings in New England, well lighted and admirably located, two blocks from depot. Many new features have been decided upon and the show is held after most others that all stock may be in condition for showing. To win at Hartford means to win at about the fifth largest show of the country. Entry fees have been decided on as 50 cents per single bird. Prizes to be: first $2, second $1; if eight or more entries, if less, prize to be first $1, second 50c. Pens, entry fee $1. First prize to be $5, second $2, if eight or more entries, otherwise first prize $2, second $1. Five ribbons will be awarded in each class, besides several dollars' worth of specials. This exhibit will be a strictly first class poultry show with Bantams and Pigeons in the Dining Hall. This building can accommodate most any number of birds which will be received, cooped, cared for, re-cooped and returned by Messrs. Clayton & Freeman of Plainville, Conn., who, with their patented Nutmeg coop have won much praise.

For further information or suggestions communicate with the sec'y, F. O. Groesbeck, Hartford, Conn.

HAGERSTOWN SHOW.

Pens. Very good throughout. First, evenly matched in male and female; second, a trifle small in size, showing good promise; 3rd pen, good in females, but not so strong in male,showing that shade of blue in undercolor so objectionable to breeders of this variety.

Rose Comb Buff Leghorns. Only a small class, but very good in quality; comb specially fine in first cock.

Black Leghorns. Quite a big class and in some respects far ahead of anything we have seen this year; especially is this true of first cockerel; a bird with a good Leghorn shape, nice comb and good lobes, and a pair of yellow legs that would rival anything in the Brown Leghorn class—in fact, in this particular was a phenomenal specimen and we doubt if there is a better one in the country. Other birds in the class were very even, and aside from purple in plumage, the males made a good showing. In females, we like the first hen better than anything shown, although still in her old plumage. She has good length of legs, well spread tail, carries herself in fine style and will be heard from in the big Eastern shows during the winter months. The rest of the class very even throughout; nothing of specially rare quality, but so matched that considerable time was taken to award the prizes.

THEO. HEWES.

JUDGE NICHOLS' REPORT.

The Light Brahma class was not quite as large as usual this year, but were very fine birds. In Buff Cochins, the same fine quality that has graced the Hagerstown show for years was there. Black Cochins were grand birds and a fine show. But the great exhibit of birds were the Bantams other than game. No one wishing to see a fine exhibit could find any fault with Hagerstown this year. Buff Cochin, Black Cochin, White Cochin and Partridge Cochin, in large numbers, well cooped and hot competition, and one collection of Coocoo Bantams. Light Brahma, Dark Brahma Bantams in full competition and birds of very high quality. Golden and Silver Sebrights galore, and first-class. I am of the opinion that a decided improvement has been made in the cooping over last year. I am also of the opinion that the R. I. Reds and Jersey Blue classes must have been very large as one of the prominent judges commenced at Baltimore on his way to Hagerstown to sing, "One was Red and one was Blue," and it seemed to be on his mind more than any other birds in the show.

JUDGE ZIMMER'S COMMENTS.

Minorcas at Hagerstown were good sized entries and we never handled at this show three better Black Cocks or three better Hens than were there this year, large in size, Minorcas in shape and all of the Hens and two of the Cocks grand color. Cockrels and Pullets not fully matured, but they showed plenty of quality. The White Minorca class was the largest we ever saw at the Hagers town or at any fair attended this year, and of better quality, excepting Poughkeepsie. Aside from one Cock and one Hen, all were full of quality. Polish classes all were represented here, and many high class birds were to be found, more particularly among the no-beard White Silver and Buff Laced. A few White Crested Blacks worthy of mention. We noticed many of the chicks among the display that looked tired and overshown. The Black Sumatra exhibit was very fine, a goodly entry and many grand birds; they appear to stand traveling and constant showing far better than other Games. In Large Games, all varieties were shown and the most of the classes well filled the old or mature birds in better show condition than the chicks. Game Bantam exhibit very large, as large, if not larger, than we ever handled at this show. All the varieties represented and many of the classes very large and of prime quality.

The winners of first, second and third and in some cases fourth fit to show anywhere, and we dare say many of them will win at our large winter shows. We never saw so many breeding pens and good ones at that. In Bantams, other than Game, we noticed some extra fine White and Black Japs. In fact, every bird entered in these two varieties was above the ordinary. First and second winners in the Black Tail variety also came under the head extra, and all of them were good.

White and Black Rose Combs were another quality entry, every bird a good one, and a full entry. One of the best Bantam entries we ever saw at any one show as regards quality.

The judges and their classes are as follows:

Geo. O. Brown, Dominiques Javas, Wh. R. C. Wh. and Dom. Leghorns, Spanish, Andalusians and Anconas, Red Caps, French, Dorkings, Silkies, Sultans and Miscellaneous.

PEDIGREE BREEDING FOR EGG PRODUCTION.

On the Antrim County Council Poultry Farm, Cullybackey, Ireland.

Since 1902 the individual egg scores of some two hundred hens on the above farm have been regularly recorded by trap nests. Only those birds giving high egg averages during the winter 1902-3 were bred from the following spring. The pedigrees of the chickens reared from these birds were carefully kept. This is done by using pedigree trays in the incubators. A few days before hatching time each hen's eggs are placed in a separate hatching chamber, this being made easy by the fact that each egg when taken from the trap nest is marked with the number of the hen that laid it. Before the chickens are removed from their separate compartments they are given the punch mark allotted to their dam's number. This enables their pedigree to be traced at any time.

The pullets from these chickens have been trap-nested from the date of their first egg up to the presnt time, and their scores duly recorded.

It was found that a very heavy layer did not always produce the heaviest layers, but that a hen which gave a good medium score, and whose eggs were strongly fertilized, producing chicks with plenty of vitality, bred pullets which,with scarcely an exception, topped the records last winter, several of them averaging five eggs a week through November, December and January.

Where, however, the heaviest layer produced also strongly fertilized eggs, her progeny all proved high scorers. This was the case with a White Leghorn hen which from November 16, 1902, to the end of September, 1903,laid two hundred and twenty-one eggs. Several of her pullets have nearly reached the two-hundred egg score in eleven months, and will probably exceed it by the end of the twelve months' test which they are now undergoing.

It is, however, in the raising of the general egg-productive standard that results are most noticeable rather than in the production of a few individual high scorers.

The following comparison of the pedigree-bred white Wyandottes with their unselected dams show the improvement in the average winter egg production obtained by the individual egg recording system, coupled with the selection of the fittest for breeding purposes.

During the winter months, November to February inclusive, out of the pedigree-bred progeny, as compared with the unselected parent stock (which were purchased from the best-known laying strains):

1.7 per cent. more birds laid from 50 to 70 eggs.

25.0 per cent. more birds laid from 40 to 50 eggs.

3.3 per cent. less birds laid from 30 to 40 eggs.

23.3 per cent. less birds laid under 30 eggs.

The most striking fact of this comparison is that the number of good medium layers was increased in the progeny by 25 per cent., while the poor layers were reduced by 23.3 per cent.

All the birds on the farm are kept for the production of hatching eggs, and are consequently never forced for laying. Extremely high scoring is, therefore, not expected. A minimum yearly egg production, however, of a hundred and fifty eggs is required from each bird before being used for breeding purposes, and those hens which lay that number could easily be got to produce more if fed for the purpose. As it is, a number of the birds exceed two hundred eggs each in the twelve-month. The object of the system, however, is not to breed a few exceptionally high scorers, but to produce a flock of individual good layers for the improvement of the laying qualities of the stock in the county. This is being accomplished by the distribution of hatching eggs,some twelve thousand being sent out, principally to farmers and cottagers, during the past season, besides over two hundred cockerels.—Poultry, England.

DANBURY, CONN.

October 4 to 8.

The poultry department at the Danbury Fair has become one of the greatest features of the great institution. Mr. Fred Borman, secretary of the department, has succeeded in building up a poultry show that is a model to pattern after. Classification is about perfect, all birds being cooped singly except in rare instances. The care taken of the birds by his assistants, Brundage and Dean, is worthy of special mention.

Judging started Tuesday afternoon and was completed Wednesday noon. The American classes were of course leaders, as is the rule at Danbury. Barred Plymouth Rocks were especially strong in numbers and quality. In cocks, several good ones were not in the best of feather, not having moulted out sufficiently to show to best advantage. First an even colored, closely barred bird in all sections, that will always be dangerous in any company; second another one that when in prime shape will make it warm for the others; 3rd full of quality; 4th large and in good feather, but rather wide in barring, and not as even in the different sections as he should be. Hens a fine lot, first being large, fine in shape, good barring and shown in the very pink of condition; second, bright colored, nicely barred, but not ripe yet; 3rd on same order; 4th another good one. Cockerels rather light, most being too young to determine what they might develop into, first being in the best of trim and showing to best advantage, even in all surface sections; second most promising of all. Pullets a grand lot, first being a beautifully barred bird, the bars even on main,tail feathers being straight and parallel; should prove a hard one to beat at most shows; second another nicely shown bird, good in color and barring and nice in shape; third and fourth very close up.

Buff Rocks, a splendid lot and the Hon. D. A. Nichols did himself proud in placing the ribbons. In cocks, several old winners repeated their triumphs of the past; the same might be said of the hens. Cockerels, rather young, except a few of the winners,but some left out of the money will win the ribbons at later shows. Pullets very warm class, first being a beauty, with second, third and fourth close on her trail.

White Rocks, small classes, but several of the winners first class.

Silver Wyandottes, a nice lot, first hen and pullet being very much above the average and really excellent.

Golden Wyandottes, the best and evenest lot of birds in quality we have handled. It was a treat to see this handsome variety so beautifully represented.

White Wyandottes, strong classes, notably first cock, first and second hens and the winning cockerels; pullets, first a very finely shown bird, very white, good shape; second smaller and younger, but full of Wyandotte quality and will make a grand one when she reaches maturity; third and fourth both fine young birds.

Buff Wyandottes were rather shy in numbers, but made up for it by being all in Class A, notably first and second cock and first hen, the latter being very even and sound in color.

Partridge Wyandottes, a fine lot, notably the first and second cocks, first and second hens and the first cockerel, with the other two showing quality that will prove itself later on; pullets not so strong, albeit first showed nearly the class the hens did. The few Black Wyandottes shown were good in quality. Silver Pencilled Wyandottes numbered four very nice ones.

Some fine Mottled Javas were exhibited. American Dominiques brought a few winners, considerably above the average. While there was a good display of Cochins, Langshans and Dark Brahmas, Light Brahmas were conspicuous by their absence.

Leghorns strong classes, notably S. C. and R. C. Browns, where some beauties were shown; Whites, both S. C. and R. C., also fine in quality. Black Leghorns a good lot. S. C. Buffs represented by one good hen and four Duckwing Leghorns of good quality were in evidence. R. C. Buffs a very fine class, with plenty of quality.

Black Minorcas brought out several very good birds among the winners. Lakenfelders made quite a showing, a number of fine specimens being shown.

Polish brought out some excellent ones in the Plain Golden variety and nice lots in the rest of the classes.

Hamburgs, while not so strong in numbers, made up for it in quality in some of the winners.

French classes light in numbers, but several fine Houdans were among the winners.

Dorkings, light classes, except Whites, which averaged well up in quality. Games small classes with no competition.

Game Bantams, fairly strong, Black Reds leading in quality.

Golden Sebrights, a very good class, the winners being of excellent quality. Silvers, small but contained a few good ones. Same might be said of Rose Combs Light and Dark Brahma Bantams. Cochin Bantams made a fine showing in buffs, blacks and whites, the winners being full of quality in each. The rest of Bantams proved this quality if not their numbers.

The usual good display of Turkeys and Geese, and very good exhibit of Ducks, notably White Pekins, Rouen, Call and Muscovy finished out the exhibit. The awards are:

Say, Drev., do you know who bawls like Smith's bull?

The winners of the guessing contest are T. E. Orr, Grant M. Curtis, A. F. Hunter, Arthur Sharp.

The answer is: He is absolutely pure.

So Drev., send the Fancier to those 4 ducks for a year.

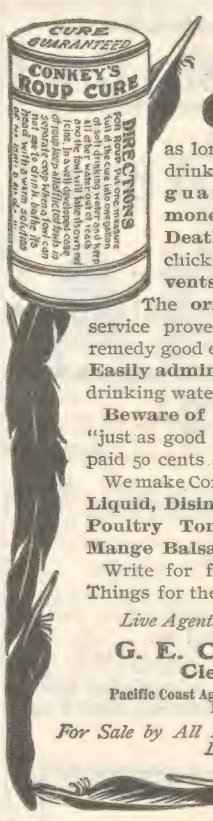
I must tread lightly for fear I offend the fine sensitive feelings of some of the fraternity.

Well, boys, all aboard for St. Louis! I do hope it will be a big gathering.

Would like to ask Mr. Trafford when did Mr. A. F. Hunter change his initials. Has he been swapping with Wyckoff?

According to all accounts there will be borrowed, bought and perhaps stolen birds exhibited at St. Louis.

The large breeders are, or rather have been, scouring the country far and wide for good birds.



Of course, when we made out our entry we expected to exhibit "our own make," but circumstances as to moult and other things happened, so we had to buy.

And, of course, we did not know who we were going to buy from.

Why, of course not.

It was a bad rule, and, mark you, it has and will be winked at.

There seems to be something funny about that cooping business that I can hardly fathom.

But I am gradually beginning to see the dawn.

"Who is to blame?" In Farm-Poultry, current issue, is pretty plain, and there is more truth than fiction in it.

But it's all over now, so I will not comment on it. But my, what a field to work if one chose to.

Cambridge, Mass., will have 10 judges, with perhaps a couple thousand birds. St. Louis has 9,000 birds and about 20 judges. Funny, ain't it?

Well's it won't be long now before the clans meet again.

This being the football season, I suppose Capts. Hewes and Curtis are coaching their men for a final struggle.

I must quit and get my birds ready for St. Louis, or rather some of the birds the other fellow bred.

Now you won't hear anything from me for a couple of weeks, as I am going to St. Louis.

My friend from the little state can have a rest, eh? Old, man, "what's the use?" Must have a little fun, you know.

If I never show up again, you can tell my friends that judging St. Louis was too many for me.

While I am gone, be good. I am going to be good while I am away. Matilda is going. See!

WEST POINT.

THE SIXTEENTH ANNUAL SHOW.

New York Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association.

At Madison Square Garden, the greatest exhibition hall in America, will be held January 3rd-7th, 1904. The management will be the same as heretofore, which is a guarantee that the high standard will be maintained, making it the success it always has been, and to insure to the fanciers numerous facilities for transacting the largest sales made at any show in this country. Horse Show week, Dog Show week, and Poultry Show week, at Madison Square Garden, attract thousands of people from all parts of the country. Blue ribbons won here have a value as well as an honor; prices obtained conclusively demonstrate that fanciers want the best and will pay the price for birds entered at this exhibition. Premium lists will be ready about Nov. 15th and may be had by applying to H. V. CRAWFORD, Sec'y,

Montclair, N. J.

BREEDING PEN PRIZES AT HERALD SQUARE SHOW.

Editor American Fancier: I wish to thank you very much for the publication of my announcement in your last issue. I forgot, however, to call the attention of your readers to the fact that the entry fee for breeding pens is $2.50, and that cash prizes for those entries will be given, $4.00 for 1st prize and $2.00 for 2nd.

WARREN, ILL.

The Inter-State Poultry and Pet Stock Assn. hold their annual exhibition at Warren, Ill., Dec. 12-17, 1904. Judge, F. H. Shellabarger.

This organization has a large membership and expect to have a show that will rank with the best. They are getting out a neat catalogue with liberal premiums and their secretary, Mr. B. L. Wright, will be glad to mail you the same for the asking.

CORRECTION.

Editor American Fancier: In your issue of Sept. 24, I notice an error in your awards at the Toronto exhibition ("Canada National") just closed. You have Mr. R. Oke credited with getting the Bronze medal for best collection of French birds. The card was placed on his birds by mistake, and the Supt., Dr. Bell, (who checked over the list of awards) wrote me that this medal was awarded to me. Trusting you will make the above correction.

POULTRY SHOWS.

What is a successful poultry show? This question will be answered in different ways by different people. The exhibitor, the officers of the show and the visiting public all look at it from different standpoints, but there are several reasons why I think the show to be held at Providence the last of November will be a success.

First, the exhibitor is assured of his premium money, for the association has $1,000.00 from the state. Next you have a grand hall to show the birds in, and last but not least, you have an old poultryman for superintendent, whose assistants are also well known poultrymen. The superintendent of pet stock can't pass a cat in the street without trying to make friends with it, and in President Williams, Treas. Congdon and Secretary Brown, the society has a trio of Blue Ribbon winners. I would say to would-be exhibitors, go to Providence by all means. GEO. W. WEED.

ORPINGTON WEIGHT.

Editor American Fancier:

Seneca Falls accepts the apology offered by New York and, as the point of view has been shifted from shape to weight, would offer as an object lesson a Buff Orpington cockerel, hatched April 8th, weighed October 8th, 8 pounds. I trust this fact will not "disturb the tranquality" of Christopher street. It is not an unusual weight among Orpingtons at 6 months old.

But what has this to do with the original controversy? How does Mr. Howells' illustration, where a Plymouth Rock chick weighed more than a Brahma chick, support his contention that the Orpington should be classed with the Langshan?

IRVING CROCKER.

CORRECTION.

Statistical reports are placing the egg product at the head of the list, with corn a close second.

This is gratifying from a poultryman's point of view, and is directly traceable to the uniformly high prices paid for eggs during the past year.

The cold October days are a warning to poultrymen to prepare for the coming of winter, better a day too soon than a day too late.

Speaking of the necessary work attached to poultry raising, a correspondent in the New York Tribune Farmer says:

"When a man is led to believe that he can "pick up clear dollars from the hen yards without hard labor" he has a very strong motive for going into the business. He also has a wrong idea of both the labor and profit items, and the only result will be disappointment, which may culminate in disgust. As a matter of fact, there is lots of work in the successful management of a poultry plant. Much of that work is of the kind that is unpleasant and uncongenial to may people.

The work of feeding the flocks for a year makes it necessary to handle tons of feed, the labor of which is not lightened any by the fact that it is fed to hens instead of cows. Then the work of cleaning the houses is always hard, and when done simply as a mechanical act is more or less disagreeable. Performed with intelligence, as a necessary part of the business, it loses its unpleasant features—a good illustration of the need and worth of brains in farming.

Keeping the houses in repair and the yards fenced, furnishing scratching material and the dust bath, keeping up the almost constant fight with mites and vermin—these things and others too numerous to mention make the business one of work and watchfulness.

There is no success in the business world without work. Success comes to the man who works intelligently and perseveringly. The labor in poultry keeping is such that it must be guided by intelligence. There is no room for unthinking labor here, but every act needs to be the result of thought. There is much to do and much to learn in the poultry business, whether run as a specialty or as a branch of general farming. The man who learns enough about the hen and her management to realize that the subject of study is great and the field for profitable labor great, also has advanced far enough to be beyond the need of advice from any one.

Holding out false inducements can result only in affecting the industry disastrously. The fact that the business is so large and so capable of expansion and extension is the reason why there should never be any misrepresentations made concerning it. Discouraged men and abandoned hen houses are not good advertisements for our business. Let these are in many instances the direct result of false teachings by those who should have known better.

Because the business is a good one and the profits satisfactory and because it can well be increased throughout the country are good and sufficient reasons for placing its needs and demands plainly and truthfully before the public. It is true that there are dollars to be made from the hen yards, but it will take work of both the mind and hand to get them. The man who thinks clearest and best and works most intelligently will make the most profit from the business."

Each breed has its use and admirers; lacking admirers, they soon pass into general bankruptcy.

A person admiring certain qualities in a breed, need not discard it on someone's sayso, an owner's flock is his personal property, and from a fancier's point of view, the traits of excellence he admires in them concerns no one but himself, but commercially he must follow the standard laid down by the buyer and consumer.

If he breeds Minorcas, and his customers demand birds with enormous combs, and such specimens are given the preference at the shows, he must, notwithstanding his own perference may run to a medium or small comb, breed to the opposite type.

Should his objective be market poultry, and his customer demands a yellow skin and legs, all the Englishmen in or out of the United Kingdom might tell him the white skinned fowls of Europe make the best table poultry, he would still cling to his money makers, and preach the doctrine of his faith.

Why should a goose farmer propagate colored geese, when white ones bring four cents a pound more in the market?

Again, every big duck farm in this country, making a specialty of spring ducks, is stocked with Pekins. I have often heard the editor say, the Rouen is preferable from roast duck standpoint, but you don't suppose any of these duck men are going to give up their Pekins and commit financial suicide on that account.

White eggs sell for two cents more than brown in this market at wholesale, and five cents at retail. The breeder who is supplying this demand isn't interested in the general purpose fowl; his purpose is to get that extra two cents on as many dozen as possible.

On the other hand the breeder who is supplying roasters for the market, knows he must, if he would get the highest prices, supply the plump yellow skinned birds of four pounds weight or over, and that he must be content with five cents a pound less for all that are under-sized and off color.

Five cents a pound and a pound more on a carcass is a powerful argument in favor of certain breeds, from a money making standpoint, and the exclusion of others is easily accounted for.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

MONEY MADE

By Using Geyer's Champion Disinfectant & Vermin Destroyer

There are, in all classes of powders before the public, many calculated for the sure cure of lice and vermin and a dozen other purposes, yet are they reliable, and have they produced the results claimed?

In offering this compound, we offer a powder such as is not before the public, and fills a place that none other can for the purpose intended—a positive, sure disinfectant and destroyer of all vermin that invests either poultry, small animals, those of the barn yard.

It is a perfect destroyer of all disease germs, and produces a healthy odor wherever distributed. It is a sure cure for gapes, in young chicks.

If you are skeptical and don't believe in Powders or compouud because of many worthless ones on the market, we ask, please cast aside your prejudice and give this compound a trial. It is put up in 2 pound boxes. Price 25c. 560tf

TWELFTH ANNUAL SALE.

We will have our Twelfth Annual Sale for the month of NOVEMBER of the World Wide Known Egg Producer,

BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC.

On account of the late Spring this year, there were less birds raised than ever before, so the demand for fresh laid eggs will be the greater.

To help supply this extra demand a little BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC in the morning mash will do the work. It starts the pullets laying early and keeps them laying all through the winter. It helps the old hens through moulting and gets them to laying before the very cold weather sets in.

Those who have used BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC once will never try anything else, as it does more than we say it will do.

The regular price is 1 lb., 25c; by mail 40c; or, 5 boxes, $1.00.

We will sell during the month of NOVEMBER only a 1 lb. box, 15c; by mail, 30c! or, 7 boxes $1.00, shipped via express or freight from New York.

This is a big saving to our customers, old and new, and those wishing to double their profits should take advantage of this special offer.

At these reduced prices, positively no orders filled before November 1st nor after November 30th.

We sell all kinds of POULTRY SUPPLIES and all are listed in our Immense Illustrated Poultry Supply Catalogue, mailed free. Send for one.

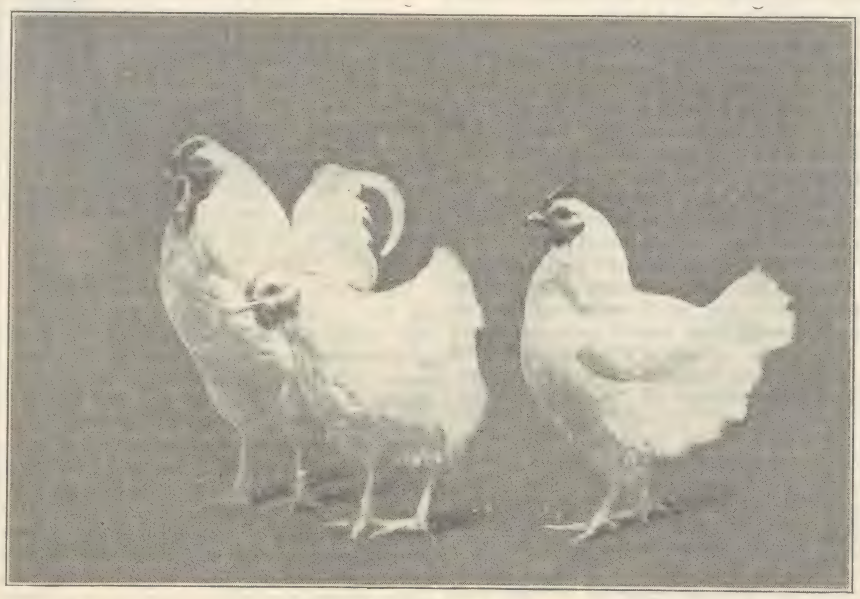
The Story of a Poultry Farm



The Struggle, Trials, Experiences and Successes of a Practical Poultry Fancier,

By W. H. Card.

In the 6 years' experience of which I have written I learned more about the hen business as a business than I ever dreamed of or even imagined, in the 20 odd years before. One fact is deeply impressed in my mind, and that is this: That I never will become a millionaire in this my chosen vocation, but let me tell you,dear reader, I have also learned that it is a life capable of making one independent of politics, trusts and the treadmill existence of a shop-worker; in short, a free man, which is one point better than being a millionaire. I have learned that on a hen farm it is not so urgent to search the pocketbook to figure on the next meal, it's there for the getting. I have also learned what it is to forget that there is a Saturday night when one's pay envelope is handed out. It's give and take, and at times it seems all take; but the books show that the buttered side of one's bread is up. Among other things I have learned that there are many foolish fancies, notions and superstitions anent the culture of fowls. Setting hens in the full of the moon, eggs being spoiled by thunder-showers, prenatal influences of white rooster in a black hen house, and many as out of joint. Common sense uses two words to explain it all, "fertility and infertility." A setting of 13 eggs went the allotted time and on the 21st day a thunder shower prevented every egg from hatching. I railed against fate and thunder storms in general, but an investigation revealed 13 very nice unfertile eggs. As to pre-natal influences, I have learned that like begets like, which is a story of itself. I've learned that 13 is a lucky number when setting eggs, only when the hen keeps her nest and the eggs are fertile, when setting eggs only when the hen day eggs. One thing I have yet to learn, "to tell which eggs will hatch pullets and which cockerels." In short I have learned that to properly care for one's hens, there is no time for foolishness, foibles or folderols, that a 2½ cent egg can multiply as fast as a 5c trolley fare; that it has as much claim in the business world, if not more. One fact in the constant care and cleanliness of quarters, has been brought to my notice, which is, that the continual and systematic use of lice paints and powders has not only kept down the lice pest, but has done away with feather eating, scaly legs and tendencies to roup. Since the beginning I have kept roosts well dressed with lice paint, using it once a week in summer and once a month in winter, the hens roosting thereon causes scaly leg to disappear, never to re-appear. Using the lice powders on setting hens drives away the parasite which causes feather eating, and the hens soon forget the trick because the itching sensation is gone. In the last five years I've had no feather eating among my hens. Constant use of the lice paint acts as a disinfectant,hence the lessening of roup tendencies. The last but not the least nor only thing I have learned self reliance, which gives me a clear title to the independent life of a practical hen fancier. Years ago when railroading, I remembered a rule we boys had relative to jumping on and off trains. "Keep your head and you'll keep your feet." And 6 years ago when the outcome was uncertain, I tacked that little maxim up in my memory chest, and the fruit it bore was self-reliance. I have made it part of the business to always investigate the why and wherefore of every happening unexplained, and make note of investigations in a book for that purpose. Investigation is the countersign to progress.

EXPENSIVE MISTAKES NOW VISIBLE.

A Talk With the Amateur.

After having been through the mill of vivid imagination, stimulating expectations and then sore disappointment and almost discouragement, it seems to me, as I look back to, and dwell on the ever fresh remembrances of the by-gone days of my early experiences with chickens, that had I, at that time, obtained certain advice and followed same, I could have avoided much of that displeasure, many sleepless nights, and not a few of those vain regrets, all of which are sure to accompany ignorant experience.

Now when I started in the poultry business, it was my chief aim to breed the best Brown Leghorns in this or any other country, and to do it just as soon as my very limited means and time would permit. This was certainly a very enthusiastic spirit.

It was all right as far as it went, but as you know, spirits are stimulating, and should be employed sparingly, and should be accompanied by substance and foundation; in this case, common sense and good judgment, which was lacking in a degree.

My idea was, that I was naturally a little better adapted to the business than the average and that I could look around among the ordinary fine-bred flocks, pick out the best birds, mate them up, raise humming dandies and in a few years have the "only stuff."

My ideas were put into action,which soon resulted in living realities, in my sight.

I paid 75 cents each for 19 females, pullets they were, and most of them laying. Then I scouted around and found a splendid looking lot of Brown Leghorn cockerels, and to my delight I was offered my choice for 50c each—full grown they were, too. Well, I selected a couple (so in case one should die, I wouldn't be without any) and I thought that they were about as near perfect as they came at that time. No white in the plumage, yellow legs, red eyes, white lobes, nice, large, evenly matched combs and great shape; at least they seemed great to me. After culling out six of the pullets that had feathers on their shanks or white in their wings, I mated the remaining 13 to what I considered the best cockerel. I then had what I called a choice selected mating, and had an idea that it was a little superior to most anything else of the kind that could be found. About this time I thought I would like to read something about the breed,and through the kindness of a friend I obtained the use of several poultry papers. I read six, re-read every item on Brown Leghorns that I could find, and thereby spent many a pleasant evening in studying other men's ideas of the breed.

It was not long before I subscribed for one or two poultry papers, one of which was the American Fancier, and shortly after I became the owner of a "Standard of Perfection."

From what I had previously read in poultry papers, I began to think that my birds were not quite perfection. But when I read the Standard description over and over again to be sure I was not mistaken, it made me wonder if mine were really Brown Leghorns, or just merely brown chickens. "Striped with black!" Why, the meaning of those words nearly made me turn pale; I had never noticed anything of the sort in my birds. Had I overlooked it? Perhaps so, but I was afraid to look for it now, for fear of a "knock-out" blow.

I read on. Wing-bar, bay, bow and butt, primaries and secondaries,fronts; coverts and eleventeen other things that I had never known of. It was most like Latin to me, and I scratched my head. Great Scott!. It's like studying Webster. To find out what one word means you have to look at nine others, and then the tenth one will refer you to the first, and then, well, you've just got to figure it out by sort of splitting the difference.

It was hard, to be sure, but I kept at it, purely for the love of it, and thus I obtained some knowledge of the breed. All this time my first crop of Brown Leghorns was growing in fine shape. I had some hatched in April, and four of the cockerels had such nice 5 point combs that I decided to send them to the fair which was to be held in October. When the time came to send them,I washed their legs and feet, put them in a box that I had rigged for the purpose, and shipped them.

I awaited very anxiously for returns. You may (perhaps) imagine how I felt when I was informed that I had won 1st and 2nd cockerels in competition with five other cockerels, representing three other breeders older than I. This was certainly encouraging. I had the stuff now and no mistake.

All that I thought of that day that was not pertaining to chickens, could be printed on a cent. I could see myself winning 1st and 2nd cockerels at all the coming shows, and had it all figured out,how I would clear expenses in nice shape.

A day or two after my birds arrived home with their first victory, I received a letter from a man inquiring my price for the 1st prize cockerel. I replied that I did not care to sell him, but that I had many other fine ones, and made special mention of my $5 "trained to show" birds, as I put it.

I received an answer soon, saying that the 1st prize cockerel was what he wanted,and would willingly pay any reasonable price for him.

Of course I did not know what he would call reasonable, but wrote that I would sell him for $25.00, but that I was not at all particular about it. Well, the man did not write to me again, and the cockerel's face got white, so I couldn't show him. About one year later I sold him for $2.00, which was a fair price for him.

I showed several times at the later shows, but the other fellows got the prizes.

Before the season closed I could plainly see that I didn't have the "stuff," and that I had made a great mistake in the beginning, consequently I purchased a few good hens and pullets of a reliable and successful breeder. These, mated to a cockerel that I raised from a setting of eggs that I got in exchange, are the foundation of what I have to-day, although I have introduced new blood in the female line.

Now as I look back, I can see that my first season was practically wasted, from a fancy standpoint. Of course I had the experience, and I learned by it, but the price was this, that I was just one year behind the mark of where I should have been had I started right.

By starting right I mean to purchase two or three good birds (birds that by good authority you know to be good and properly mated) rather than to get several of ordinary or fair quality. Don't forget that they must be well mated, (and such work can be done only by one who knows) for the best specimens improperly mated, will produce only ordinary stock.

In regard to price, I would say: Do not pay less than $5.00 for a male and $3.00 for a female (if your desire is to breed high quality) and as much more as you can afford, so long as the value is there. It is best to employ the services of a competent and trustworthy friend, in order to avoid mistakes, which are so often the result of ignorance.

In conclusion I will say, that it does not require much capital to start and to progress with reasonable rapidity in the fancy poultry business, but it is necessary that common sense, good judgment, patience and perseverance be applied liberally, otherwise the plant will never bloom. The poultry yard is no place for the poor, and easily discouraged mortal, and he who is blessed with fortune, but lacking in the more important element, might better save his money, as soon as the fun is worn out. Under whatever conditions you start and continue, you must study. Know you business as well as possible. There is always something to learn. Yes, always.

S. L. TUTTLE.

.THE QUALIFICATIONS OF POUL-. TRYMEN.

Up to the present time the best poultrymen have sprung from a comparatively small class, who have been connected with poultry-keeping through generation after generation. A father brings up his sons to the business which occupies his time, and naturally the lads, for when they first begin to reason for themselves, commence to amass all the elementary knowledge which stands them in such good stead in after life. Our best poultrymen have come from this class in the past, though it does not necessarily follow that they are possessed of any instinctive qualifications, but rather suggests that, as the demand for poultrymen is necessarily limited, very few outsiders compete for the vacant posts. What is more, an outsider has less chance of securing one of these vacant positions than a man who has been bred and born in the fancy.

Now, however, the demand for poultrymen of all grades is steadily increasing, and outsiders are beginning to realize that there is more attractiveness in this than in other forms of skilled labor, and perhaps greater opportunities for the man who rises to the top of the tree. Instead of coming from the old select poultry fraternity, our poultrymen are now drawn from all classes. Young men of gentle birth, and no other qualification, are not above engaging themselves for a pound a week and board (when they can get it.) Artisans with a taste for the fancy find poultry-keeping a more satisfactory source of income than carpentering or shoemaking. Small farmers and their sons, too, not to mention gamekeepers, all help to swell the throng. Consequently, while the supply of really good men always remains limited, there is a vast army of others who are bad or indifferent, and who, with a little practice and quick wit, or as the case may be, a long experience and poor intelligence, are mainly anxious to improve themselves at the expense of their employer. There are some young men who, after serving twelve months on a poultry farm, apparently imagine they are equal to managing a fancier's yard with the best. Moreover, they never actually realize how very little they know until several years have passed,and they begin to acquire some real knowledge. But, in the meantime, the person who would employ them should recollect that a first-class poultryman is not made in twelve months.

The qualifications of a first class poultryman are legion. Usually the entire responsibility of the establishment is thrown upon him, and he must be an expert in breeding exhibition poultry. That means that he must have sufficent knowledge of any variety to breed the best specimens, being provided, of course, with the best materials. Not only must he breed, but he must know how to show, and how to keep his exhibition specimens in tip-top condition. To one conversant with this art it seems comparatively easy, but one has only to go round the shows to realize how little the majority of amateurs of some years standing appear to know about this all important subject. The mere act of washing a white fowl for show is in itself an operation that may make all the difference to that bird's chance. There are one or two men in this country who can wash really well, and they enjoy a reputation among their fellows that is by no means to be despised. There are plenty of others who can wash a fowl clean, but it is a different matter to turn it out in such form as to compel admiration by its loveliness. In addition to all this a man must know how to produce fertile eggs, to hatch, to rear,and to grow his youngsters.

And even for an acknowledged expert the duties are very trying. He needs to be always alert, ready to take a lesson from anything that catches his eye, for a poultryman has never finished learning. He must work both early and late, for there are no fixed hours in the poultry business, and if there are birds requiring preparation for a show on the morrow the attendant must forego his night's rest if he cannot get them done at any other time. For many people travelling by train provides pleasant relaxation; but to the poultryman it is merely a source of anxiety and trouble. Sometimes he may have to travel two or three nights running without getting any sleep, and at the end of it all there is the trouble of making the birds comfortable, of staging them fit and well, and the rush of packing up again and catching crowded trains. The poultryman who looks well after his master's interests needs to be of iron constitution; to know his way about the world,to know where to pick his friends,and above all to behave like a gentleman, and act like a sportsman. No wonder there are so very few ideal poultrymen about.

Taking them all in all, the poultrymen in this country are a class of men whom it is a distinct pleasure to meet. Intelligent, well read, deep thinkers, they are deservedly held in high respect. So great is the responsibility laid upon them that it is very seldom one comes across a man who does not take as great a personal interest in his charges as though they actually belonged to him. Such keenness as these men display is not surpassed by any class of servant in the world.

Naturally, there are many pitfalls for the young poultryman. Journeyings from show to show bring him into contact with all classes of men, some older than himself and better financed. A man who spends his time at a public bar, either in or outside the show, is not very profitable to his employer, and a youth may spoil his whole career by attempting to ape the manners of his elders. There are other temptations, too, which may lead to disqualifications and ruin for a fancier must trst his good name with his poultryman, and if he once plays false he is not likely to have a second chance. In this business, as in all others, honesty is the best policy, and no one realizes it better than a first-class and successful poultryman.—E., Poultry, England.

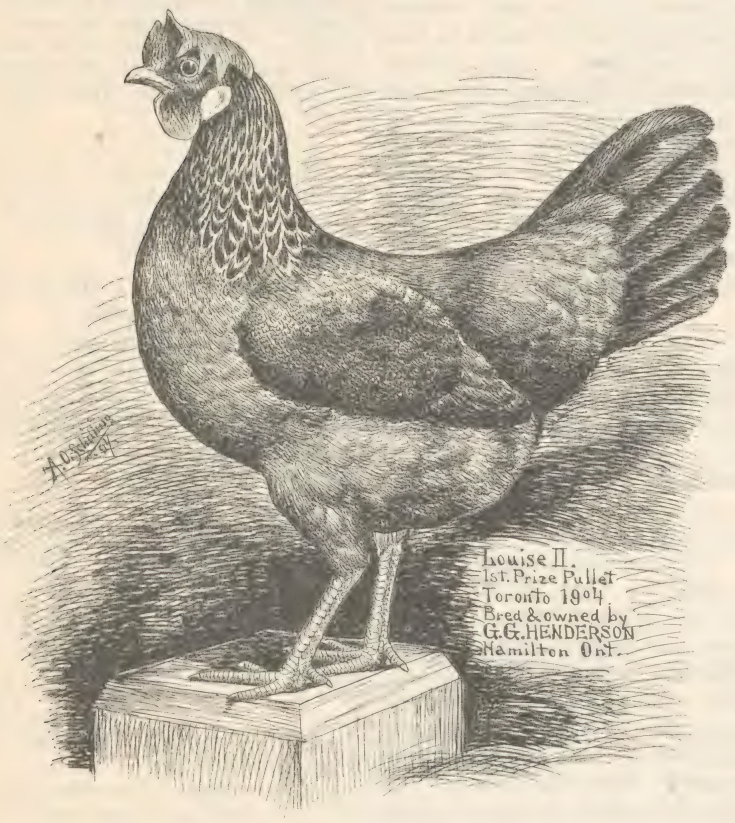
ANCIENT METHODS OF INCUBATION.

In a previous article I alluded to the fact that the ancient Egyptians were past masters in the art of artificial incubation. A short description of the methods they employed all these hundreds of years ago may not be without interest to the present day up-to-date fancier. It may be added that the artificial contrivance has been handed down to the modern inhabitants of Egypt, and is still employed by the Copts and others.

The "incubator" is a room about eleven feet square, with a flat roof,and four feet in height, over which is another chamber of the same size,with a vaulted roof, about nine feet high; while a small aperture in the centre of the roof admits light, and communicates directly with the lower chamber, through the ceiling of which it is pierced. In cold weather this ventilating shaft is shut and a lamp is kept burning. The upper room or oven is divided into eight chambers, four on each side of the central passage. Each chamber has two troughs against the back and front walls running parallel with the passage, based with earthen slabs three-quarters of an inch thick. In these troughs fires are lighted twice a day. The first dies away at midday; the second, lighted at three p. m., lasts until eight o'clock. In the lower chambers the eggs are placed on mats strewed with bran in two lines corresponding to and immediately below the fires, where they remain half a day. They are then removed to positions at right angles, and other eggs taken from a heap in the centre are placed in their stead, thus ensuring that all get a share of the warmest positions.

The eggs are changed thus in regular succession until the expiration of six days. They are then tested by being held up towards a strong light, and if they show an opaque substance within they are returned to the oven for four more days, being regularly changed as before. At the expiration of four days they are removed to another oven, over which there are no fires, where they lie for five days in one heap, after which they are placed separately about one or two inches apart on mats sprinkled with a little bran. They are during six or seven days continually turned, and shifted from one part of the mat to another, all outside air being carefully excluded; and are constantly examined by the rearer, who applies each egg to his upper eyelid. If the egg feels cold, the chicken is dead. Warmth greater than the human skin is a favorable sign. Thin-shelled eggs are said to hatch in about eighteen days. It is worthy of note that the average heat of the building in any part does not descend below 88 deg., and that the temperature of the ovens only averages about 96 deg.—considerably less than the temperature of a fowl.



On an average two-thirds of the eggs hatch, and are returned by the rearers to the proprietors, who keep one-half of the chickens as payment for their expenses. The proprietors of the ovens make the round of the villages to collect the eggs from the peasants, and give them in charge of the rearers, who place them on mats in the "incubator," without previous examination. This, briefly, concludes the process of artificial incubation in Egypt.

Several facts should be particularly noted. First of all, we find that during the first ten days, during in other words, the period of most rapid growth of the embryo, the eggs are regularly moved twice daily. Secondly, they are not subjected to a continuous maximum heat, but are shifted every twelve hours to a less heat. From the tenth day onwards the eggs are only exposed to the average temperature of the whole building (88 deg.) and during the last six days they are so placed that the air can freely circulate between them. Furthermore, all eggs containing dead embryos are removed, so that the living are not jeopardized by breathing contaminated atmosphere or by the proximity of the dead.

It may be observed that no mention is made of moisture; in fact, the use of bran suggests exactly the reverse. The heat used is essentially a dry heat, and it is apparently successful. It must be left to the thoughtful reader to decide whether our methods of laying eggs on a surface with a slight concavity and above moisture can be improved upon or not. The matter is at least worthy of experiment.

It is remarkable that though fowls abounded in Egypt, they are unrepresented in the sculptures. Plutarch tells us that white and saffron-colored cocks were sacrificed to the god Anubis, thus proving the antiquity of the latter now fashionable color; and we know their universal use as an article of food; but they have never yet been found embalmed in the tombs.

Of the goose, on the contrary, there is constant mention, the variety kept being the common species still found on the banks of the Nile. The goose was the emblem of the god Seb, and was offered with its feathers unplucked. One sculpture on a tomb near the Pyramids gives a representation of the whole process of plucking, preparing and cooking this bird, and another shows the collecting and counting of the eggs, the flocks of geese, goslings being brought in baskets, etc., proving the value attached to the bird five thousand years ago.—C. J. Davies in Poultry, England.

CRANGLE AT HAGERSTOWN.

One of the best exhibits of Waterfowl that I have ever judged. The best of the class was the exhibition of Pekin Ducks. I can faithfully say, it was one of the very best I have ever seen in America. The Pekin Ducks were in shape and the right color, and one of the strong points, good yellow bills, free from specks.

Muscovy Ducks. These were also fine in color, the best seen in years. The Cayugas were good in color, and what was good about this class, no birds were disqualified for white. Indian Runners were also a fine lot. In the Call ducks, I found two stars. Those of Bill Minnich were one of the best pairs of Gray Calls I have seen.

The exhibit of geese, though not large, was strong in color.

The Brown China and White China excelled in the geese classes. Take all the water fowl as a class, very high in quality.

Turkeys.—It is seldom these days that you find a large strong class of Turkeys, but they certainly had them at Hagerstown this year, the best class that I have seen for a number of years. They were all varieties, of course, the most popular were the mammoth Bonze Turkeys; of these there were some beauties. The first prize pair being large in size, perfect in color and shape and a great credit to any show, and I found a few pair of what should be a very popular variety, the White Holland, there were also a few pairs of beauties of Black Turkeys which ought to be bred more in this country, as from my experience they are one of the best varieties of all turkeys.

Generally you will find a large Ornamental exhibit in most of the best winter shows, but it is seldom that you find a large class in fall shows. One of the very best exhibits I have seen in years of Pheasants were on exhibition at Hagerstown. Although the birds were not in full feather, they are far enough along to show their shape, especially the Golden. In this class were to be found Goldens, Reeves, English Ring-neck, Mongolian and others.

I had the pleasure to judge the very strong class of Cavies. They were the best I have seen in several years. The incubator and brooder display was far above the average.

Indian Games.—In years gone by we have all seen very strong classes in the above variety. But this year the standard was way above the average, very fine birds, and no real poor birds in the class.

The White Indians were all very fine quality, all the right kind of white in color, also having the shape and size which many of them lack. In the Malay class there was one very fine cock and hen, grand in size, shape and color.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1904.

The St. Louis show is on this week and next.

A complete report, written by a specially selected corps of competent fanciers, will appear in The American Fancier of November 5.

The attendance of poultrymen in the Mound City is very large, but many prominent fanciers of the east and south are among the missing.

The president of the American Poultry Association, Mr. D. Lincoln Orr, and the writer, met at Albany, N. Y., Sunday evening, prior to the former's departure for St. Louis. Mr. Orr has an exhibit at the World's Fair and will handle the "ribbons" when he gets on the chair at the A. P. A. meeting. Mr. A. O. Schilling, the artist, joined Mr. Orr at Rochester, and the pair traveled together to Anheuser Buschville.

The writer regrets his inability to be present at St. Louis, but can assure the readers of The American Fancier that this paper is being looked after by a very able staff.

We have just received a copy of the new poultry paper published at Freeport, Ill., entitled "Poultry." It is the handsomest, finest and most pretentious paper in its line ever issued in this wide, wide world. It is beautifully printed, filled with good reading and should score a "big hit." We congratulate Editor Purvis and his able associates in giving to the American poultrymen such a tempting and valuable magazine at such a low price, viz.: 50 cents a year. We advise our readers to send for a copy at once. We will also be glad to receive subscriptions for same on this basis: .The American Fancier and "Poultry," one year for $1.25.

Mr. Henry Trafford, editor of Poultry Success, informs us that he has been selected as one of the judges at the Chicago show. Good. Evidently the editors have not fallen from grace in the Windy City. Mr. Trafford has our best wishes for his debut as judge at such an important show.

That good old veteran, Philander Williams, passed through the old Mohawk valley Sunday morning, enroute for St. Louis, where he will officiate as one of the judges this week. The Johnstown fanciers wish him all kinds of good fortune and a pleasant trip.

A poultry institute under the auspices of the State Agricultural society will be held at Johnstown, N. Y., the first week in December. The local poultrymen have the matter in charge, and will provide for the entertainment of the speakers and visitors. The historic old court house has been secured for the meeting. We are assured that Mr. T. E. Orr and other bright speakers will be sent here to do the talking.

The Herald Square show premium list has reached our desk. It is a most complete book and has the most liberal classification in poultry, pigeons, poultry stock, cage birds, etc., ever printed. This, the first of the New York shows to be held, promises to be conducted on a most liberal basis and is destined to open up a new field in the fancy.

The announcement of the famous Madison Square Garden show at New York, which appeared last week, promises a greater show than ever and we are of the opinion that the Empire City of the United States will give the poultry, pigeon and pet stock business a boom that will be far reaching in its results.

The American Fancier will report both these shows in detail without bias, fear or favor. Our readers pay to get the news and that is what we propose giving them at all times.

Look out for Boston! Preparations for the big show in the Hub are actively in progress and the great New England event is looked forward to by hundreds of the best fanciers.

Major Theodore Sternberg, U. S. A., is now on the retired list and living at his old home, Ellsworth, Kansas, but will spend a few weeks at St. Louis and catch the chicken fever again. It's dollars to doughnuts that the Major will be breeding Cochins again next year, and perchance give a forcible illustration of the saying: "The pen is mightier than the sword." For be it remembered, Theodore Steinberg is a forcible writer and one who knows what he is writing about. We are glad to have him back in this country after years of service in the Philippines.

The fall show season ends at St. Louis next week. The winter season begins next month, the first large show being held at Herald Square, New York, November 28 to December 3, with Danbury, Conn., in line the same week, with the usual fine display. Sanatoga, Pa., and Allegheny, Pa., come in just ahead of the above, so there is plenty of "ginger" in the opening campaign in the east.

Mr. John C. Blunck of this city has returned home after a most successful trip lasting from the middle of August to the twentieth of this month. His fine string of Bantams and Games were exhibited at nearly all the big fairs and after counting up all expenses, "John" was over a thousand simoleons ahead of the game. During all that time he handled the birds himself, lost but five and brought the rest home in fine condition. Quite a record.

Mr. E. A. Trist of Salem, N. J., a son of Esculapius, while a gold standard man politically, has Bryan beaten into pulp as a silverite, when it comes to Wyandottes. The doctor has launched his craft and it will be well for small boats to keep near shore. We believe, however, that he has listened to the seductive voice of Dr. A. T. Beckett, the original Wyandotte Silverite and started in to dally with the laced beauties. Silver Wyandottes are a-booming and it would not surprise us in the least to see Doctor Angelo Thoroughbred Beckett starting up in Silvers again. The last time we saw the doctor he held forth about lacing, open centers, striped hackles and pad-open centers, striped hackles and saddles so much that it is a sure sign of what is coming in the near future. We do hope the two gentlemen from Salem will meet in the arena next winter and find out who gets the best lacing.

The following letter explains itself:

Springfield, Mass., Oct. 18, 1904.
Editor American Fancier:

Your comment in the Fancier of Oct. 18, that T. E. Orr declined to use this (decimal.) score card and stood up for the A. P. . card at the Springfield show last winter is all right, except the main facts. First, Mr. Orr did not decline to us the decimal score card. Second, Mr. Orr used the decimal score card, but added "T. P." for typical carriage, a characteristic which the A. P.A. considers worth 10 points in some classes and only 8 points in others. The A. P. A. scor card was not used at the last Springfield show, neither will it be at the coming one. Please give space to this.

Yours very truly,
EDWIN C. POWELL,
Press Committee.

The following clipping taken from the proceedings of the American Poultry Association corroberates the statement made by us in our October 18 issue. Mr. T. E. Orr made the following statement:

"I went to the Springfield show, a score card show, and when the score cards were handed to me I saw they were the decimal score cards. I said to the secretary, 'That is not the score card of the American Poultry Association and I can't use it.' He said he didn't know what was wrong with them. He was not then a member of the American Poultry Association, although he is now a life member. Many secretaries are in the same situation—they don't know any difference. Said he, 'What will you do?' I said, 'If you insist on my using that card I will throw up my contract.' He insisted on my acting as judge. Then I said to him, 'I will change every score card, and put in typical carriage in every card, and I insist that you show that I recognized the American Poultry Association in my score card.' He said, 'All right, go on and do it.' So there is once, at least, where the contract was not carried out. After the work was done I asked the secrtary, 'What did Mr. Felch say?' He said 'I told him about it, and he laughed, and he said, "Of course Orr woudn't use that score card; he would stultify himself, ("stultify" was the very word he used), he would stultify himself as secretary of the American Poultry Association if he did."'"

The following letter received from Dr. N. R. Wood will be read with interest by many, and especially by our old friend, Mr. Jacobs:

Washington, D. C., Oct. 10, 1904.
Editor American Fancier:

I am very much amused at Mr. Jacobs' ignorance regarding the jungle fowl, Gallus Bankiva being extinct. If he will please call at the National Museum, I shall take great pleasure in showing him some skins, not taken many years ago, either. Did he have the least knowledge of the peculiar moult of the male of said specei, he would have never made such extravagant remarks. I too have said fowls alive, and have witnessed this moult. I will not state what it is but leave this to the all-wise Jacobs to tell. Pardon this liberty, but 'twas too tempting for me to remain silent. The Bankiva is in no danger of being exterminated.

N. R. WOOD,
U. S. National Museum.

Lest we forget. The American Fancier is published every week in the year. It costs just one dollar for fifty-two numbers.

Tionesta, Pa., will hold its third annual exhibition the third week in January. We are pleased to announce that Mr. F. A. Keller will judge the show. He lives in the city where the latter is to be held and has done much to build it up.

The Allegheny Fanciers' club will hold its fourth annual show at Allegheny, Pa., November 21 to 26. Mr. T. E Orr will judge the poultry, Mr. Geo. F. Erbe the pigeons, and Mr. J. Feraday the pet stock. This excellent show expects about five or six hundred entries and should be well patronized by the fanciers of Pittsburg, Allegheny and surrounding sections.

Mr. Edgar Briggs was elected president of the Wallkill Valley and Hudson River Poultry association, which is a deserved compliment to an honest and hard-working fancier. The coming show at Walden promises to be one of the greatest ever pulled off by

That is the unbeaten record of the Prairie State Incubators: 20 sold first year—20,000 sold in 1903. Prominent duck and poultry breeders favor the Prairie State because it's always reliable and gives high per cent hatches. The United States Government uses them exclusively. Be sure to send for our free, illustrated catalog full of pictures—among them photos of incubator rooms where 20 to 80 of our machines are in active operation.

GREAT SHOW OF ANGORA GOATS.

A Novelty and Feature at the Herald Square Show, New York.

The poultry, pigeon and pet stock show to be held at the Herald Square Exhibition Hall, November 28 to December 3, is attracting the attention of thousands of fanciers. The hall itself, located in the heart of the city, occupying the topmost story of Macy's mammoth building at 34th streets and Broadway, is built on modern lines, containing 56,000 square feet of floor space, the entire roof being of glass, with large side lights. It is an ideal spot for exhibitions of all kinds. Everything is seeable, so to speak. No crowding, no dark corners. The success of the automobile, flower and other exhibitions held in this new hall, have made it a great favorite. The coming event in the feather and fur line promises to mark a new epoch in this direction. President Kyle and his associates have worked hard, early and late, to give to the public the most complete exhibit of rare birds and animals ever held in the United States. One of the novelties which promises to be a great feature as well as a social event, will be the grand exhibit of Angora goats and the judging of the same on the second day of the show. Mr. Homer Davenport, the famous cartoonist of the Evening Mail, not only has the largest collection of rare pheasants, water fowl and birds in America, but is also deeply interested in Angora goats. Dr. Leslie Ward of Madison, N. J., is an enthusiastic fancier of Angora goats. He has just received one hundred head of does from his nephew's, Dr. Ward's, farm. The latter comprises some 2,000 acres and is probably the finest in America, having been built up at a cost of three million dollars. Dr. Ward will offer a valuable cup at the Herald Square show on classes in which he is not a competitor. He will, however, have a large entry of Angora goats. Mr. Hoerle's scale of points will be used in judging the latter. As many are becoming interested in the breeding of these goats in this state, and some in this section, notably Mr. Durey, postmaster of Johnstown, N. Y., the coming exhibit at Herald Square will be looked forward to with great interest and expectation.

PILSENER PAPERS.

Meesder Eddydore:

Dere vas vonce a doctor named Kile,
He says "I vill dry it a vile
To run a grate New York shows,
And to broof all der tings vat I knows.
If I meets mit disaster und bills
Like a man, I vill take mine own pills,
Und der person vat den can rest easy
Vill sure be mine old frient Aitch Vee Cee."

Haha! Tshermany vas vaking up. Dere vill be a liddel imbortedness in Herald Shgvare und dere vill be der real ardikel in Ebling's Casino.

Vell, Prosit! Und blenty of luck!

No, Meesder Vest Point, der Bresident did not bay me for mine ardikels aboud his blace. He knows dat old Pilsner has got enuff Tsherman boedry und entusiasm dat he can say vot he feels mitout enny feelings of greenbecks.

I hope dey vill haf American jutches for de Tsherman show begause dey vill neffer get trough. First dere vill be der first brekfest, den vill come der sekond brekfest, denn der dinner, denn dey vill haf goffee, und cakes,den some sandviches, und at last der supper—und blease don't forget der tirst in betveen. Dey vill not hef dime to shkore a birt betveen meals.

I tink der Tsherman Lakenfelders must be a vilt birt. Berhaps der Dutch ones may be some kind of a shadow, bud der Tsherman name dat means "lay in der fields." Vell, if dey vill only lay 264 times ennyvere, Pilsner vill buy der autermopile to get der eggs.

Ve vould like to shdart a bouldry clup in Hoboken, but it does not go. If ve make Fritz Meier bresident denn Karl Mueller vill not hef ennydings to do mit it, pecause Mueller's cousin vas angry mit Meier's vife. Alvays dere vas droubles everyvhere. If ve coult hef it midout officers der ting vould be easy.

Venn der Bresident makes his speech to der Universel Bouldrymen at St. Louis I hope he vill rememper dat efferyding must haf an end. Efferyding except der sausetch—she alvays haf two.

Lovisa vants me to go in der Belgium hair pizness. She says: "Pilsner, enny kint of hair vould be better dann der kind vat you hef not got."

THE BUFF WYANDOTTE FOR UTILIY.

Editor American Fancier:

I noticed Mr. Crocker's criticism of comment on Buff Orpington chicks as they appeared at a marketable age. Now I raised a few Orpingtons two years ago, and I can say without favoritism that they did not develop as well as did the Wyandottes. The greatest disadvantage the Orpingtons have, are their white skin and legs, which prevents them from commanding the highest price in our markets. For the above reasons, I closed out the Orpingtons.

I am confident that the Buff Wyandotte is the best utility fowl, and I have the good fortune to be the breeder of the Buff Wyandottes referred to by Mr. Howell in the October 1st issue of the American Fancier. Mr. Howell's customers all agree they were the best lot he has had this year. For the benefit of the American Fancier's readers, I have been requested to give my methods of how I produced such fine marketable chickens. Various feeding systems are followed with good results by practical and successful poultrymen, but the following has given me the most thrifty and profitable chickens, that develop at an earlier age, than I was ever able to secure with any other system.

During the first two or three days I sprinkled a little of one of the leading brands of dry chick food before them occasionally. After they were three days old they were fed the chick food four times a day a quantity sufficient to be cleaned up between each feed. At four weeks the second and third feeds of chick food was substituted by wheat, the favorite cereal of chickendom. The chick food was omitted when the chicks were eight weeks old and food hoppers, containing wheat, cracked corn and ground oats, were placed in their yards.

I find by feeding the chicks in the hoppers that they grow faster than under any other system of feeding, when the birds are given their freedom. I have noticed a chicken will never over-feed, if the hopper is always kept supplied, but will make several visits during the day, selecting a few choice morsels each time to balance the ration of worms and insects picked up out over the meadows. In preparing stock for market, I select and confine them in a darkened room, four or five days previous to killing. Their morning feed consists of a mash composed of two parts corn meal, one part each of bran, ground oats and turnips or beets; wheat and cracked corn for noon and evening feeds.

It will be noticed, I do not use meat in any form for growing stock and I am sure the breeder who uses little or no meat, can much more readily command premium prices for their market poultry on account of their choice flavor. When kept in confinement or during the winter months, meat food is desirable or even necessary as a substitute for the worms and insects that abound in the fields during the summer. In feeding meat, I do not give more than one part meat to fourteen parts grain and vegetables.

I am ever watching my chicks as they grow and develop, that I may be able to provide so there will be no possible opportunity for them to be checked while growing. To produce large fine fowls, they must be kept growing from the time they are hatched until matured. I have my roosting coops free from vermin by spraying with some good lice killer once a week, also dust the chickens occasionally with tobacco dust. I keep their drinking fountains clean and supplied with pure fresh water. Grit is placed in their yards so they can get it at any time.

Before I close, I wish to say that I am sure a beginner will make no mistake in selecting the Buff Wyandotte, for they are certainly the best general purpose fowl in existence, and are unsurpassed for beauty. They have had no sudden boom, as some, but have been gradually advancing until they are the leading market and exhibition fowl. As a result of their superior merits the past year has been the most prosperous in all their history and the highest prices paid for individual stock birds. E. S. WILSON.

Say, Mr. man from Detroit, your postal at hand. Your guess is a good one about Robby, but you are too late.

Don't know about raising bread.

But how is he for raising the dough? That's the question.

Put on your armor plate, as you may need it at the A. P. A. meeting.

Had another thought 'tother day.

Was thinking, if the political parties want to sling mud very badly as the signs seem to indicate why—

Let one side hire Hewes and the other side get Curtis, and there you are.

As Drev. would remark, "They are all 'peacherines.'"

Been on the Pike all day,so am tired. Saw several of the boys there.

Tom Orr was there, was trying to find out if there was any one on the grounds that had more trouble than himself, but up to date was not successful.

Hewes has written an article to be published in "blank," entitled, "What I think of the whole business."

Where is that new Standard promised for Oct.?

Come, com. of 5, where art thou?

Im am going to take a course in elementary English soon to please some of the people.

Would like to remark to my friend who was the cause of the article in Farm-Poultry, "If only we would suit every one."

Robby is all right on that score. I have knockers myself, but no one can suit everybody.

We do not have to read those articles.

Again if an editor is running a paper on a paying basis.

If advertisers increase as well as subscribers, he must take it for granted that it pleases most of his readers.

If we do not like anything in this world, why, just let it go.

Then we won't have that sick feeling in our stomach.

He is a queer duck, is Robby, but on that question he is on to his game all right.

You ought to be ashamed to say that you are not a member of the A. P. A.

Either send $10 to Tom Orr or bet ten dollars on Parker; in either case you're out.

WEST POINT.

P. S.—West Point's stock is up now, as they "clean done" Yale. Eh!

TAILS TOO HIGH.

Editor American Fancier:

Why don't Indian Game breeders get lower tails on their birds. It seems to me that the tails in this breed are being elevated at an alarmingly rapid rate. And why is it? To my mind one of the most important points in Indian game is carriage of tail. There may be some good Indian tails in the country, but for the last two or three years I haven't seen any and I've been wondering if it is no longer possible to produce them. To me an upright tail on Indian Game is a more serious defect than feathers on a Leghorn's toes. It's really the worst fault an Indian can have, to my way of thinking, and I wouldn't give a cuss for a whole yard full of such birds. With all that may be done in the way of beautifying the Indian in color and closeness of plumage, unless that peculiar Oriental look is present I can't think any specimen is a good one. Nothing contributes so much to this certain Oriental appearance as carriage of tail. Down with it. And up with the carriage of body, the more erect the better. When you get the carriage sufficiently upright and the tail down where it belongs, then, if close, hard feather and proper breadth is present, you have something—a real Indian. Let there be plenty of bone in the shank, great breadth at back, rather flat body and you have a bird to be proud of—not a scrub, with all the appearance of being a cross between a Show Game and a Wyandotte.

I used to breed hundreds of Indians, (Cornish) but I kept so many other game kinds I let the former go. However, I am going to take them up again, as a side issue, so to speak, and I'm going to try to breed them right. If I can't get good shaped birds to start with I will get the best I can and give them a dose of Aseel blood. This latter fowl, unquestionably the chief progenitor in producing the Indian, has the very points lacking in the average specimen of the latter breed, as I see them now at shows. The Aseel is, for size, a much broader bird, has lower tail and is vastly more "Oriental" in every way. True the Aseel is smaller (average cock from 5½ to 6½ lbs.) but that is not a serious drawback in using some of the blood to cross with. Aseels are bred in various colors, but, strange to say, occasionally one is seen almost identical in color with the Cornish cock or hen. This year I bred from an Aseel stag whose parents came direct from India. He was bred to blue, white and brown (Malay color) females and some of the pullets produced are beautifully laced, not all over, but in certain sections, and some of the laced feathers would turn the average Cornish hen green (with envy). I have purchased two big Cornish hens to mate with this Aseel male next season, by way of experiment, and will report my success or otherwise.

BANTAMS AT NEW YORK.

There is every indication that the Bantam exhibit at the annual meeting of the National Bantam Association in Madison Square Garden will be the largest and best display ever gathered under one roof.

The New York Association has generously donated $25.00 and this, with the many cash donations made by individual members of the National Bantam association and by the association itself, will furnish the magnet which will bring together the choicest Bantams of the United States and Canada. The cash specials will exceed one hundred and fifty dollars—far in excess of any previous year, and it therefore behooves every Bantam fancier to see to it that he is represented in the keenest of competition where quality wins. The judges for this exhibition are chosen by a popular vote of the National Bantam Association members, which insures the prizes being awarded intelligently, by one who judges the birds and not the exhibitors.

The National Bantam Association consists of one hundred and fifty of the best known Bantam breeders in the United States, Canada and England, and its membership is constantly increasing. Anyone not a member who is desirous of competing at the greatest American Bantam Show should apply to Secretary Quilhot of Johnstown, N. Y., at once, to enable them to share in the rich stakes offered by this association.

DOWNERS' GROVE POULTRY CLUB

The first annual exhibition of the Downers Grove Poultry Club will be held at Downers Grove, Ill., December 12 to 15, 1904. A large, well lighted hall has been secured, thereby showing all exhibits to the best advantage, which means that the score card will be properly applied, so that critical breeders, who will appreciate the advantage of conscientious, judicial scoring, are specially invited to send their entries. Frank Heck and Geo. Ewald have been engaged to place the awards. Careful attention is promised all stock and prompt shipment made after close of show. One advantage in sending birds to our show is that it is only a four day show and most all stock will arrive at home by Friday night. An exhibit made here in advance of the large shows will be of great value in picking your winners. For premium list, entry blanks and all information, write to Geo. M. Kline, Downer's Grove, Ill.

THE CHICAGO SHOW.

Sharpe Butterfield of Windsor, Canada; George C. Burgott of Lawton Station, New York; Thomas F. Rigg of Iowa Falls, Iowa; Thomas E. Orr of Beaver, Pa., and Charles McClave of New London, Ohio, have been engaged to judge the poultry at the Ninth Annual Exhibition of poultry, pigeons, dogs, cats and pet stock, given by the National Fanciers and Breeders Association. Henry Tieman of Baltimore, Maryland; L. A. Jensen of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and C. A. Twombly of Boston, Mass., have been selected to place the awards on pigeons. Negotiations are in progress for additional poultry and pigeon judges. Pet stock judges and judges of dogs and cats will be announced at an early day.

The show dates are January 23, 24, 25, 26, 27 and 28, 1905. It will be held in the Chicago Coliseum, Wabash avenue and Fifteenth street. Premium lists containing all information as to class entries and premiums will be issued December 15. Requests for same should be sent to Fred. L. Kimmey, secretary, Room 500, 325 Dearborn street.

WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCK CLUB NOTICE.

All members of the White Plymouth Rock Club who wish their names to appear in the 1904 club catalogue or who wish advertising space in same, mush act at once, as the catalogue is now in the hands of the printers. The secretary can not guarantee that anything sent after the first week in November will not be too late.

The publication will be replete with good things for White Plymouth Rock Fanciers, and every breeder of this popular variety should have his name in the catalogue.

For full information regarding the club catalogue, the club specials to be offered at the poultry shows this winter, rules of admission to the club, etc., address the National Secretary and Treasurer, Seth W. Gregory, Delavan, Wis.

ELECTRIC CITY POULTRY ASSOCIATION.

At the annual meeting of the members of the Electric City Poultry Association, held Wednesday evening, Oct. 19th, at the State Armory, in the City of Schenectady, the following officers were re-elected for the constitutional term of one year. President, Dr. A. J. Sitterly; vice-president, Geo. Van Derveer; secretary, H. B. Duryee; treasurer, N. C. White; superintendent, N. V. Whitbeck.

The dates for holding the fourth annual show, to be held in the State Armory, is Jan. 31st to Feb. 4th inclusive.

This association is incorporated under state laws, and has a financial backing second to no other association in the state. Its membership is limited to twenty tried and true fanciers, who hand and heart have the best interests of the poultry fraternity at stake.

There has never been any official authority for the publication in this paper that the Electric Association were not going to hold a show. They have given two very successful shows under its present administration and have a neat surplus to their bank account, and it is their united determination to give to the fanciers of the entire country as clean and fine a show as their combined efforts can produce.

WALDEN N. Y.

Editor American Fancier:

The Wallkill Valley and Hudson River Poultry Ass'n have completed all arrangements for their coming show to be held in Walden, N. Y., December 6 to 9. Mr. Howell, associate editor of The American Fancier, will furnish weekly reports on the egg and poultry market, and answer all questions submitted to him relating to commercial and practical poultry keeping. When replies are requested to be sent by letter, stamps must be enclosed and letters addressed to George E. Howell, 70 Christopher St., New York City.

Eggs.—Receipts for week, 43,750 cases. There is an almost total absence of fresh gathered nearby eggs on the market.

The art of making hens lay when nature rules otherwise not having been discovered, the eastern egg supply, for a time, will have to come from localities where the hens are not so particular. We quote: State and other nearby fresh selected white, 30c per doz. Brown, absolutely fresh, 28 to 29c.; fair to good, 27 to 28c.; western fancy, candled, 23½ to 24c.; fair to good, 20 to 22c.; seconds, 18 to 19c.; Kentucky, 18 to 21c.; Tennessee, 17 to 20c.; dirty eggs, 14 to 17½c.; refrigerator, 18 to 20c.

Live Poultry.—Receipts, 40 cars. Fowls, western, 13c. per lb.; southern, 12c.; chickens, nearby and western, 12½; southern, 11½c.; western ducks, 70 to 80c. per pair; geese, $1.25 to $1.50 per pair; turkeys, 12 to 14c. per lb.; live pigeons, 15c. per pair.

Dressed Poultry.—Receipts, 9,286 pkgs. Phila Chickens, 8 to 9 lbs. to pair, 22 to 24c. per lb.; mixed weights, 16 to 18c.; state and Pa., fancy large, 15 to 16c.; mixed sizes, 13 to 14c.; under 5 lbs. to pair, 11 to 12c.; western, 12 to 12½c.; fowls, 12 to 12½c; turkeys, spring, 7 to 10 lbs. each, 22 to 23c.; small, 16 to 18c.; old, 16 to 17c. Ducks, spring, fancy eastern sections, 17½ to 18c.; western and southern, 9 to 13c.; geese, white, young, 16 to 17c.; dark, 14 to 15. Squabs, $1.75 to $2.75 per dozen.

Speaking of the egg consumption in England, an exchange says, "within the last twenty years England has paid foreign countries $375,000,000 for eggs, over $18,000,000 annually.

The trouble, so 'tis stated, is not with the hen who, like Macduff, is willing to "lay on," but rather to the slow method of gathering, and getting to the markets.

Certain aristocratic dames, including the Queen and several American countesses, have undertaken to remedy this, and get a move on the egg business.

Besides breeding and exhibiting many fancy breeds, these ladies have formed the National Poultry Organization society, and have already opened fifteen egg depots, all of which are doing a brisk business, and others will be opened just as fast as the egg producers and those willing to become such, in the different sections can be awakened to the opportunities offered them.

In the beginning every farmer receives for his eggs the ruling local price, whatever it may be. Here the society does him a good turn at the start, for one of the things that has heretofore crippled the British egg business is the fact that the retail dealer's traveling buyer,—unpoetically known as the "higgler"—on whom the egg farmer had been chiefly dependent, paid him not the local price, but the lowest figure he could induce him to accept.

All the eggs it collects the society sends straight to London, and there sells them to different large dairies and retail dealers, not to mention the House of Commons and the ultra-exclusive Carlton Club, both of which have become regular customers. As the London price for eggs is much higher than the country rate, the society, of course, makes a considerable profit on all its sales. The shipping expenses, and those of maintaining the different depots, are not large, and after paying them, the profit remaining is divided among the original suppliers of the eggs.

The society has its own special stamp, known from its design as the "Rose Stamp," the imprint of which is as good as an official birth certificate to the egg bearing it, and the titled and influential folk interested in the society urge their friends to insist on the "Rose brand" and to accept no substitutes.

The idea of establishing these egg stations is copied from Denmark, where over three hundred are in operation, with a large membership. The eggs are packed and shipped so promptly, Danish eggs are in the English markets four days from the time they are laid.

The premium list of our Herald Square show is out. This show commences on November twenty-eighth, and ends December third, a time of year which ought to prove equally acceptable to the exhibitors and the army of poultry fanciers living in and around New York, and who will be sure to buy many birds to fill out their pens for the winter, and for new blood with which to improve them.

That Orpington cockerel up in Seneca Falls, weighing eight pounds at six months of age, is a great "object lesson;" if it weighs sixteen pounds at twelve months of age, it will be quite a chicken.

Now Brother Crocker, I said the flock of half grown Orpington chicks which I had an opportunity to inspect, were Asiatic type and should be classed along with the Brahma and Langshan, and while you resented the imputation you did not refute it.

Later, I stated the Brahma and Langshan type looked heavier but weighed less than the American type, and cited the Brahma and Plymouth Rock chicks in the butcher's stall, which I considered so equal and the test so fair, I had them weighed for my benefit, with the result as stated, and to substantiate my original argument, you come back with the weight of a cockerel that has passed the profitable age, and worth no more to-day than he was two months ago in the market.

No doubt there are hundreds of Fancier readers who are thinking of taking advantage of the present popularity of the Orpington to breed them, and who would be grateful to you, if you would give us an article on what your experience has been with them.

I have talked only from the market side. Every day I realize more fully the great field right here in this city, for poultry raisers who desire to cater to private trade. Chickens that can reach this city within twelve hours from the ranch, can be sold here by the hundreds of thousands weekly.

It is of vast importance to those contemplating such a step, that they become familiar with the type and breed of chickens most desired by the customers they expect to serve, and which will bring them the most money once the sale is made.

Any such information I am able to give I am going to give at every opportunity, without any desire to help or hurt any particular breed.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

By Using Geyer's Champion Disinfectant & Vermin Destroyer

There are, in all classes of powders before the public, many calculated for the sure cure of lice and vermin and a dozen other purposes, yet are they reliable, and have they produced the results claimed?

In offering this compound, we offer a powder such as is not before the public, and fills a place that none other can for the purpose intended—a positive, sure disinfectant and destroyer of all vermin that invests either poultry, small animals those of the barn yard.

It is a perfect destroyer of all disease germs, and produces a healthy odor wherever distributed. It is a sure cure for gapes, in young chicks.

If you are skeptical and don't believe in Powders or compouud because of many worthless ones on the market, we ask, please cast aside your prejudice and give this compound a trial. It is put up in 2 pound boxes. Price 25c. 560tf

TWELFTH ANNUAL SALE.

We will have our Twelfth Annual Sale for the month of NOVEMBER of the World Wide Known Egg Producer,

BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC.

On account of the late Spring this year, there were less birds raised than ever before, so the demand for fresh laid eggs will be the greater.

To help supply this extra demand a little BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC in the morning mash will do the work. It starts the pullets laying early and keeps them laying all through the winter. It helps the old hens through moulting and gets them to laying before the very cold weather sets in.

Those who have used BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC once will never try anything else, as it does more than we say it will do.

The regular price is 1 lb., 25c; by mail 40c; or, 5 boxes, $1.00.

We will sell during the month of NOVEMBER only a 1 lb. box, 15c; by mail, 30c! or, 7 boxes $1.00, shipped via express or freight from New York.

This is a big saving to our customers, old and new, and those wishing to double their profits should take advantage of this special offer.

At these reduced prices, positively no orders filled before November 1st nor after November 30th.

We sell all kinds of POULTRY SUPPLIES and all are listed in our Immense Illustrated Poultry Supply Catalogue, mailed free. Send for one.

ST. LOUIS.

Largest Number of Birds Ever Exhibited—World's Fair Poultry Show Established New Record—Management Scores a Success—American Breeds Far in the Lead.

[Special Reports by Staff Correspondent.]

ST. LOUIS, Mo., October 29.—The long looked for event in the poultry show world has come, gone and now is history. In the few days one had to look over the exhibit, credit can hardly be bestowed properly. When one thinks that there are nearly 10,000 birds in the show, the best that America has, words are inadequate to properly describe them.

The live stock barns were used to hold the birds. While they were not just exactly fitted for the purpose, they were better than Chicago or Buffalo, and such as one must expect at a fair of this kind. The ground on which the barns were erected was unsuitable for the show, as they were on hills and in valleys, and one had to do some climbing to get at some of the birds.

If we stop to think of the magnitude of the exhibit, we cannot but realize the task the management had to overcome. Nothing but praise should be meted out to them, and it is really most extraordinary that things worked out as well as they did. To handle nearly 10,000 birds for a new management, with green help, is a task that must not be overlooked, and while there were many things that the exhibitors would have liked to have had changed or avoided entirely, we must not forget the fact that this was the biggest show of its kind ever held, and that many a smaller show has not done as well.

The cooping committee had a herculean task, and I think it is pretty generally conceded that they acquitted themselves with honor. While the coops were not of the kind that we like to see, such as Spratts, or the Empire, they were "just fair." The committee worked like beavers, and did everything any committee could do for the good of the birds and exhibitors.

The judging was very tedious and quite long drawn out, owing to lack of judges and the birds being in different places. On the whole, satisfaction was pretty general, and kicking, the "proverbial kicking," which is found at all shows, was here, but not any more than is usual. The poultry show, the authorities claim, brought more visitors than all the live stock exhibits combined, which speaks volumes for the feathered tribe. In conclusion I would say that this is a most successful show, thanks to Col. Mills and Mr. T. E. Orr and all others connected with it and every exhibitor, great or small, who was fortunate enough to get any ribbon, whether a first or seventh, should consider himself very fortunate indeed, and a win at St. Louis World's Fair means something.

D. LINCOLN ORR.

The above is the first letter received from one of our staff correspondents and gives a fair and impartial opinion of the great show being held in the Mound City, which closes November 5. Other reports regarding the birds on exhibition will be found below, as well as a complete list of awards, specially compiled by one of our associates. The catalog of entries has been sent to us and reveals many interesting features. It conclusively proves that the American varieties of fowl are the most popular. How much of this can be attributed to the hard work of the specialty clubs must be determined by the measure of "time allowance." It is true the large entries in White Wyandottes, Buff Plymouth Rocks, White Plymouth Rocks and in some varieties of Leghorns are directly traceable to the hard work of the specialty clubs that foster these varieties, but the general tendency toward American and Mediterranean varieties is apparent.

Several surprises are evident in looking over the catalog. The entries of Barred Plymouth Rocks, while large, are not as great in numbers as we expected; the same might be said of Langshans, a breed that is very popular in Missouri, Kansas and the south. Golden Wyandottes are a big surprise in point of numbers and we are glad of it, for they are among the best of American varieties. Silver Wyandottes must have been fine classes, to judge by the entries, and the Silver Wyandotte club is entitled to unstinted praise for its work. The same can be said of the Buff Wyandottes.

In looking over the Asiatic classes in the catalog, we find the Dark Brahmas not as numerous as they should be, or as their intrinsic merit deserves. The Light Brahmas made up large and, no doubt, fine classes, but the absence of birds from New England, the home and hot-bed of Light Brahmas, is a grievous disappointment.

"WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THAT?"

Cochins, especially Buffs, were quite numerous, but again the absence of eastern birds was a regrettable feature.

Very few Dorkings were shown and this is attributable to the classifications sent out.

Orpingtons filled up in goodly style.

French classes well represented, but Houdan entries not as large as expected.

Hamburgs made a fine showing in nearly all varieties.

The list of entries taken from the official catalog, which appears on this page, will convey to our readers an intelligent idea of the number of birds in each and every class.

Compiled from the official catalog issued by the Live Stock Department of Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

N. B.—The above figures have been carefully prepared from the catalog. The latter, while inaccurate in some classifications and names and addresses, gave the correct number of entries. A breeding pen counts five birds; a display pen 10 birds.—Editor American Fancier.

WHITE WYANDOTTES.

If any one should doubt what is the most popular variety, he only needs to look at the entries at the great World's Fair to be convinced. Over 800 birds is rather a show of itself and the enthusiasm displayed by the breeders of this great breed is wonderful. It was the only barn decorated with bunting, and the effect was charming. To describe the birds fully would take several issues of The American Fancier. Fifty of each class and the winners at that could be taken right out and there would still be left a great show and birds of real merit. In cocks there were over 100 entered and many a good bird was not mentioned.

Cocks.—1st cock a large blocky bird, not quite through moult, long in back, tail not out, shows some cream in undercolor, good comb, but off in eyes; legs fair. 2d cock a large bird, a trifle too high on legs, in full feather and whiter than 1st bird; good shape in back and tail, good in head points and legs; could have easily changed places with first. 3d cock a very white bird, lacks in shape of breast, back and tail; good in all head points. In hens there were over 125.

Hens.—First hen a large, white bird, in fine condition; good shape, excepting tail, nice comb and eyes. 2d hen a very blocky bird, snow white, broad in back and tail; good in head and legs. 3d hen a very large bird of good quality, tail trifle narrow, shown in fine condition; good in comb and legs.

In hens would like to remark that the 7th hen was, in the writer's opinion, the best in the show. She had that back and tail that is admired so much, good breast and had legs and head of an ideal bird and ought to have been farther up on the list.

In cockerels there were 120. The best birds in the class were thrown out, but the winners are birds of merit and worthy of the places they won.

1st cockerel a well matured bird, trifle too high on legs, back long, snow white all through; wins on color; has good head points and legs. 2d cockerel a blocky bird, good color; lacks in shape of breast and tail little too high; comb rather coarse; good eyes. 3d cockerel a well finished bird, good shape, good color, has good head points; was worthy of a higher place.

In pullets there were 148. 1st pullet a short, blocky bird, in perfect show condition; too high in tail, nice head and legs, and white all through. 2d pullet also in perfect condition and form, snow white, good head points, nice legs; would prefer her to first pullet. 3d pullet a large, fine, white bird, trifle narrow in tail, good comb and legs; shown in fine feather.

In breeding pens there were 66 entered. First pen, cock and pullets. Cock a very white bird, of good form and well moulted, nice in head points and legs; four well finished pullets of good shape and color; birds of quality. 2d pen, cock and pullets. Cock has good shape and color, a trifle under size, but has good legs and head; females fine in form, good color and very deserving of the honor. 3d pen. cockerel and pullets, all well matured, white all through, nice heads and shape.

In conclusion, would remark that there were lots of birds of real merit. To get a mention must be considered a great honor. The White Wyandottes have made a record that will live long in the annals of poultry history. Other breeds are great, but all must take their hats off to the White Wyandottes. D. LINCOLN ORR.

DORKINGS.

They were not a grand lot, but the pens of whites were really excellent and gave a character to the exhibit. The colored pen was a nice one the Silver Greys were out of form, with one nice bird.

Cockerels—1st good in body, crooked in back. 2d, best head and comb and being straight in back, should have won. 3d, white lobe and only a fair specimen; should have been disqualified.

Hens—1st, best in shape and color. 2d, fair bird. 3d, average. 4th, poor.

Pullets.—1st, a nice bird. 2d, easy. 3d, male. 4th, fair only.

Cockerels—1st, a fair one only.

Hen—1st, fair bird.

Pullet—1st, average.

Pens—1st, an excellent lot, white and good in shape. 2d, also good, cock not as good in color and condition of hens; not as good as first.

EDWIN H. MORRIS.

ORPINGTONS.

A good display. Buffs (S. C.) were badly handled by the judge; the others he seemed to understand better, though the fault appeared to be not entirely "what is buff," but in superficial work wherein undercolor and other points were disregarded.

Single Comb Buffs—Cocks 1st, even, dark and stylish; 2d, comb poor and not even in color; 3d, big, even in color, light eye, dark tail; 4th, little narrow, wants time; 5th, big, not clear, but as good as some placed over it; 6th, good shape, too much comb, light eye, will go higher; 7th, fair shape. Some birds not noticed were equal to them. Cockerels—1st, good, light buff bird, dark enough in hackle and saddle, but too light over thighs, white in wing and also black on half primaries, good bone, shape and head; 2d, big and high, not the same type; 3d, buff, wants time; 4th, buff, fairly clear, good head; 5th, color in tail; 6th, fair, others in the class better than these, and 15,881 so far ahead of the lot, yet without notice. This bird is dark all through, buff quills in saddle and hackle, clear in wing and tail, fine bone, style and head, and the best buff in the classes.

Hens—1st, good shape, even color, nice comb and head, light eye, good

Pullets. 1st, even in color, nice quality in head. 2nd not the same in head; more of the Cochin; 3rd, shape and head good; 4th even light buff.

Breeding pens—1st, fair in size; 2nd better hens, cock not as mature, but better in color; 3rd dark and not as even a lot. 15970, unnoticed, as good as any. Cock same color and type as best (unnoticed) cock in singles. Hens, good, but dark in color.

S. C. Whites.—Cocks—1st, easy winner, good in bone, size, color, type; 2nd, same type, not equal in bone, color or condition; 3rd not the same character, higher on leg. Cockerels—1st, clear white, lacks breast; 2nd not equal in size and shape; 3rd shorter in back; 4th might have been higher on type alone; 5th, color only fair; 6th and 7th just average birds. Hens—1st, good for place; 2nd, in head a little Cochin; 3rd, same head; 4th, more Orpington in head; 5th, nice in shape, comb and eye; 6th fair. Pullets—1st, excellent tyne and quality; 2nd hardly as good here; 3d plain head, better otherwise; 4th, good color and shape; 5th, like 1st in head, low and similar in type; should have been higher. Pens—1st, style, eye and color good; 2nd cock, defective comb, eyes light; 3rd, correctly placed.

S. C. Blacks.—Cocks—1st, well ahead all round; 2nd, not equal in feather and color; 3rd, narrow in body, wattles faulty; others fairly well placed. Cockerels—1st, shape and color good; Cochin in head; 2nd not equal in shape; 3rd, broad, nice color and shape; 4th, head fair, nice otherwise; 5th, fair only. Pullets—1st, best in color and shape; 2nd better in type and quality, little narrow; 3rd, best of lot in shape, color and station, faulty in head and lobes; 4th, miniature; 5th, too dark.

Rose Comb Buffs.—Cocks—1st, nice shape and color, bone good, eye, hackle, comb and undercolor fair. Cockerels—1st, nice eye, color and shape. Hens—1st, comb poor; 2nd, light in color; 3rd, shape and eye good. Pullets—1st, color dark and not even, shape fair, eye and comb good; 2nd, good eye and color, long fair body; 3d, color and eye good, comb poor; 4th, average; 5th, tail poor, body color better. Pens—1st and 2nd, good; cock of 1st not equal to 2nd in head and comb, but best in color; 2nd hens not equal to 1st pen in color, but better in shape.

R. C. Whites.—Cocks—1st, on color, shape and eye; 2nd, nice bird, but correctly placed. Cockerels—1st, not white, good bone, nice shape and head; 2nd, not white, Wyandotte comb, long body; 3rd more style, better shape, eye fair, should have been 2nd; 4th, not white, gamey in shape. Hens—1st, good all through, equal to any exhibited in Orpington character; 2nd, nice form; 3rd wants time. Pullets—1st, nice one, eye fair; 2nd, also good; 3rd, also a nice sort. Pens—1st, best in color and shape, and cock better in color than 2nd pen.

Jubilees—Well placed, big stout birds, several of the best being disqualified for white in lobes.

STANDARD GAMES.

Black Reds.—1st cock, probably the best seen in this country, grand reach and color, beautiful head and eye, thin neck set on a grand pair of shoulders, short wings and well cut away at stern and firm as a rock on his pins; 2nd fails in breadth of shoulders, nice color well cut away in stern; 2nd, nice top, short head, bit thick in stern; 1st cockerel, nice top color and reach, good head and eye, thin neck; 2nd a little coarse in head, bit fine in bone, good top; 3d, good color, bit loose in wing and heavy in tail; 1st hen rather red on wings, considerable shafting; 2nd fine reach, good head and color, hard to find fault with; 3rd fails reach and style. 1st pullet, good head and eye, nice reach, well pinned; 2nd lacks reach of first, otherwise good; 3rd bit red in top color, not maturd.

Brown Reds.—1st cock, nice top color, bit short on thighs; 2nd dense in color, not in condition; 1st hen, good length of head, nice color, well folded tail; 1st cockerel, bit short in neck, nice laced breast; 2nd and 3rd loose wings, not matured; 1st pullet, nice head and neck, good color, bit heavy in tail; 2nd and 3rd not matured.

Red Pyle.—1st cock, nice style and station, dense color across back and wings; 2nd, about the same stamp, a trifle thick in neck; 3rd nice thin head and neck, good color and style, bit loose in wings; 2nd hardly so far advanced, but looks as if he will make a top notcher; 3rd nice reach, but a bit dense in color. 1st hen, good reach, nice, thin head, good shape, a little bricky in color; 2nd finer in bone, better on top; 3rd light in color of breast, bit thick in stern, heavy in tail. 1st pullet, a little narrow at shoulders and long in back, otherwise good; 2nd, nice color, bit young; 3d, good head, plenty of color, lacks age to finish.

GAME BANTAMS.

Black Reds.—1st cock, nice light feather, good color and reach, might be a little higher up on legs, a real good one! 2nd on the large side, bit loose in wings; 3rd gone in breast, not feeling at his best. 1st cockerel has the earmarks of a good one, but not matured; 2nd, well up on his pins, dense in color; 3rd, lacks shape and color loose on wings. 1st hen, shown in the best of condition, grand color, might be a little longer on thighs; 2nd, nice shaped tail, a little dense in color; 3rd fair color, a bit long on wings; 1st pullet, grand station, nice color, well cut away at stern, hard to find fault with; 2nd, bit dense in color and long in wings; 3rd lacks color and station.

Golden Duckwing.—1st cock, nice top color, good carriage and station; 2nd, not in the condition of first, but a good one; 1st cockerel, nice head, rather much size and a little heavy in tail; 2nd a little long in back, not matured in feather; 3rd old time type, not much quality. 1st hen, nice color and condition; 2nd, nice quality, well up. 1st pullet, good reach, nice color, shown in good condition. I could only find one pullet.

Silver Duckwing.—1st cock, grand top color, nice shape, might be a trifle sharter wing; 2nd, good reach, bit long in body, lacks finish; 3rd shorter on back, bit loose in wings. 1st cockerel, splendid reach, nice top color, a trifle heavy in tail. 1st hen, nice color and condition, might be a little higher up on legs; 2nd, nice color, too much tail; 3rd a bit long in body. 1st pullet, nice top color, a bit short on thighs; 2d and 3rd fails shape to first, a bit long in back and wings.

Red Pyle.—1st cock, gone a little on breast, nice shaped tail; 2nd, better on breast, bit loose in wings, carries his tail a little gay. 1st cockerel, nice shape, good neck, beautiful colored legs, fails a little in color of back and wings too light; 2nd pretty much same quality, look like full brothers; 3rd, bit high in color, poor shaped tail. 1st hen, a little on the large side, nice color and shape, fine tail; 2nd longer on back; 3rd nice shape, a bit bricky in color. 1st pullet, nice shape, fails a little in color of breast; 2nd, good shape, well up on legs, but in color willow; 3rd, a bit dence in color, otherwise good.

Brown Rds.—1st cock, nice reach, bit light on breast, well tucked wings; 2d, not the quality of first, too dense in color. 1st hen, nice color, a bit short in thigh and heavy in tail; 2nd, about the same description will answer; 3rd, nice color, carries tail a bit gay. I failed to find the chicks.

White Game.—1st, 2nd, 3rd cocks, about the same stamp, nice reach, a bit long in back and wings, not much to choose between winning cockerels; nice colored legs good reach, but a bit long in body. 1st hen, a bit long in body and thick in stern; 2nd not quite so good in reach, otherwise superior; 3rd, longer in body, there is a big improvement n color of legs in this variety.

Birchens.—1st cock, in the best of fit, nice color and good in shape; 2nd, close up, but a trifle loose in wings; 1st cockerel, nice reach, bit long in wings; 3rd not matured; 1st hen, rich in her black, bit heavy in tail, nice hackle; 2nd smaller, nice color, close up; 3rd, out of condition. 1st pullet small, nice shape and color, but only one in the class.

R. OKE.

WATER FOWL.

Aylesbury Ducks.—An excellent display. 1st drake, a low bird with keel, length and size; 2nd, not lower, but deeper, better in keel and length. These might exchange places; 3rd, shallow, 4th, a cross-bred, neither with horizontal carriage, though 3rd is such as have won in America. Young drakes—1st, an easy winner on keel, length and carriage; 2nd, not correct in carriage, nor as good anywhere; 3rd, small and inferior; 4th, the same. Ducks.—1st, true Aylesbury in shape and carriage; 2nd, only a fair one; 3rd, rather better; 4th, small and poor. Young ducks.—1st, an easy winner, others in order of merit.

Cayuga Ducks.—A large collection of birds of doubtful blood, as seen in bills of light shades, chiefly green in drakes and tints even in ducks, when both should be black. There is an evident attempt to get size, and the judges favor this, when this duck is only a

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1904.

When this issue of The American Fancier reaches its readers, the World's Fair poultry show will be a thing of the past.

In point of numbers it was the greatest collection of chickens ever exhibited in the world.

We announced that we would have a complete report of the show in this issue. We regret to say that we have not.

* * *

The men we engaged to represent The American Fancier at St. Louis did what we asked of them. But conditions confronted them that they did not anticipate.

Birds were supposed to be at St. Louis, October 22, or 24 at latest. On the latter day some of the coops were not in position or ready for the birds at seven o'clock in the evening.

Judging was to begin Tuesday morning. It was not completed until Friday night. On Saturday some of the ribbons were still missing from the coops. That was the round-up of last week.

We present to our readers a list of awards as near correct as it was possible to obtain at the time for mailing same in order to reach our readers. The list is complete, excepting several classes that were omitted from printed catalog.

The table compiled is from that official list and it appears on another page of this issue. It gives, excepting the omitted classes mentioned above, a correct list of the number of birds exhibited.

This leads us to say that the catalog is not a credit to the great show held at St. Louis. It is full of errors of omission and commission. It will puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to make a case of it. Furthermore, there is no excuse for such work, as entries closed September 10 and the show did not open until October 25.

We have criticized the methods of this department in past issues of The American Fancier and believe that criticism was just at the time. To-day we feel much more so and believe it to be well sustained by the facts.

That the exhibit of poultry was large and the quality great is a source of gratification to us. The American fanciers did their share to make St. Louis the greatest show on earth. Did the management do the same?

The cooping entrusted to a trio of good men, with the A. P. A. tag on, was not a success. And why?

We will simply try and answer this in a very plain, old-fashioned manner, viz.: The World's Fair people asked no entry fees. A committee was appointed at Indianapolis by the A. P. A. to look after the cooping part, etc. Messrs. Steinmesch, Fishel and McGrew were appointed to take charge of the coops and an entry fee of one dollar a bird was demanded. At the Rochester meeting of the A. P. A. the latter disclaimed all responsibility and the "Com. of 3" were allowed to go ahead and arrange things. They did. Still the World's Fair Premium List stated that this was the A. P. A. committee. What did the latter do? Ask the impartial, unbiased fanciers at St. Louis. Instead of giving the poultry fanciers of America the best up-to-date cooping that could be procured, it improvised cooping that is being condemned in unmeasured terms by exhibitors present at St. Louis.

As we stated in past issues, a World's Fair should be educational. What we want is model shows, so we can do likewise in smaller spheres. Has that been accomplished? It has not.

We would like an explanation of all this from the powers that be. One dollar entry fee is a goodly sum to pay for coop and feed. Spratt's Patent cooped the Philadelphia shows, when we were officially connected with same in 1892 and 1893, for 35 cents a coop, and fed the birds. They also handled the business in such a way that all coops were up on time and the number of entries where they belonged. That was twelve years ago. Have we gone back.

* * *

One of the largest exhibitors at St. Louis, a man of keen judgment and a good member of the A. P. A., writes: "The cooping was the worst ever perpetrated upon the poultry public." We give these facts in order to make clean sailing in the future for the American Poultry Association when the latter lends itself to a commercial undertaking that it has neither right nor gall to even dream about.

The American Fancier desires to express its appreciation of the courtesies extended by the management to the poultry press, everything for the comfort and convenience of the representatives and reporters being provided at the big poultry show held at St. Louis the past two weeks.

* * *

Mr. W. J. Stanton of New York city received his appointment as pigeon and reserve poultry judge October 22, 1904. As the big show opened October 24, our rotund friend from New York declined to go. Too short notice, it seems.

* * *

Mr. Harry M. Lamon has removed to Carthage, N. Y., where he will be located in the future and all letters should be addressed to him there.

* * *

Mr. H. J. Quilhot, secretary National Bantam Association, spent several days with the president of the latter, Mr. Raymond Joss Ruliffson, Rochester, N. Y., in order to place the big list of Bantam specials to be offered at the Madison Square Garden show in January.

The "Anthracite Twins," J. W. Schiebel and H. L. Fox have joined forces for the purpose of stirring up trouble in the Rhode Island Red alley. They have a fine plant, located at Hollisterville, Pa., consisting of twenty-five acres, and what is more, have the stock. Keep an eye on the twins.

We are in receipt of a very pretty photograph taken at St. Louis last week. It represents "Billy" McNeil as a ballet dancer, "Jack" Saunders as a baby in a wash-basin, an d "Dick" Oke as the "good spirit." That Canadian trio take the bun. Wonder where "Bismarck" Butterfield, the Hon. Mr. Dundas and Deacon William Barber were when that picture was taken. Perhaps Mr. H. B. Donovan can answer that.

* * *

Mr. D. Lincoln Orr and Mr. G. W. Hillson fought it out on Light Brahma bantams at St. Louis, the former winning in the stretch.

Things looked quite Bright in the Barred Rock alley at St. Louis.

"Willy" McNeil's first prize White Crested Black Polish cockerel was stolen before the show was half over.

They had a fine cartoon of Supt. Tom Orr in one of the St. Louis papers last Sunday. It was a big Dorking chicken with Orr's head as a top piece. But where were the Dorkings?

What we record above and what appears on other pages of this issue regarding St. Louis is but fragmentary and only a preliminary of what is to come later on. The aftermath is usually a select and concrete crop. This year it promises to be quite abundant.

A GREAT SHOW AT CORFU, N. Y.

The Corfu Fanciers' Club is making extensive preparations to hold a rousing poultry show on the date selected, Dec. 5th to 9th, 1904, in the opera house at Corfu, N. Y. The hall is a fine place for an exhibition of this kind, being well lighted and spacious. The members are very enthusiastic and they mean that no stone shall be left unturned to make their second annual exhibition a grand success. Besides the regular cash prizes the club will give, as a sweepstake, a handsome silver cup valued at $10.00. The Am. Lt. Brahma Club gives a $10.00 trophy cup, a $5.00 gold special and seven (7) handsome challenge ribbons. The White Wyandotte Club offers four fine ribbons and other clubs offer valuable prizes too numerous to mention here. The premium list also contains a long string of other valuable specials, including nearly 100 boxes of lice powder.

The coops will be brand new and up to date in every respect, being built by the club.

The "Old War Horse," J. Y. Bicknell, and also W. G. Brace, will be the judges.

There is more interest taken in poultry in this locality than ever before and every indication points to a great exhibition, both in quality and quantity. You will surely miss it if you don't show at Corfu. Entries close Nov. 25th.

Corfu, N. Y.

SHEBOYGAN, WIS.

The West Shore Fanciers' Assn., of Sheboygan, Wis., A. H. McIntire, show sec'y, who held such a large and successful show last year at the above city, have now completed arrangements for their second annual show to be held at the Concordia Hall during the week of November 21st to 26th. Th hall selected is the largest, most expensive and most centrally located hall in the city. Aside from this, their premiums this year have been more than doubled over that of last year, both in number as well as in value, among them being three very valuable silver cups, to be competed for as grand specials. Every bird exhibited will be taken care of in the best possible manner, in the best coops obtainable; this association having been highly complimented on this score last season. Theo. Hewes of Indianapolis, Ind., has again been engaged to place the awards, having given such universal satisfaction at their last show.

CORRECTION.

Editor American Fancier:

At Danbury, in looking over awards in Fancier, I find that you say Light Brahmas were conspicuous by their absence. I wish to say that I showed 1 cock, 1 hen, 1 cockerel, 1 pullet that took four firsts, and were good hot birds, and I wish you would correct some of the mistakes in awards I won. I won 1 Indian Runner Duck, also 1 Brown China Goose.

medium, and not a heavy weight,about 7 or 8 lbs. being called for if recollection is right. Drakes—1st, largest with green bill, and some shades in plumage; 2nd, a little smaller, bill speckled and not black, quite equal to first in color of plumage; 3rd a black one, with bill hardly true; 4th, least defective in bill and good in color, but small; 5th should have been disqualified for white, placed in view. Young drakes.—1st, good color,looks like over a year, bill wrong; 2nd, better in color and bill; 3rd, a little inferior. Ducks—1st, large and fairly sound in color; 2nd, quite as good; 3rd, excellent color; 4th, a fair one; 5th should be disqualified for white, and quite small. Young ducks—1st, easy winner on color; 2nd, bill not right, color fair, good size; 4th, some distance away, with room for a third between.

East Indian.—Black ducks.—The best exhibit seen in America. Drake.—1st, brown in plumage, and bill not a yellowish green; 2nd, a black with rather dark bill; 3rd, best of the three, green bill, excellent size and shape, and quite black. Young drakes.—1st, a fair one, only too large and mixed in plumage. Ducks.—1st, a gem in size, color, bill and character, as fine as can be gotten. 2nd, some brown, and not right in shape of head; 3rd should have been 2nd on head, quality and color. Young ducks.—1st nice quality and size, color fair; 2nd not equal in quality, being drake-like in head, but better in color.

Gray Call Ducks.—A large display, with some truly excellent specimens, and a lot of cross-bred Mallards and perhaps something else, all with cards up. Drakes.—1st, a gem, true in shape, size and wing; 2nd, not as true in any respect; 3rd, about the same; 4th, still more like another breed. Young drakes—1st, only fair in wing, breast and character; 2nd, inferior in these respects. Ducks.—1st, really an excellent specimen, especially good in wing and size; 2nd a fair one; 3rd, hardly as true; 4th, better in some points. Young ducks.—1st, hardly worthy of the place; 2nd certainly unworthy.

White Call Ducks.—A large exhibit of a better, truer kind than usual. Awards were not up when report was written.

Indian Runner Ducks.—A fair display, not one being of good color, and many speckled with various colors, where grey should be, and in carriage only one or two were true. Drakes.—1st, the best; 2nd, quite poor in color and attitude; 3rd, a trifle better; 4th, of the same stamp; 5th, a fair one, except in color. Young Drakes.—1st, a fair sort in shape; 2nd, better in color and wing. Ducks.—1st, a speckled beauty; 2nd, not as speckled, but quite as good anywhere; 3rd, the other sort; 4th, as good in shape; 5th, also ran. Young ducks.—1st, not a good one; 2nd, something worse.

Colored Muscovy Ducks.—Quite a large display. Drakes.—1st,good size, little white; 2nd, about the same; 3rd, similar; 4th, best of the lot on color and marks; 5th, too much white, but large and good. Young drakes—1st, easily the best, and if so, then the drake that was 4th was also the best in its class; 2nd, almost solid color; 3rd, fair only. Ducks.—1st, 2nd and 3rd, almost equal in size, color and character; 4th, equal to either of these, and better in color; 5th, a trifle inferior. Young ducks.—1st, 2nd and 3rd, placed without regard to caruncles or color.

White Muscovy Ducks.—A nice lot. Drake.—1st, the largest, 2nd, about as good except in size; 3rd, a trifle inferior all through. Young drake—1st and 2nd, quite close; 3rd, not equal in size or shape; 4th, hardly good enough for the company. Ducks.—1st, a nice quality bird; 2nd, not up to the quality; 3rd, fair. Young ducks.—1st and 2nd might exchange places. 3rd and 4th, coarser, and not clean.

Pekin Ducks—A grand display,showing a decided tendency to leave the elevated front, and assume the deep keel of the Aylesburys and Rouens. Drakes.—1st, a grand, big bird, without the Pekin front and carriage; 2nd, similar; 3rd, hardly as large, but with little of the Pekin shape. 4th, quite deep in keel; 5th, similar; 6th, much infrior, and 18773 or 18784 were the best of the other kind, the first being an extra good one, white and not creamy, the best of the lot in bone, but not well arched in neck. Young Drakes.—1st, decidedly Aylesbury in shape; 2nd, more of a Pekin here, and should have been 1st if the standard was followed; good in bone and white; 3rd, similar and perhaps a trifle the better, worthy of 1st place; 4th different and more of the Aylesbury; 5th, quite a nice Pekin. Duck—1st, a Pekin; 2nd, with keel; 3rd, similar; 4th, a compromise better than the two; 5th, the most Pekin like of the lot. Young Ducks.—1st and 2nd, Pekin type and of good size; 3rd, more Aylesbury; 4th, short and not distinct; 5th, something of a Pekin.

Rouen Ducks.—A very excellent display, with three or four of surpassing merit, that did not win, others mostly above the average; one not a Rouen, and another a very poor one, each being placed, whilst in no instance were the awards according to merit or the standard. Having no antipathy, and having sold the best birds he had at this show, the writer criticises without interest or prejudice, and solely in the interest of fair play and competent judging. He is prepared to back up his remarks with the winners in other hands. Drakes.—Best drake second; next best placed fourth; both with excellent keels, breadth and length, horizontal according to standard and not lacking in this as the judge stated to an exhibitor (at the judging) was his idea of a Rouen; 3rd, badly grey in tail; 4th, the 2nd best; 5th,white down claret of breast, with white edging, a bad fault, distinctly guarded against in the standard, which says "free from other color;" 6th, edging in chocolate; 7th, unworthy of notice at a village fair. Young drakes.—1st, light at tail, and not deep, upright in carriage; 2nd, gray tail; 3rd, equal to either in color, size and depth; 4th, a big, deep one; this one or 3rd might have won, with 3rd next. Ducks.—1st, long, not deep or broad, tail gray; 2nd, bad in tail and same type; 3rd, easily first on length; depth, color, marks and carriage; 4th, poorly marked on breast and otherwise fair; 5th, a little light color on wing and under body, otherwise typical; 6th fair. Young ducks.—1st, a fair bird, not deep or well marked; 2nd, similar; 3rd, quite young and equal to either 4th; small but good in color and shape; 6th, as much like a Pekin as a Rouen in color,shape and carriage, white in breast, wing and body; white on wing alone a disqualification.

Swedish Ducks.—A nice entry, with birds of many colors, besides blue,bibs mixed when they should be white and sometimes only a dash of white. Awards made on size.

Crested White Duck.—A nice lot. Awards correct, the best crested being second because the crest was not balanced and fell to one side.

Buff Ducks.—Awards according to merit, and winners quite good and clear in color.

WHAT A SMALL AD. DID.

Editor American Fancier:

Enclosed find $3.00 in payment of advertising. The first "ad" sold me $26.00 worth of pigeons and not through yet. L. S. CRANDALL, Utica, N. Y., Oct. 26, 1904.

Brown's Budget.

By G. O. Brown, Associate Editor, Parkville, Md.

"The Golden Jubilee' will be the crowning effort of Jonn L. He commenced work on the affair before the last fair was over.

The South is raising good specimens of all the breeds. A few years ago, birds from the North had "a walk over" at the Southern shows. To-day it takes a "bang up" bird to beat the southern raised specimens.

Langshans not excelled in any state. A breeder in the same state has bred Silver Wyandottes as good as ever happened. The writer handled Barred Rocks last winter in a North Carolina show that were as fine as any raised in the north.

There is a steady improvement in quality going on in poultry raising in every section of the country.

The breeds that possess recognized utility qualities are the big classes in all the shows. The American fancier is too practical a man to be satisfied with "fuss and feathers" alone.

Miller Purvis' truism at Hagerstown that the poultry press was a prominent factor in making the shows and improvements in breeds, could have been carried farther, as they also make converts or new fanciers.

Did you ever notice what a terrible —terrible is the right word—lot of poultry information some men get a corner in, who have been in the business, for "nearly two years."

Two shows in New York city, eh! Well the Madison Square success under the Crawfordian management is an annual event nothing can affect. It is a winner in every sense, an attraction the 400 patronize in more senses than one. The Herald Square show should also be a success. There is interval enough between the two to prevent any idea of interfering competition. None of the "old timers" can afford to "cut out" Madison Square for any event.

Many of the fall fair shows are growing so large that they should be better classified than they now are. Close the entries 10 days before the show opens, should be the order,and make the town residents "toe the mark" same as the rest.

Knot holes, cracks and crevices in the poultry house at this season of the year, invite colds and roup—and especially is such the case if the flock is crowded.

Stricter cleanliness means less talk about ventilation. The way some people keep their hens, even if they roost in trees, would demand ventilation and disinfectants.

Winter eggs is the key to profitable poultry raising.

Don't let your subscription run out, when it does, renew promptly, and endeavor to send a new "sub" with yours. Every new subscriber helps to make a demand for poultry products.

THE BIG STAMFORD SHOW.

The show at Stamford, Conn., which has generally been held the latter part of January, will be held this year on December 7, 8, 9 and 10 in Miller's Music Hall, Main street, which is one of the best lighted halls in the state. This show generally has about 1,600 birds, but the entries will be limited to a less number this year. This association has the reputation of having a strong class of birds, low entrance fees and large prize money, with an unusually large list of cash specials and silver cups. The Barred and Buff Rocks, Light Brahmas, Partridge and Golden Wyandottes and Partridge Cochin classes were second only to New York, and in fact, some of these were even larger. The cooping will be by E. S. Freeman, with "Nutmeg" coops. The list of judges is not completed yet and will be announced later. This show coming at this date will give breeders an opportunity to try out their birds for the New York and other shows. Stamford is a great place for making sales, the attendance being exceedingly large. Premium list will be mailed upon request, as soon as it is out.

R. M. CLARK, Sec'y.

STILL ANOTHER.

There will be held in New York city, March 6th to 24th, 1905, a Chinese poultry show. This show will be held in the Chop Suey Bazaar, 16 Mott St., and the exhibitors will be limited to Celestials who have participated in at least two of the Boxer massacres during the late disturbances in China. It is expected that this show will far exceed anything before attempted to bring into closer relationship the chosen people who have done so much to uplift and root out the attempt of foreigners to civilize them. All premium money will be paid before the prizes are awarded, so that all can go away dissatisfied.

Premium lists are now ready for distribution and may be had by applying at the laundry, No. 3 Mott St., Mondays and Wednesdays during Lent. It is to be hoped that our countrymen will recognize that this is not our country and that dear old China should come first, last and all the time.

ONE LUNG, Sec'y.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN LIGHT BRAHMA CLUB.

Another year has rolled around and I hope it has been a most successful one to all. The club is in good shape, and we hope to have a great gathering of our members and their best birds at New York the coming January. We shall need some cups for this show,and ribbons for a number of smaller shows, consequently I hope every one will put his shoulder to the wheel, and let us see if the grand old Light Brahma can't do us proud and have as large and better classes at all shows than any other breed.

Dues are now payable. We have about 200 catalogues left. A two cent stamp carries them.

JOHN RUMBOLD, Sec-Treas.

THE STORY OF A POULTRY FARM.

The Struggle, Trials, Experiences and Successes of a Practical Poultry Fancier.

By W. H. Card.

[Concluded from Oct. 29.]

In concluding these articles I trust that my story has been of benefit to some one, although I endeavored to steer clear of giving advice or ways for others to follow as per set rules. I simply have endeavored to show by my actual experience and trials, what can be done, but I trust my readers have also noticed running through the whole series, the fact that to be free, one must obey the law, although there can be no set rules to govern the hen business, there are laws that cannot be ignored, and those I have set forth for special notice according to the subjects at hand.

In my first article I spoke of rigid economy, etc., which meant no silk dresses, broad-cloth suits, excursions nor midnight lobsters. It also meant the living on the fat of the land, vegetables of every sort from one's garden, fruit without stint, broilers, roasters, ducks, fresh home grown pork and hundreds of other toothsome delicacies that are part and parcel of the rigid economy of a hen farm. But in spite of these, one's mind has their "rainy days," especially when good offers of steady employment at big pay and no care are thrust under one's nose (generally when a dollar looks as big as a church spire). When one's friends give free exhortations on wasted talents, etc., when the man with capital offers to be a partner, holding out glittering pictures of a quick fulfillment of one's heart's desire, and I can tell you as one who knows, dear readers, that such "rainy days" are harder to overcome than the "rainy days" of a flat pocket book, or disease or vermin in the hen house.

But it's a case of burnt bridges if one succeeds, and realizing that my chance to be president of the United States was lost in the shuffle with "we uns" years ago, I have come to the conclusion I can be the best there is in my own little circle of my heart's desire. I know that in the mere matter of acquiring the filthy lucre there are dozens of ways open that would discount poultry culture. But it's my life. I'm a fancier, first, last and all the time.

The love of fancy fowls keeps me in it. If it were dollars and cents I'd be just as happy sawing wood. Still I like the title with which friend Drevenstedt heads these articles, "Practical Poultry Fancier," because, in spite of the pipe dreams so common to "we uns," I must make it pay to enjoy the fancy to the fullest. To prove to the doubting ones, facts in figures, is almost as great a pleasure as winning a coveted blue. But, after all, I repeat, it's all for love and the world well lost.

CORRECTION.

Editor American Fancier: Under heading "The Mineola Fair," I was given one first. My winnings at that show were 1st and 3rd cockerels, 1st and 2d pullets, 3rd cock and 3rd hen Barred Plymouth Rocks. I will be very much obliged if you will correct this in your valuable paper.

SAY, Mr. Poultryman! Do You Know

THAT your hens can be made to commence laying earlier and lay longer, producing Higher results in egg yield,
Each bird showing a 25 per cent. increase?

How one hundred pounds of H-O Poultry Feed will go farther than two hundred pounds of any other feed? Our say-so is not the authority on which these claims are based?

Practical experiments show that spring chickens will start to lay early in October (do yours?) and will continue right through the winter if you Use a balanced ration exclusively. That it will promote rapid growth and Likewise the healthiest chicks of Truest color and strongest frame, with Richest flavor of meat,
Yet the cost of feeding is greatly diminished?

Feeding intelligently, safely, scientifically,
Economically, practically, profitably,
Each one of your chickens
Decides the secret of success?

Geese, young white, 16 to 17c.; dark, 14 to 15c.; pigeons, $1.75 to $2.75 per doz.

From a strictly fancy point of view, this is a very pleasant time of year.

With everything prepared for winter, the young stock pretty well grown and the old fowls through moult, the Fancier looks forward with pleasant anticipation to the time his pens shall be mated up.

The plumage of some mature birds improve with the moult, and others go back. The crop of youngsters he sizes up with his mind on the future; he tries to determine what the value of each bird will be when it will have reached the aged division.

No one knows the possibilities of a flock of youngsters better than the one that raises them.

The close observer will be abl e to tell at a glance what members of his flock will intermix with the best results. This is the rock on which the foundation of the Fancy is builded, a business done largely by mail, cash in advance on the honor of the seller, as the fancy poultry business is, would soon go to pieces but for this fact. Having grown the birds and knowing their possible breeding qualities, he is able to put together a pen of birds that will do him and his strain credit in the hands of their new owner.

Of course there are rogues and rascals still in the fancy who do not follow the golden rule in their dealing with their fellow man; there are also the ignorant and careless, but these classes are in the great minority.

To the credit of our great army of fanciers, it can be said they are prone to give over, rather than under in value when filling an order on their honor.

Having done justice to the fraternity at large, which I believe they are entitled to, I would like you to read the very excellent article on killing, picking and packing poultry for market, from the pen of Fannie W. Wood in the Tribune-Farmer. I says:

"In the first place, poultry should be given special attention for at least ten days before killing and should have plenty of food, rich in nitrogen, to bring the highest market price. Keep them from eighteen to twenty-four hours without food previous to killing; full crops spoil the appearance and the contents are apt to sour, which means lower prices. See that they have plenty of good, clean drinking water before killing, and they will dress out brighter and look better.

Kill by bleeding in the mouth or opening the veins of the neck. Never make the mistake of killing poultry by wringing the neck. Hang by the feet and bleed well. In most markets the heads and feet are left on, and the entrails are left in. Dry picked chickens or turkeys sell best to shippers usually. However, in many small cities scalded birds sell about as well. It is easier for the novice at the business to pick fowls that are scalded, and when they will bring about as good a price it might be best to dress them in this manner. When scalding chickens or turkeys, do not immerse the heads. Scalding gives the eyes a shrunken appearance. For scalding chickens or turkeys, the water should be as near the boiling point as possible without boiling. Whether scalded or dry picked the fowls should be plumped, after picking cleanly. This is done by dipping the bird in water almost boling hot for ten seconds; then at once into cold water. Then hang in a cool place, but not in the wind, until the animal heat is all out of the body.

To dry pick a fowl properly, no time must be lost after killing. While the fowls are bleeding and the bodies are yet warm, pull out the wing and tail feathers. Do this first, and pull straight to prevent tearing the skin. After picking wing and tail feathers, remove the others as soon as possible before the body gets cold, and you will not find the task difficult. A small scrubbing brush is just the thing to wash the head and feet clean.

Ducks and geese should be scalded the same as other poultry, but do not forget the importance of giving the water time to penetrate the feathers. It spoils the appearance to remove down by singeing. Plump the same as chickens and turkeys. Leave the feathers on the head for two or three inches on the neck, and remember fat, heavy ducks and geese are the ones that command the highest prices.

When selling dressed poultry do not overlook the fact that it pays to put only one kind in a package; have them alike in size, shape and color. Straighten out the body and legs when packing, so they will not be bent and out of shape when they reach their destination. Pack snugly to prevent moving about. Do not use old boxes of odd sizes. It is nice to have boxes of uniform size and line them with clean, white paper. Appearances add to the sale and the price, also. It certainly pays well to dress fowls properly and get them to market in the best possible shape. We know from experience."

NEWARK SHOW.

The 9th annual show of the Fanciers' Poultry Association of New Jersey will be held January 30th to February 4th, at Bambergers' Auditorium, Market and Halsey Streets, Newark. This hall is much larger than the old hall and is well lighted on all sides, and in the very heart of the city. The committee are at work on the premium list, which will be mailed about Dec. 15th. Several new features will be announced in the premium list. Write the secretary for one. As the regular monthly meeting night of the board of directors of the Newark show comes the night before election, the meeting will be held Monday evening, Nov. 14, at 751 Broad street.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

TWELFTH ANNUAL SALE.

We will have our Twelfth Annual Sale for the month of NOVEMBER of the World Wide Known Egg Producer,

BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC.

On account of the late Spring this year, there were less birds raised than ever before, so the demand for fresh laid eggs will be the greater.

To help supply this extra demand a little BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC in the morning mash will do the work. It starts the pullets laying early and keeps them laying all through the winter. It helps the old hens through moulting and gets them to laying before the very cold weather sets in.

Those who have used BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC once will never try anything else, as it does more than we say it will do.

The regular price is 1 lb., 25c; by mail 40c; or, 5 boxes, $1.00.

We will sell during the month of NOVEMBER only a 1 lb. box, 15c; by mail, 30c! or, 7 boxes $1.00, shipped via express or freight from New York.

This is a big saving to our customers, old and new, and those wishing to double their profits should take advantage of this special offer.

At these reduced prices, positively no orders filled before November 1st nor after November 30th.

We sell all kinds of POULTRY SUPPLIES and all are listed in our Immense Illustrated Poultry Supply Catalogue, mailed free. Send for one.

A WEEKLY JOURNAL DEVOTED TO Thoroughbred Poultry Culture.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 584. JOHNSTOWN, NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 12, 1904. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

Birds at St. Louis.

Pen Pictures of Feathered Beauties=Written by America's Greatest Experts.

We start this issue with a specially prepared report on the American classes, written by Judge Theodore Hewes, editor of the Inland Poultry Journal, and one of the best judges in the United States of America. Following Mr. Hewes comes Mr. Geo. H. Burgott, the Leghorn king, Arthur O. Schilling, the Bantam duke, and last, but not least, Sir William McNeil, the owner and sole proprietor of Hamburg and Poland. Read what they say.

JUDGE HEWES' REPORT.

Barred Rocks.—Cocks. First, under size; six point comb; little dark in beak; tail not finished and carried rather too high. Very good in color throughout; same shade in all body sections except a little dark on wing bow and back. Legs very light in color. Second—Large bird; several shades lighter in color than first, good in head points and color of legs; tail only about half in; no sickles showing and uneven barring in main tail and rather light in neck. Flights mossy up near junction with wing. Uneven in color on wing bow, showing too much silver. Third—A large bodied bird, shown in poor condition; comb showed signs of frosting; middle serrate in center of comb apparently having been taken out. Uneven on surface; tail poorly developed; legs too light in color and quite a bit of dark in back. Fourth—The brightest surfaced bird in the class. Comb rather small—four points. Good eye, beak and legs. Tail about half developed. A little weak in tail barring and flight feathers in wings not fully matured; a trifle light in undercolor of back; remarkably good in neck, breast and body color, undoubtedly should have been placed third. Fifth—The best shaped body of any bird in the class; barring a trifle uneven; tail quite well matured; wings good in flights and secondaries and fairly good on wing bow; comb turning over a trifle at rear, undoubtedly caused by injury. Good in leg color; shows a trifle dark in beak; remarkably good in eye color. His weakest section is color of neck being too light for rest of body, and not as good in parallel barring as other birds in the class. Cockerels. First—A well matured bird; quite even in surface color, but lacks in barring in all sections; not parallel enough but quite even on surface. Comb well matured, would be discounted in score card show about ½ point. In general shape undoubtedly the best cockerel in the class. Well developed in all sections; good in eye and legs. A remarkably good bird considering the season of the year. Second—Well matured bird, something on the pony type, will never be large. Very bright in surface color; tail about one-third developed, entirely lacking in sickles; main tail showing very good in color. Wings a little weak in flight; fairly good on shoulders. Six point comb, showing clearly that one serration had been removed near the center. Beak, legs and eyes good in color. Third—Rather short, more on the Wyandotte type; tail carried a trifle too high and not finished. Very good in barring in main tail; sickles not developed at all. Comb poor; serrations starting back about middle of comb, showing poor in front. Would be discounted about two points in score card show. Legs a little light in color and some black in beak. General color throughout even and of about the right shade. Very good on wing bows. Fourth—Quite a nice shaped bird, not quite tall enough for length of body. Surface color too dark, showing more or less of metallic barring on outer surface. Good legs. Two front serrations in comb too low for the other points. A little weak in eyes and beak showing a trifle dark. Fifth—The same type as fourth. A little low on legs for length of body. General barring throughout similar to fourth except surface a trifle brighter and showing less of the metallic. Tail and neck color remarkably good for male. Very strong in head points and with a little handling would have landed higher in the money.

JOHN B. HADAWAY
Donor of the Partridge Wyandotte Championship Cup.

Hens.—First—A large bird, undoubtedly 1½ to 2 pounds over standard weight. Remarkably fine in comb, beak, legs and eyes; well finished. Baring a little wider than we like but all sections harmonizing. A remarkably fine specimen in all sections. Tail not quite developed, but showing good barring parallel in all main tail feathers. A grand hen and worthy the blue ribbon. Second—One of the best surface colored hens in the class; even barring; a little bit darker in neck than we like, but showing well throughout. Fine finished specimen with good beak, eyes and legs, but comb in bad condition, torn a trifle at rear and falling over. This bird is of standard breeding and from a money standpoint is without doubt one of the most valuable females shown at St. Louis. Third—A well finished specimen; good in shape and all sections except back, this being a little bit Cochiny. Showing some black in back. Good eye and legs. A little wider in barring than first or second, especially on wing bows. Part of back being too light, but even surface; neck and tail showing remarkably well for a hen with so light a surface. Fourth—A bright colored specimen on surface, but a trifle small for her class. Very dark in beak; comb only fair and showing signs of being frosted; legs a little off in color and condition. A little work might have improved this specimen in this particular. In surface barring, equal to any in the class; not so strong in under color of tail as the three birds placed ahead of her. Fifth—In surface color, compared favorably with fourth. A trifle under size as a hen, but quite well finished; showing some black in beak and very deficient in leg color, being both light and spotted. Back a little long for size of specimen and a trifle Cochiny; tail not carried at the proper angle, having much to do with shape of back. Tail and wing color very good; quite well proportioned in black and white, the barring on wing feathers striking even with those on either side. Pullets. First—A bright surface colored bird; not very well developed, only a few feathers in tail, both sides being defective. A small stripe of black in beak and a little off color in lower part of legs down near junction of toes; also showing trace of willow color on both middle toes. The grand surface color, together with neck and wing barring, undoubtedly had much to do with landing her in the money. Comb and eyes good. Second—Good in shape of body, breast and back; a little pinched in tail; surface color of neck too dark and feathers somewhat shafted. Beak a trifle dark on both sides. Strong in eye and comb; a little deficient in legs. Not so good in surface color as either first or third, but better developed than first. Third—A good pullet badly handicapped on position and light. Good shape in breast, back and body. Tail well matured, showing good barring. One of the most restless pullets in the exhibits due to her position in the aisle. Wings remarkably good in secondaries, but somewhat mixed in primaries, showing too much black and not properly defined. Comb good. Beak defective in color on both upper and lower mandible and legs a trifle clouded down near junction of toes.

Fourth—Not so good in shape as third; lacks some in breast; that section being a trifle flat and running somewhat straight to legs. Color good on surface except light shafting at base of hackle, but back is a trifle dark as compared to breast. Neck, wing and tail barring good. Beak shows some black. Legs and eyes good. Fifth—Quite good in shape and well matured for the season of the year; barring not quite so bright as we like and a variation of colors in the different sections, but all of them quite good. Beak shows some black on her upper and lower mandible, and several spots on legs and toes, surface of which are quite yellow. Wings and tail proper showing good barring with black and white about equally divided. Pens. First—In a class by itself, both as to males and females. But little fault can be found with them, and about the only criticism we would make is male showing a little bronze sheen on wing bows, and tail a trifle weak in barring. One of the best pullets in the show, both as to color and shape, is shown in this pen. Second—Very uniform in females, not alone in color, but in shape and size as well. Male a large, rangy bird, not quite as strong in color as the breeders want, but matching well with females. The male one of the largest cockerels in the house, very early hatched and shown at his best. Third—A very even lot of females, matching well in pen; good in shape and especially fine in beaks and legs. Male a trifle under size and will always be rather a small bird. The cockerel in third pen we like better in color than second, but his comb is bad, falling over at rear. Females alone pulling this pen through. Fourth—Headed by cockerel entirely lacking in tail; rather a light silvery sheen on wing bows, but shows good color in neck and back. A large bird that will probably round up into a good cock. Females in this pen even in color, but do not match well in shape; two of them being broad in back, carrying themselves well up; the other two the best in color, however, being narrow and rather pinched in tail and lacking some in breast shape. Fifth—A good pen of females; well developed in size with fine combs, beaks and legs. All of them, however, have slightly gone by in color, being past ripe. The male in this pen only ordinary. The females alone being responsible for winning the place.

BUFF ROCKS.—Cocks. First—A good surface colored bird throughout, showing same shade of color on neck, wings and back. A trifle light in body and breast color in comparison with the other sections. Comb running too far over back of head; serrations having been frosted or corrected to suit the occasion. Quite deficient in hackle, tail only about one-fourth developed; sickles entirely absent; several feathers missing in flights of both wings. Good shape in back, breast and body, but shown at least six weeks ahead of time on condition. Second—A well shaped bird. Comb not the best but as nature made it, without alteration; very deficient in neck, having quite a few of his adult feathers. Tail and wings in bad moult. Ear lobes showing a trace of white that would be dangerous from a breeding standpoint. Eyes and legs good. Third—not so large as first or second. Comb turned a trifle at the rear, apparently caused by injury. Eyes very light in color. Neck about two shades darker than back and wing bows, and at least three shades darker than body and fluff. Tail only partly developed; only about half of flight feathers in wings and secondaries only about one inch long. Fail to see anything remarkable in this specimen. Fourth—A bird good in body shape; proper length of back. Small comb, but not evenly serrated; first three points being too small for those in rear; back of comb shows sign of injury or alteration. Breast not deep enough through and tail only about half developed. Wings in bad moult, only four flight feathers in either one, and secondaries only starting. Nothing remarkable about this bird in the condition shown. Fifth—Like other birds in the class not near through moult. Neck only about half in; tail only about half length, showing no sign of sickles and quite a lot of dark. Good inbreast shape, fairly good in back shape. General surface color throughcut good. Wings in bad moult, especially flights, but showing good color. Bird lacks at least thirty days to be in show condition. Cock bird in 13417, while not the largest in the class, was undoubtedly one of the best shown, and how on earth they got by this bird without a ribbon, and that too in the money, is more than I can understand. Is one of the best finished specimens in the class, would weigh perhaps 8½ pounds, good in comb, neck and back. Tail and breast a shade darker than other sections, but far superior in color to three birds in the money. Cockerels. First—Good in shape and quite well matured; comb about the right size, but showing several extra serrates. Surface color good in neck and of about the right shade; back and wing bows too light; breast about two shades lighter than back, and body at least two shades lighter than breast; undercolor in neck, back and body too light. Wings have missing feathers in primaries with new ones coming in, showing almost pure white. The rest of flights all show white in upper web. Second—A fine shaped bird; the best in the class. Good comb; a little light in eyes; tail quite well developed and good color; wings, both primaries and secondaries, good. Quite a bit darker in shade of color throughout than first, but the color that the western breeders favor and one that the eastern breeders will favor in time. Bird in our opinion should have been first. Third—A large bird. Good in rock shape. Trifle too straight in back and narrow in front of tail, due apparently to condition of moult. Main tail and sickles quite well developed and good in color. In surface color about two shades lighter than second prize bird, but even throughout. Far better in breast and body color than first cockerel. Eyes a little light. Comb a little over size and poorly serrated, having at least five small points at rear in addition to two in front or regular serrates. Fourth—Well developed, apparently up to weight. Back color good, but a lot darker tnan 1st or 3rd, but running good throughout and the shade of color very much admired in the west. Tail carried a trifle too high. Body and breast color too dark, showing a shade of chestnut in breast and brown on end of secondaries. Comb quite good for a Buff Rock, but showing signs of injury at rear. Eyes a little light. Fifth—In general surface color very much the same as first, better in breast and body color, but not nearly so well matured. Tail not quite developed, sickles only showing to end of main tail. Hackle only about half in, but harmonizing well with saddle and wing bows. Good comb and legs and fairly good in eye. Flights and secondaries not quite matured. Hens. First—Remarkably good in surface color, a little lighter than is admired by the western breeders, but sound throughout. Not good in shape; too long, more after the Java type. Good head points. Comb a little higher in serrates than we like with an extra serration at the rear. Tail about one-half developed, but showing buff. This award undoubtedly well placed. Second.—An entirely different type of bird in shape than first, but very much alike in body color. Tail shows quite a lot of dark and comb a little high, somewhat twisted with several extra serrates. This bird stands quite a bit higher on legs than first, but is more after the writer's idea of correct type in Plymouth Rocks, aside from narrowness of back and elevation of tail, than the first prize specimen. Third—Good in shape, having about the correct length of back with proper sweep to tail. Tail about half developed. Flights only about half of the feathers in place, but showing very good in color throughout. Comb fairly good; one serrate missing in front, apparently caused by injury. This bird is a shade lighter than first or second, but a good one. Eyes just a shade light, but very good, considering the general surface color and better than is usually found on this shade. There is but precious little difference in quality between 1st and 3rd hens and they could have easily changed positions, and would under some judges. Fourth—A smaller hen and not through moult. Feathers show narrow on account of not being developed. Hen looks somewhat broad in all sections; color throughout is good and when properly developed would be a remarkably fine specimen. Comb not extra good and injured in front, one serrate missing. Considering the condition of the specimen we think she should have been placed further down the line, even with her good color. Will undoubtedly make a good show bird about December 1st. Fifth—A small bird. Feathers not fully matured, making the bird look smaller than she would if she were in full feathers. Comb slightly twisted, the rear turning around to the side. Body color throughout good even shade and harmonizing well. Tail and wings especially good for this shade of color, but like fourth we believe there were specimens in the class better matured that at this time should have been placed over her. Pullets. First—A little jewel. Good all over except forced a little too much for the show, increasing the size of comb, which will undoubtedly take normal position when bird is again in yards. She shows a little shade of color in tail, but take it all in all is one of the best out. Second—Remarkably fine in color, having that soft shade of buff so much admired from comb to end of tail. The bird is rather small, however, and apparently as well developed as she will be. Tail about three-fourths finished, showing some dark. Comb good, but not finishing up as well as we like. Very good in eye and leg color. Third—A wonderfully good bird; the shade of color so much admired by western breeders. A little stronger than Mr. Denny likes, but the shade our western breeders have been after for years and one that the western judges favor. Tail not quite matured and shows some black in main tail. Comb a little twisted in center with one extra serrate. Eyes a little light. Legs good. Fourth— A large bird, perhaps the largest in the class. A nice pleasing shade of color, but a little uneven at the tips of feather. Hackle a lighter shade at end than on general body color. Comb somewhat over-developed and serrations a little twisted. Very good in tail color, showing only a trace of black. Wings sound in flights and secondaries. Body and breast shade lighter than back. Fifth—A large bird. Quite even in color but more or less shafted, especially on wing bow and just back of hackle. Hackle about two shades darker than back proper. Tail carried a trifle too high, wings showing a little black in secondaries. Comb good. Eyes a little light, but as good as is usually found in pullets at this age. Legs and toes good. Pens. First—A very evenly balanced lot of females, same shade of color in all sections. Good in combs, legs, beaks and eyes. Shade of color that is very popular in the west. Male bird in class not so good; tail too high; comb little over-grown; a little light in eye and a trifle long in legs. Taking it all in all by far the best pen in the show. Second—Very even in color; a trifle lighter shade throughout in females than first pen. One of the pullets in the class being past ripe. Combs of females not so good as in first pen. Cockerel nicely finished specimen; tail about three-fourths matured and carried at a very good angle. Nice top color, somewhat shafted in breast. Third—Stronger in females, the pen well mated as regards color, but about two shades darker than first or second. Cockerel really the best of any heading the pens, but slightly under size and not through moult. From an exhibition standpoint for later shows would prefer this cockerel to either first or second male in breeding yards. Fourth—Even in color, the male harmonizing well with females. One pullet in pen, however, being short in tail and what color did show was too dark. referred to in our report of that show; undoubtedly one of the best shaped Rocks that has been shown this season; a little deficient in color of back and wing bows; about one point light in legs; grand in comb; good in eyes and the best finished cock bird in the class. Second—A big bird; not quite matured. Tail about three-fourths finished. An elegant show specimen. Gentle as a dog. Good in comb, eye and beak. Quite deficient in leg color, his weakest section. Third—Another grand specimen. Good length to back; remarkably good in comb; color compares favorably with the second bird and better in legs. Tail undeveloped, center of section being missing and no sign of sickles. In general shape, length of back, depth of breast and body equal to any in the class. Fourth—Aside from shape of tail, which is not developed, while other sections are virtually complete, this is the best bird in the class aside from first, and had I been judging this bird would have taken second. Is remarkably good in grand good bird and worthy a ribbon. Comb, eyes and legs good. Second—Grand in shape of body, breast and back; not quite through moult; little deficient in neck and tail; neck feathers a little short at lower edges, lower feathers not being complete. A little lighter in legs than we like. A good specimen and one that little fault can be found with. Third—A large hen; white as a snow-ball and in full plumage. Good six point comb; well shaped breast and back, but a little heavy in body—in fact, so much so that it pulls tail somewhat out of line. Aside from this fault, we like her quite as well as first. Fourth—The best shaped bird among the winners of the five leading prizes. Not quite in full feather, but so near it that no section could be cut more than ½ point for this defect. The owner was either careless or very honest, as he left a flecked main tail feather that showed on the surface, and wings in flights and secondaries showed considerable cream. She was fine in comb, beak, eyes and

THE J. B. HADAWAY CHAMPIONSHIP CUP.

Cockerel a well matured bird in shape, but will never be large. Very good in comb and body color. Tail and wings compare favorably with the winning birds in single entries. Fifth—Headed by cock bird, not so large as we like, only about 8½ pounds. Comb in bad condition, showing signs of frost. Two females in this pen very good; other two not so strong and not matching so well as females in first and second pens. We believe themajority of judges favor breeding pens headed by a cock bird especially when pullets are used for females, as it makes a better pen from a breeding standpoint. The fifth pen has many good features and with the two smaller pullets left out and the male bird better matured it would be hard to beat.

WHITE ROCKS.—Cocks. First—The first prize cock at Hagerstown and one head points, strong in eye, good leg color anw white in every section. Fifth—Not so large as the others in the class; at the same time appears to be up to standard weight. The bird is not quite through moult, lacking some in neck and only about half full in tail. The bird is sound in color, fairly good comb, the two front and rear serrations being a trifle too small and comb not starting as well in front as we like. Eyes a trifle light and legs about ½ point off under score card rule. Bird would make a magnificent breeder and if shown a month later would have hustled second bird for the money. Hens. First—A remarkably white bird and shown in the best of condition; full of plumage and just at her best. The fault we would find with her, she is a trifle too heavy in body, having a little of the Cochin type. A legs. Fifth—Cooped near the center of the building and shown in bad light; bird not showing to the best advantage; somewhat deficient in breast; tail is carried too near on straight line with back and legs show shade of slaty color. Body color throughout very good; comb about the correct size, right number of serrates, one serrate being nipped off of top, but not enough to injure looks of this section to any great extent. Cockerels. First—Quite a surprise to the breeders in this class. Comb is about the right size, but shows signs of a serrate having been removed from center; extra point in rear. Neck not quite matured and tail only about one-half in, showing no signs of sickles. In breast shape, length of back and body it is one of the best in the house. Color

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1904.

This issue of The American Fancier is late. Cause: Delayed St. Louis reports and election.

As to St. Louis reports we have no apologies to make for this tardiness. Good work demands time and study. Mr. Hewes' report is the most complete in detail ever written; Mr. Schilling's is in the same class, while good old George Burgott had to write his report all over, the original copy having been lost in the mails. Rare "Billy" McNeil's notes on Polish speak for themselves. There is more to come next week. We are doing the best we can to give our readers a clean, honest report of the great St. Louis show.

The election is over and the country is as safe and sound as ever. The Democratic rooster was not in evidence this trip and the day after looked like Job's turkey, viz.: Thin and weary, with just one tail feather left, and so weak and poor it had to lean up against the fence in order to crow. Well, we got our trimmings—the we 'uns being Democrats—but to the victor belong the spoils. The country is safe in the hands of its chief magistrate and we can have about three years' rest before the next move is made to rescue the country from the "demnition bow-wows." Subscriptions now due should be paid promptly. This is an era of prosperity of which even poultry publishers would like to have a slice.

The aftermath is coming in from St. Louis. After reading one bunch of letters, we are forced to the conclusion that it was a love-feast, where everything was peace and good-will on earth and not a cloud in the sky; on the other hand, we are confronted with a satchel full of correspondence that drives the harpoon rather deep into "this and that" and everybody in general and nobody in particular at St. Louis. The writer of these notes will require several weeks to sift out the mush and milk from the red pepper and ginger before he can arrive at the rock-bottom facts. And then we can present them.

There is, however, one very important bit of news from St. Louis, viz.: The American Poultry Association held a meeting there.

This is the age of the horseless carriage. The cowless milk is already on the boards to stay, and next we will have the judgeless show, to judge by the remarks made by well qualified seers.

* * *

Mr. Frank B. White did all he could to make the newspaper gang at St. Louis comfortable and happy, and they appreciated it very much.

* * *

Mr. Sharp Butterfield, the Canadian "juror" at St. Louis, has taken to the "Buttermilk Diet," so one of our Canadian friends informs us. We thought Anna Held had a mortgage on the milk and buttermilk diet to improve the complexion, but it seems our British-American friend is not to be outdone, and we expect to see him pose as a Beau Brummel in the near future.

* * *

What has become of "Dad" Davenport? He was formerly a lecturer on poultry at the poultry and farmers' institutes held in New York state, but we did not see his name among the list of speakers for the coming year. While Mr. M. Davenport is not a spellbinder, he is a very practical old gentlemen and has been in the chicken business for a great many years. He has given to the poultrymen some original ideas that in practice were not found wanting.

Catalogs are mighty poor things to judge chickens by.

The New York State Poultry Institutes this year include Johnstown, N. Y. December 2 to 3 are the dates set for the latter, and the poultrymen of Fulton county and neighboring counties should turn out en masse and help the good work along. Full program of the meetings will be published shortly in The American Fancier and local papers.

Spratts Patent advise us that they have made contracts to coop and feed the Hackensack and Rutherford shows, both in New Jersey, and have a large number besides on later dates, pending acceptance of terms. Their new calendar for 1905 will shortly be out and promises to be superior to the excellent ones sent out by this firm in past years. Our readers can obtain one of these by sending stamp and their addresses to Spratts Patent (America) Limited, 450 to 456 Market Street, Newark, New Jersey. They will not regret getting one, as the 1904 production has been of much convenience and a source of great satisfaction to the writer of these notes.

MERIDEN, CONN.

Don't miss the golden opportunity to win gold at the great Meriden poultry show.

Our show is considered by all the fanciers as "The Only Show in Connecticut"—the place where your birds are properly cared for; where visiting fanciers are made to feel at home, and receive their gold and premiums on the last day of the show.

Our judges, T. F. McGrew and W. H. Card, while not as numerous as some shows employ, are a great pair and do efficient work in all classes.

The birds will be exhibited in nutmeg coops, furnished by E. S. Freeman, in Turner Hall, about three minutes walk from the depot. For further information write Mr. W. H. Baldwin, Sec'y. Don't forget our date, December 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th.

W. W. SLEETER,

CERTIFICATE OF SALE.

This is to certify that I have sold to Mr. Homer R. Crookston of Walden, N. Y., the S. C. Black Minorca cockerel that won for me first prize as pen bird at Syracuse and Middletown and second prize in single class at Danbury. Mr. Crookston knows a good Minorca and has mated this cockerel with a fine pen of pullets, so as to be ready for the coming season's trade. Frank P. Studley, Matteawan, N. Y.

CORRECTIONS.

Editor American Fancier.

On page 67, official marked catalogue World's Fair poultry show, coop No. 19457, Silver Plymouth Rock pullet, 1st prize is awarded to "Crocker Foxboro, Mass." Said prize, coop and number belong to me. Party given, had not even entered a bird.

Although this same error existed in the unmarked catalogue and I saw three different parties supposed to be in authority, error was not corrected in marked catalogue, hence I am writing to a few of the principal poultry papers which I know will print the awards in full asking if they will not print this award correctly. Thanking you, I am very truly yours,

W. THEO. WITTMAN.
Allentown, Pa., Nov. 7, 1907.

Editor Am. Fancier.—Allow me to say through the American Fancier that I did not show at St. Louis, as my name appears among the winners. It is only as the breeder of 2nd pullet, for which the exhibitors, to whom I sold it, must have given me credit.

THE HADAWAY CHAMPION CUP.

The illustration on page three gives a small idea of the magnificent silver cup to be competed for by members of the Partridge Wyandotte Club of America, at the next annual meeting to be held at Brockton, Mass., in connection with the annual exhibition of the Brockton Poultry Association, November 30, December 1, 2 and 3, 1904. This cup is valued at $100 and was donated to the Brockton Poultry Association by Mr. John B. Hadaway, Brockton, Mass. It is to be known as the J. B. Hadaway Championship cup and is to be competed for annually by the members of the Partridge Wyandotte club. It is to be offered for the best two males and best four females exhibited by a member of the Partridge Wyandotte Club of America. Each winner will be presented with a sterling silver medal suitably inscribed with the date and place in which the cup was won, the name of the winner will be engraved on the cup with the date and place of meeting. The Partridge Wyandotte Club are to offer a 33 oz. sterling silver cup to the member showing the best pen of young birds, and the cash specials will be the largest ever offered in America.

The Brockton Poultry association is one of the oldest associations in New England and has upward of one hundred active members, the annual exhibitions of the association are widely known and it is the aim of the members to give to the Brockton Show the same high standard that the Brockton shoe maintains, which is known throughout the civilized world.

This year the Association is to coop the entire show with Empire coops, offer liberal cash prizes, give five regular silk ribbons, and in every way cater to the welfare of both exhibitors and visitors.

Mr. John B. Hadaway, the donor of the above cup, was born on a farm in the historic town of Plymouth, Mass. Has been an extensive breeder of thoroughbred poultry for many years and was one of the first to breed silver laced and white Wyandottes. Always aiming to keep abreast of the times, he early saw that the partridge Wyandotte was destined to have a great future, and being thoroughly conversant with the fine all around qualities which the Wyandotte possesses, he early took up the breeding of this variety, and to-day is breeding them exclusively. He has undoubtedly one of the finest flocks in America, and at the last New York show was the largest winner on this variety. He also exhibited at Brockton and N. Abington and on a total of 33 entries won 36 regular ribbons, three medals and two silver cups. He is president of the Partridge Wyandotte Club of America, a director of the Brockton Poultry Association and a true fancier in every respect. Mr. Hadaway had two objects in donating the above—first to encourage breeders of partridge Wyandottes to exhibit at Brockton; second—that the Brockton show might have the national reputation which the quality of the stock annually shown should enjoy.

The Association has issued a catalogue which is one of the finest ever issued in connection with a poultry show.

FROM 20 INCUBATORS TO 20,000

That is the unbeaten record of the Prairie State Incubators: 20 sold first year—20,000 sold in 1903. Prominent duck and poultry breeders favor the Prairie State because it's always reliable and gives high per cent hatches. The United States Government uses them exclusively. Be sure to send for our free, illustrated catalog full of pictures—among them photos of incubator rooms where 20 to 80 of our machines are in active operation.

BIRDS AT ST. LOUIS.

sound throughout; very white in quills and new feathers not quite matured. Second—Picked by the exhibitors to be the first prize bird. Good in comb, beak, eyes and legs. A little shorter than we like in back, and tail only about half developed. Sound in color throughout and might easily have changed places with first bird. We talked to Mr. Shellabarger about this award, as he was the judge that had the class, and he informed us that it took him quite a while to make up his mind which should have the ribbon,but finally awarded it to the first, as he was a little better in color and a trifle longer, or as he termed it, "a little better Plymouth Rock in length." Third—Owned by the same exhibitor as second, but not nearly as good a bird. Carries rather a drooping tail; legs not well balanced and tail only about one-third matured; legs showing quite a light shade in fronts. Very good in comb, beak and eyes. Fourth—A better matured bird than either of the ones winning over him, but right in that peculiar moult that adds a creaminess to plumage that one must expect in their whitest birds. In shape of breast, back, body and tail we favor this bird over either of the winners. Comb is good except the front serrate, which is missing. Eyes a little light and legs off color in front. Fifth—Shown in center of building, badly handicapped by light. Has good length of back and body; deficient in breast; not quite finished in neck; has well shaped tail but carried a trifle too low; very good in comb—five points—rear blade carried a trifle farther back than we like, and not as yellow in legs as we like. A bird that lacks about thirty days of being finished. Pullets. First—A well matured pullet, undoubtedly had been laying,showing head and comb development similar to a hen. Shows a nice shaped back and breast and well spread tail. Remarkably good in color of plumage and aside from comb being a little large and having two extra serrates, but little fault could be found with her. Legs, beak and eye good. Second—An entirely different type of bird from first; quite high on legs. Neck and tail not full. Back almost if not quite a straight line from hackle to tail. Comb, eyes, back and legs good. One of those peculiarly shaped pullets that develop into a first prize hen, but somewhat awkward in the pullet class. Third—We fail to see anything particularly remarkable in this bird. Neck has that peculiar growth of feathers that curl around instead of falling straight as they should. Tail is too long. Back a little pinched in front of tail and somewhat deficient in breast. Comb, eyes and beak good. Legs no quite so yellow as other specimens in the class, but very good considering distance shipped and length of time on exhibition. Neck and tail are the defects we would criticise most in this specimen. Fourth—A little jewel and one that we believe the majority of judges would have placed higher in the awards. White as milk in all sections; almost a a perfect comb; good bay eye; good legs; tail, while not quite full, carried at sufficient length to bring out the concave to back. The pullet in coop next to fourth, owned by same exhibitor, a far better specimen and in our opinion the best in the class. How the judge missed this bird is a mystery. Fifth—Another good one in all sections except tail. This section pinched and carried too near on a straight line with back. Very sound in color; good comb, eyes and legs. If she finished at rear as well as she starts, this would be a remarkable specimen. Pens. First—Headed by a cock bird undoubtedly one of the best males in the breeding pen class, but not through moult. Shows good length of back; good depth of breast and body and breeding comb. Good in eye and legs; tail only about half developed and hard to guess how it will look when finished. Females in this pen far from our idea of perfect specimens. One pen being especially bad in shape of neck and back, being more on the Cochin type than Plymouth Rock. The male alone undoubtedly had much to do with landing this pen first. Second—Made up of cockerel and four hens. Cockerel as white as milk; not quite finished in tail and hackle only about three-fourths developed. Hens in this pen A1 in every respect—not a poor one in the class; all in full feather and in the pink of condition. Good combs, eyes, beaks and legs. This pen should certainly have changed places with first. Third—Headed by cockerel with four hens as running mates. Cockerel a nicely finished bird with good comb, eyes and beak. A little short in back and not quite so good in shape of back and tail as we like. The cockerel will never be a large bird, but will always be a showy one. Three hens in this pen remarkably fine in every respect and shown in elegant condition. The other hen slightly out of condition, showing bad at the time the award was made. Fourth—Headed by a cockerel. Rather a small bird. A little narrow at back and not as well developed in breast as we like. Two females in this pen not quite in full feather and not shown in as good condition as this veteran breeder usually has them. Fifth—Cockerel and four pullets. Females a trifle under size and two of them not quite matured. Very sound in color, both male and females; also strong in comb,eyes and legs. About a month more would be required to put these birds in a first class show size and condition.

BUFF WYANDOTTES.—Cocks—First—Nice short backed bird, even in color throughout but a little stronger in neck than we like. Tail not quite matured, but showing sufficient length to distinguish the colors; very little black in tail. Flights perfectly sound, only a little trace of black on secondaries. Comb following shape of head nicely; a little coarse on top. Eyes, lobes and legs good. Second—A larger bird. A little longer in back; better in general surface color, but not so good in tail and wings. This bird not so well developed in breast, and legs about ½ point long as compared to first specimen. Comb about the proper size, showing small hollow in front and not quite even on head. Eyes a little light. Third—A large bird. Very nice in surface color, having soft shade but not through moult; neck and tail being quite deficient,tail showing quite a bit of black. Comb a little large and somewhat unevn on top. Back and body rather long. Bird lacks about one month to properly fill for exhibition. Fourth—A good colored bird, having same shade in all sections; a little darker in breast and body than we like. Tail quite well matured, but showing over half black in tail proper. Back and body too long; comb follows base of head, but is somewhat hollow in front and runs off to one side at rear. Fifth—A smaller bird than either of the winners. Remarkably good in shape for Buff Wyandotte and especially strong in comb. Good eye and ear lobes. Surface color uneven; shows light in base of hackle and quite a bit of black in tail. Legs somewhat scaley. Specimen not shown in the best of condition. Cockerels. First—A remarkably fine specimen; a little small, due entirely to age, but quite through moult except in hackle, bing a little short at base. Color about all that could be expected in a Buff Wyandotte. Hackle, saddle and wing bows harmonizing and only a shade diffrence between these sections and breast and body. Quite well developd in breast; short back; good comb; a little light in eye and showing some white in lobes. An easy winner in his class. Second.—In color very similar to first bird. Not quite so good in tail proper; a little better in color of legs. Comb somewhat uneven on top, spiked at rear, having a tendency to turn up. Eyes pale; back and body longer than that of first specimen. We consider this ribbon well placed. Third—A nice shaped little fellow; weight about seven pounds. Very good in neck and back color, but failing on wing bows and tail. Entirely too much black in main tail,also showing quite a bit of black in secondaries and primaries. Very good in shape, having about the right length of back and well developed breast. Eyes a little pale; comb about the right length, but a little narrow in center, spiked too broad at end. Fourth—The best comb of any cockerel in the class. Eyes light; neck, back and wing bows a rich golden buff and all sections harmonizing, with only a shade difference betwen top and bottom color. Shape more on the type of Plymouth Rock; is longer in back and body than he should be; a trifle high on legs and not well developed in breast. Color and comb had much to do with landing him in the money. Fifth—More after the type of first bird than any cockerel in the class. Somewhat better in comb than first and about the same shade of color throughout; undoubtedly from the same line of breeding as first cockerel. This bird smaller and not quite matured; however, hackle and tail are quite well developed. The fault we would find in color is shafting in breast and some light shafting or streaking in saddle. A good cockerel throughout. Body and back about the proper length and will crowd first close with thirty days more time. Hens. First—A fine colored speciment throughout, showing same shade in all sections and but little shafting. Tail and wings remarkably clear. Good lobes; comb a little uneven on top; legs a trifle light. Back and body longer than we like in a Wyandotte and tail carried a little too high. Second—In color very similar to first; first a little bit stronger in back and wing bows and showing quite a bit of shafting. Remarkably good in comb; a little off in eye. Back and body too long and tail section about an inch longer than it should be to show the bird to the best advantage. Third—Very much on the same type as second bird. A little better in tail shape, but trifle narrow in back. Legs about an inch longer than we like on a Wyandotte and back and body too long. Color quite sound throughout, especially strong in wings and tail, showing a little shafting on wing bows and back. Comb good in front, a trifle narrow behind. Eyes, lobes and legs good. Fourth—Quite a bit lighter in color than other hens, especially so in breast; showing quite a lot of lighter lacing on outer edge of feathers. Tail long, back too narrow and pinched in front of tail. Breast the best in class; comb fairly good, smooth on top and a little narrow behind. Eyes and legs good. A little long in back. Fifth—One of the best shaped hens in the class; fine in breast and body shape; short back and a little pinched in front of tail. Tail shows some black, but could not be discounted more than one point. Both flights and secondaries buff. Comb and eyes good. Legs a little dark down near junction of feet. Pullets. First—Best pullet in the class by yards; just about as good as they grow them in every section, shown in the pink of condition. Color sound as a dollar in every section and of that pleasing shade so much admired by buff fanciers. There is hardly a criticism to find in this bird and in a score card show would go well n the nineties under the most severe critic. Comb starts good in front, but winds up a little narrow at rear. Without doubt the best Buff Wyandotte female shown in the west to date. Second—A very good specimen but would show better if she were farther away from her running mate. The shade of color a little stronger than first and showing a trace of shafting in back and wing bows. Tail carried a trifle too high; comb good, a little narrow behind. Somewhat longer in back than first pullet and narrower in front of tail. Third—In color very similar to first pullet. What we have said of her in this particular will fit the third bird. In shape she is quite deficient, being long in back and not so well developed in breast; tail quite long and showing a little dark at edges. Comb very good, something after the same type as first, a little narrow behind and somewhat light in eyes. Fourth—A lighter shade of color than either first or third. Not quite so well finished; neck a shade darker than in back and wing bows; tail only about one-third in, showing some black. Eyes light; comb about the right size, but hollow in the center. Bird rather young for show purposes and will always be a little long in body and back. Fifth—A fine shaped little bird,especially strong in breast development; not quite matured; tail just starting. A little too strong in color and somewhat shafted in back and wing bows; also showing a trace of shafting in breast. Will make a phenomenally good bird later on for she is the right length and will develop into a fine show hen. Pens. First—A cock bird at the head of this pen with four hens as his running mates. Quite even in color throughout, especially in females; two of them could have had a place in the single entries; the other two not so good. Cock bird too long in legs and not well developed in breast! short in back—in fact, about one inch shorter in legs would show a Wyandotte type. All the females in this pen entirely too long for Wyandottes and would show better in the Rock class if they had single combs. Second—Headed by cock with four hens. Show even in color throughout; a well matched pen. Male bird quite well through moult and short back and body; well developed breast with good comb. Females a little long, but quite sound in color, two of them showing more or less shafting, and one especially bad in comb. This is the only place in the Buff Wyandotte class where we would differ from the judge in his opinion. Second pen should undoubtedly have been first. Third—Cockerel and four pullets. Cockerel quite immature and not showing in the best of condition; hackle being only about half developed and the deficiency in saddle feathers makes the back look narrow. Bird has promise of making a good show specimen, but it will take at least two months to develop him. One pullet in this pen especially fine; others not well enough matured and tails not finished. Color of females throughout good and of about the right shade and harmonizing well in the pen. Fourth—Cockerel and four pullets. Cockerel large enough and quite good in color; even shade on back and wings; a little too strong in neck. Quite a good comb,but a little hollow in front. Too long in legs and not well developed in breast. Back and body too long. Females very much alike in color, but quite a variation in shape, one of them being especially strong in Wyandotte points; the other three being entirely too long and tails narrow and pinched. The pen matches well in color and shows good. Fifth—A well balanced pen; cockerel and four pullets. Cockerel the softest colored male in the breeding pen class; not quite through moult, being scant in neck feathers, making back look longer than it really is. Comb especially good. Females of one type and very much of the same shade of color, but undeveloped in tail; undoubtedly, this had much to do with setting this pen back.

SILVER WYANDOTTES.—Cocks. First—A large bird, weighs perhaps 10½ to 11 pounds. Not as short in back and body as we like and only about half through moult, neck showing very scant; tail about half developed. Lacing on breast very deficient up under throat, but clean cut on lower part. Wings show considerable white in flights, but good laced bar and fairly good lacing on saddle. Comb good; eyes ligh in color; legs good. Second—A smaller bird than either first or fourth and apparently about one-half pound under standard weight. Clean cut in lacing, except too dark up near throat. The center not so large on breast and body sections as find favor in the Wyandotte breeders of today. Shows some grey in undercolor. Back quite good on top, but centers rather small. Tail undeveloped; comb very good, spike might turn down a little more to rear; eyes and legs fine. Third—A blockier bird than either one of the ribbon winners. Short in back; hackle not well matured, but showing good in color, both in surface and undercolor; back too dark; centers not quite large enough but showing clean on top. Comb, eyes and legs good. Lacing in breast and body too dark. Wings, especially strong in lacing on bar and secondaries. Fourth—In shape very much after the style of first, but carries himself a little high on legs and straighter in back, and, like first specimen, not through moult. Comb good; lower breast and body lacing especially fine; too dark under throat. Wings in bad moult, showing quite a bit of white in flights. Neck very good for so open laced a bird, but running bad near neck. Back somewhat rusty on top and only fairly well laced in centers. Fifth—By far the best colored male in the class; quite good in shape, only about half through moult, but body and lower breast lacing simply perfect; shows some white edging on upper part of breast. Swell wing bow lacing and secondaries as good as a Sebright; saddle good on top with fine centers. Neck a good silvery sheen on surface, but a little light under. If we were to take our pick of the ribbon birds fifth would get our money, with quite a little added, over any other bird in the class. Cockerels. First—A swell little cockerel, good from end to end. Elegant surface color on neck and back; wings laced like a Sebright, with hardly a fleck of black in the white; wing bows absolutely pure; centers in back not quite so large as we like, but quite good throughout. Comb about the right length, but uneven on top and winding up a little blunt at rear. About the only fault we could find with this bird in color is a slight lacing of white on upper part of breast. Eyes a little weak; legs strong; tail about three-fourths matured, showing sickles about one inch beyond tail proper. This bird would weigh about six pounds. Second—A larger bird than first; longer in back and body, but quite a bit better developed tail and carried at proper angle. Comb smooth on top and hollow in center; lower breast lacing fine; upper lacing too dark in centers and a narrow white band on surface. Body shows only a slight ticking of white; quite deficient in this section. Eyes a trifle light; legs good. Third—A nice shaped bird, especially in back and tail; a little small, and breast undeveloped. Lacing in lower part of body good, but considerably mossed up on upper portion. Comb very good, corrugated on top, but doesn't follow skull at rear as close as we like; almost devoid of lacing in back, but with perhaps the best neck of any cockerel in the show. Wings good in bar and only fairly good in secondaries, but very defective in flights. Fourth—A well matured bird; rather long and narrow in back; breast not well devloped. Surface color of back very rusty on top, but very good centers underneath. Breast lower part fairly well laced; upper part almost black. Wings somewhat brassy on the surface. Flights almost solid white; comb good in front but a little hollow and spike turned up. Eyes and legs only fairly good. Fifth—A large bird, apparently forced for show and forced to an awkward size. Tail long; back rather long and not broad enough at rear; breast almost straight down, showing anything but good Wyandotte style. Comb, particularly good in size; fairly good on top. Wings strong in lacing, especially in wing bar, and the darkest stripes of any male in the class. Back fairly good on top, but not well laced underneath. Breast too light at bottom, breaks off, forming a band at junction of body. Eyes and legs fairly good. Hens. First—A swell little specimen, perhaps half a pound under standard weight. Short in back; well developed breast, with clean cut black and white lacing in all sections except in back at junction of tail, where it shows some mossing. Comb good; neck a little too black at end of hackle feathers; eyes light; legs good; primaries and secondaries of wings especially strong; well laced body. Second—In color a counterpart of first, quite a bit of difference in shade; she is longer in back and body and quite a bit longer in tail; tail covers quite mossy. Her general color, aside from mossing in tail coverts and secondaries, superior to first hen. Third—A fine shaped specimen except in back; a little narrow in this section and somewhat pinched in front of tail, owing to not being in full feather. Color snappy; black especially strong, but a little flecking on wings and back in white centers. Breast and body color good; wing flights strong, but weak in secondaries, showing a little mossy at end of feathers. Comb a little hollow in center. Fourth—An entirely different type of bird from either of the other winners, being longer in body and back; color strong in front, especially in breast, neck and wing bows. White centers in back about the right size; tail coverts flecked with black. Tail a little too high, making a sharp break at junction of back. Body a trifle dark in color, but showing lacing better than some others in the class. Fifth—Very much same shape as fourth hen; longer in back and body than other winners and what has been said of fourth bird in color will fit fifth hen except she is darker in neck, but better laced in body; back doesn't show so much penciling as fourth hen, and take her finished condition into consideration these two ribbons should be changed, making fourth fifth and fifth fourth. Pullets. First—One of the grandest pullets I have ever handled; good in every section, both in shape and color. Sebright lacing in all sections with scarcly a speck of black in white centers. Right length of back; well developed breast and carried down as it should be, but a trifle dark at ends. Comb, eyes and legs especially strong. Flights being the only section that could be criticised; this section being mossed up—about as much white as black and badly intermingled. Second—A large bird with grand lacing. Too long in back and body, more on the Plymouth Rock order; neck a little black at base, showing some whit in flights, but especially strong in secondaries, rivalling the Sebright in this particular; white centers are clean cut and show but very little mossing, that only on a few feathers at end of tail. Tail covers the best of any bird in the class except first. The only fault we would find with this pullett would be in length of back and body. Comb, eyes and legs good. Third—Almost exact color of first, but not so good in shape, being straighter on back; tail carried almost on a line with cushion; better in wings than first bird, only mossing to be found is in tail coverts. Comb, eyes and legs good. Fourth—With about one more month to develop this bird she would equal first and third bird, both in color and shape. She is quite immature, although about up to standard weight. Will make a large bird and will make a show specimen for December exhibitions hard to equal; clean cut lacing with the brilliant black lacing so much admired. Were we making a selection for breeding purposes, next to first pullet this would be our choice. Fifth—A different type of bird from first or third; longer in body and breast cut down a little shorter in front; lacing quite distinct and very open; especially strong on wing bows and back. A little bit of mossing near junction with tail; tail only about one-third developed, side feathers about one-third grown. Comb a little high and uneven on top. Eyes and legs good. Pens. First—Without doubt the best pen in the class—cockerel and four females; all of them undoubtedly hens or very early hatched pullets. Cockerel not quite matured; neck hackle only about half in. Good lacing in breast; wings good in secondaries and wing bar, but quite deficient in flights owing to too much white. Tail just starting, giving bird a bad appearance and making him narrow in back. Body slightly mossed. Females good in shape and comb and especially good in lacing in all sections. Females of same type and match well in color. Second—Headed by a well matured cockerel and four pullets, pullets not matching well in shape, showing thre distinct types; color in females harmonizing very well; smallest pullet in the pen would be our choice; others too long in back and one of them especially long in tail with very dark undercolor. Male bird fairly good in shape, but too long in legs. Neck and saddle surface color quite rusty; breast lacing particularly good at lower part, but too dark under throat; body almost entirely lacking in lacing. Third—Cockerel and four pullets. Cockerel a big bird, undoubtedly hatched early in February. Very good in breast and body shape, but too long and straight in back; tail well developed and carried at about the right angle. Comb, eyes and legs especially good. Lacks in lacing of breast, upper lacing being too small in white centers, with white edge on the outside; lower lacing only about half as large in white centers as should be and very little color in body. Females quite good in color throughout; two pullets especially strong. Other two not quite matured, showing chick feathers and tails only about one-third finished. Fourth—Cockerel and four pullets. Three females in this pen match well in color and shape, the other one different in shape and showing an entirely different style of lacing; last named pullet the best shaped one in pen with the cleanest cut lacing, but a little dark. Male rather small; quite a bit of mossing on back; good lacing on lower breast, but loses some up under throat. Wing flights show some white near end. Comb and legs good; eye weak. Lacing and undercolor of saddle quite distinct and neck especially good for a bird with this style of surface color. Fifth—Cockerel and four pullets. A better shaped male than either second or fourth. Same trouble with females in this pen as second. There is such a vast difference in type, lacing about alike on all of them; fairly good, but not especially strong; white is better than the black; black a little faded at edge, showing a dull color. Two females in pen rather long in back and tails, on one of them carried entirely too high. This same bird is quite long on legs. Cockerel is strong in wing color, aside from a rusty color on wing bow. White centers in saddle too small and not clean cut.

in head points, but white and an easy winner; the 2nd, another grand one, off in head or would have hustled first; 3rd, white, good shape but too low on legs. The balance of the class fit to place in any show room, the winners all in good condition. Cockerels, (66). 1st only wins over 2nd on account of a slight defect in head; the 2nd no doubt the grandest specimen that has ever been put up in a show room, and no doubt will warm up Leghorn alley later; he could not be moulded better; 3rd, a grand, good bird, not quite as typical. The same can be said of cockerels as of cocks, many birds fit to exhibit at any show. Hens (63). Another way up class. 1st, a grand hen and the type that we all like to see, Leghorn all over, with grand head and comb and white plumage, trifle pale in leg; 2nd, a duplicate in shape, but not as good in color; in 3rd and 4th we find two grand specimens, especially large, and yet carry Leghorn type, but fail in this hot class in head points; the balance all good ones. Pullets (83. 1st, a duplicate of 1st hen, with grand legs and an easy winner, the kind that can win anywhere; 2nd much like the first, not quite as good in leg; 3rd, a very fine pullet, but like 3rd hen, loses in head; 4th, very typical, but not as good color; the balance away up in quality. Pens (33). 1st, an easy winner. As they were, the 2nd might have raced the first, had it contained a better male; 3rd, a very even lot, well mated, but not quite as white; 4th, 5th, 6th were pens that it would do you good to look at.

S. C. Brown Leghorns. Cocks (30). 1st in the pink of condition, and one that stood out from the balance, easily placed; 2nd, a very good bird, also well conditioned; 3rd, would say that we prefer the 4th to him. however, might show better if in better condition. We like the 4th bird very much, and especially the sixth bird, which when in the pink will hustle the best of them. Cockerels (52). 1st, well developed, grand, good color, fine head points and a typical Leghorn,well placed! 2nd, a well developed bird, but not as good in color of head; 3rd, a very dressy bird and in good condition, not quite as typical. We liked the 4th bird very much, but did not handle well;the balance were all very good specimens. Hens (55). 1st, 2nd and 3rd hens,very much the same color, but are a trifle darker than we prefer. They vary some in shape, but 1st is an easy winner, all considered; the 4th, good color, but short in legs and off in leg color; 5th is a bird that we very much liked and had she been in better condition, would have stood farther ahead in the line; the balance all very good specimens. Pullets (72): 1st, just exactly the kind of color that we are looking for, comb somewhat undeveloped, has grand, yellow legs and is easily 1st. The 2nd pullet right after the first and will certainly be heard from later; has also grand color; 3rd and 44th, very tpical birds, and of high order; might have been in better condition and no doubt would have been up a notch. The balance of the class darker in shade, but typical birds. Pens (18): 1st contained 4 grand females and was a grand pen. Male, a cockerel, trifle undeveloped; 2nd, contains four grand hens and a great good cockerel, and is only excelled by first in females;3rd is also a very good pen, and no doubt would breed better specimens than they are; the 4th pen was also a very representative pen,but for the lateness of moult in females, and 4th, very typical birds, and of high would have stood higher in rank.

S. C. Buff Leghorns. Cocks ((13) 1st cock, an even colored bird throughout, but a trifle too light in shade, fair comb, poor lobe good tail; 2nd a very good colored bird a trifle dark in wingbow, fine comb, poor in lobe tail not well furnished; is no doubt 3rd fine colored bird good comb and lobe tail not well finished; is no doubt reason for lower place; 4th, good colored, large bird, comb injured some, off in head and tail; balance of class way up in merit. Cockerels (22) 1st a grand good bird, and that sort that is easily placed, that means good in all sections, good lobes, legs and comb; 2nd a fine large, well developed bird, fair lobe not so even in surface color; 3rd, we liked very much and almost preferred him to the second; legs and comb good, also lobe; 4th, a shapely bird, but too dark in color, however, a good bird, and the same can be said of the whole class; all good ones. Hens (19). 1st, an old time winner,and also the kind that is easily placed; stands out from the balance; 2nd, another fine hen, a trifle better in comb, but fails in size; 3rd, a nice colored bird, but too heavy in comb good size, but leg color too light. The balance of this class had many good birds. Pullets (25). 1st, fine head and lobe, typical in shape, trifle too dark in surface color, somewhat uneven; 2nd,not of the proper shade in color, fair head and lobe; 3rd, a neat bird,not quite developed to perfectly show surface color; 4th, the color that we prefer,good lobe, head and leg, but fails in tail not being developed; balance of class fine for any show room. Pens (9). 1st, a well developed pen of birds, male not quite even in color; 2nd pen we also like very much; females a very even lot, and well matched; 3rd, a nice even pen, but are not developed; 4th, a trifle too dark to be further up; 5th, a very nice pen loses because male is too dark.

Blue Andalusians.—11 cocks, 12 cockerels, 9 hens, 13 pullets. A very fine show and honors very evenly distributed; a class that is a credit to any show.

Anconas.—A very small class, compared to many, but of very good quality.

Black Leghorns.—Small classes, but were full of the very best of quality, especially the first cock. We had expected to find a much larger class of this variety.

In Silver Duckwing Leghorns, only two birds shown, one hen and one pullet, of fairly good quality.

S. C. White Minorcas.—Small classes, 5 cocks, 3 cockerels, 8 hens, 2 pullets and 2 pens. However of very good quality.

S. C. Black Minorcas.—All classes filled up with good birds. Cocks (25). 1st, a grand, strong bird, good color and type; 2nd follows him closely, not quite as large; 3rd, a very good bird, but somewhat different type. The balance of this class all birds fit to win at any show. Cockerels (28). 1st, a very fine bird, good in type and color; 2nd, also of a high class and placed where he belongs. We also like the 3rd bird very much, but did not handle him. A grand, strong class all the way through. Hens (28). 1st is a fine, typical hen of a very good color; 2nd, a hen we almost preferred to 1st; good size, shape and head; the 3rd is also a grand hen and very much liked. The whole class full of good ones. Pullets (31). 1st, a grand, large, typical bird in fine condition, good color and a good general makeup; 2nd, is also a very nice bird and follows 1st closely; 3rd and 4th are both very good birds, fit to win anywhere, and you might say nearly all the birds in the class would win, but there must be a choice.

GEO. H. BURGOTT.

ORNAMENTAL BANTAMS.

These were a show in themselves and the whole world was represented, as not only Canada and the United States competed, but a number of birds, we understand, were imported from Japan and elsewhere. About every known variety in existence was there, and, as was stated, some that do not exist. Japanese were an exceptionally strong class and contained some world beaters.

Black Japanese. Cocks—1st a grand bird, low on legs and fine carriage; fails in comb; 2nd a good one, but not so low; 3rd a very fair bird, 4th and 5th fit for any competition. Cock in coop 17521 was to my mind the best Japanese in show. He is a typical bird in every way, but could not be placed on account of diseased leg. Cockerels—First will surely develop into a good one, 2nd rather young. Hens—First a top-notcher,and good all around, but in bad feather; 2nd a most beautiful bird, very small, nice,round body with good carriage and tail, might have changed with winner; 3rd, a very fair hen; 4 and 5 close up. Pullets—Only one, but she a beauty with a grand tail. Pens—1st grand, contained some fine specimens; 2nd close up.

White Japanese.—Cocks—First a fine little bird and good tail carriage, very small; 2nd very close up,good color and carriage; 3rd, another good one, but too large; 4 and 5 fit for any company. Cockerels—First, a grand one, will surely be a cracker-jack with more time; 2nd a very fair bird; 3rd a trifle large. Hens—A grand lot and hardly any choice between winners. What could be said of one was fair to the other. The balance of class very fair birds. Pullets—First has the make-up of a good one and balance are close up.

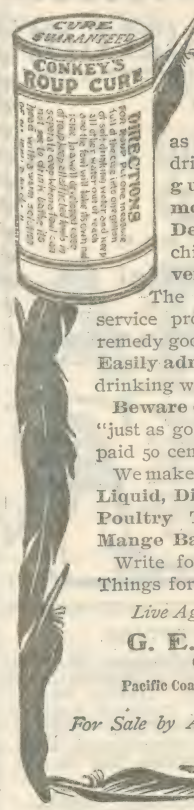
Black Tailed Japanese.—Cocks—Winner a good little bird, but in bad feather. Balance of class very fair birds, but not of the small, low type that is winning in the best eastern shows. Cockerels—First an easy winner and good all over; 2nd very fair bird, but too long in body. Balance or class only fair birds. Hens—First good, nicely marked; 2nd fails in color of tail! 3rd the best hen in class for shape, but fails badly in tail color. Balance very fair birds.

Booted White.—Cocks—1st a typical bird, an easy winner; 2nd fails in boots. Cockerels—1st a very fair bird; 2nd much better in booting. First hen and pullet typical birds, as were balance of class and close in competition.

Dark Brahmas.—Were represented by a number of notable specimens, especially winning cock and pullet.

Light Brahmas.—Cocks—1st was a very fair bird, but was rather large and long in tail, although good in hackle. Balance of class contained a number of birds that under some judges would be given preference, notably the 3rd prize bird. Cockerels—First fails in head and back, otherwise a good one; 2nd a very fair bird, fails in leg and toe feathering; 3rd a good bird,but fails in top color; 4th a grand little bird and I should make him a winner in this class; 5 and 6 immature. Hens—1 and 2 two extra good ones; 3rd a nice hen in shape and color; 4th a very pretty little bird and should have gone higher; 5 and 6 good quality, but just outclassed for winners here. Pullets—First a beautiful little bird in every way; 2nd another good one, but lacks in comb; 3rd very close up and balance very fair birds. Pens—First easy winners, good in quality throughout, with well matched females; 2nd rather young and immature, but good quality; 3rd a nice pen and should have gone higher; 4th a nice little pen of birds, but need more time for showing.

Cochin Bantams were a large class and the most typical specimens were the winning Buff hens, White hen and Black cocks.



Black Cochins.—Cocks—1st a fine little bird, good shape and color; 2nd, another good one, pushed hard for 1st honors; balance very fair. Hens—First grand, small, fine shape and color; 2nd trifle longer in body, but a very nice hen; balance of class very fair. Cockerels—1st a grand little bird, an easy winner; 2nd lacks in shape of tail and carriage,balance only fair quality. Pullets—First, a model bird, an easy winner; 2nd too large,; balance fair.

HADAWAY'S
Partridge Wyandottes

The past season at New York, North Abington and Brockton upon 33 entries, won 36 ribbons, 3 medals, and 2 silver cups, including all shape and color specials upon females and all color specials upon males at New York and North Abington. HUGO FREESE, Box 608, Rochester, N. Y.

Buff Cochins.—Cocks—1st a very nice bird in shape,but not even enough in color; 2nd even in color but fails in shape and comb; 3rd very fair , but fails in flights. Balance of class rather large in size. Cockerels—First,good shape, sound throughout, lacks in comb; 2nd nice, small bird, not so well developed as winner. Balance fail in color. Hens—First, a grand colored hen, low down, well feathered, but not of good carriage; 2nd a model Cochin and should have won. Among the others were some exceedingly good shaped birds, but failing in color. Pullets—a fair class, 1 and 2 being good in color, but nearly all failed in shape. First pen was about the nicest I ever saw for evenness of color and contained some nice females.

White Cochins.—Cocks—1st, good shape, but not good color; 2nd good in shape and color, should have been 1st; 3rd, another good one, but trifle large; balance of class good quality. Cockerels a good class, winners good all around, showing much quality for their age. Hens—First, a typical bird, very small and good color; 2nd loses on sizze; 3, 4, 5, good ones. Pullets—First a good one, low on legs and well feathered; 2nd, nice shape loses on leg-feathering; balance of class very fair. Pens—1st a good one; 2nd not matured.

Partridge Cochins.—Cocks—1st a good one, wins on condition; 2nd good shape and color; trifle large. Balance very fair. Hens—1st, a typical Cochin but rather large; 2nd smaller, not so good in color; 3rd very fair. Cockerels—Altogether too large, although of good color. Pullets—1st good cushion, too high on legs; 2nd on the same type, 3-4 close up.

Buff Laced Polish Bantams were represented by a number of very fair birds, especially the first hen. In White Crested Polish, both Beaded and Un-Bearded, we were much surprised to see the quality throughout and the number of specimens exhibited. We doubt if so many good ones were ever penned in one show room. The winners in both classes were typical little Polish, good in crest; and had those much desired blue legs and V combs.

Black Rose Combs were a respectable lot and the little black beauties were much admired. First cock, nice comb, good shape and color; 2nd nice shape, good color, but fails in comb; 3rd, another good one, but not matured. Balance good. Cockerels—1st neat comb and lobe, good color; 2nd fails in comb, good otherwise; 3rd not matured. Hens—1st nice, typical shaped bird, but in poor condition; 3rd another good one, a little higher on legs. 3rd same stamp, but good quality.

White Rose Combs.—Cocks—1st good bird in bad feather; 2nd bad in lobe, but good in shape; 3rd pinched in tail, a very fair bird; 4-5 good ones. Cockerels—First fails in shape, nice lobe, good color; 2nd on same type, not so good in color. Balance of class moderate. Hens—1st a typical bird; 2nd another good one, trifle larger; balance very fair birds. Pullets—1st a nice one, very small, good in shape and color; 2nd higher on legs, but nice otherwise; 3-4-5, birds fit to show anywhere. In pens of White and Black Rose Combs, one could pick out quite their own in the single classes. There were 3 pens shown of each variety; awards well placed.

Sebright classes filled well and competition was exceedingly keen, especially in Silvers.

Golden Sebrights.—Cocks—1st, typical shape, but fails badly in hackle; 2nd well laced, fails in size and style; 3rd very close up and like second. Balance very fair birds. Cockerels—1st a grand laced bird, good in evry way, trifle large; 2nd another good one, but fails somewhat in shape and size. Balance very fair, but fail in size. Hens—1st good in shape, fine narrow lacing, good ground color; 2nd a good one also, fails a trifle in shape; 3rd better shape, but cloudy in tail; balance very fair. Pullets—1st fair shaped, but nicely laced; 2nd good shape, but heavy in lacing; 3rd fails in shape and cloudy in tail.

Silver Sebrights.—Cocks—1st and 2nd both well laced birds, clean tails and good style; 3rd weak in breast and too large. Balance very fair. Cockerels—1st heavy in lacing, but even; 2nd finer in lacing and should have won; 3rd too large, fails in breast. Balance contained a number of very fair ones. Hens—1st a typical Sebright and the best one in the entire show, grand, narrow lacing, fine in shape, good every way; 2nd well laced, but heavier, fails in size. Balance very moderate. Pullets—1st well laced, but too large; 2nd on the same stamp. Balance very fair. Seven pens in each variety of Sebrights were shown and one can imagine what quality was to be found here and what sort of birds it took to win.

Miscellanous Bantams were in bewildering variety and of varying merit.

Buff Japanese, Golden Polish, Plymouth Rock and Frizzles possessed much merit.

The following list will give an idea of the varietis exhibited: Indian Game, Rumpless, W. C. Bl. Polish, Gray Japanese, Cuckoo Cochin, Black Minorca, Ancona, Blue Red Old English Game, Spangled Old English Game, Black Red Japanese, Buff Japanese, Golden Polish, Barred Ply. Rock, Frizled and Black Red Malay Bantams. A. O. SCHILLING.

POLISH.

Polish came out strong in numbers and quality and were a sight worth much to go and see, for here could be found the cream of the world's best, penned in competition. Many of the winners were in grand feather and form, while others needed more time to bring out their qualities.

Bearded Golden, while not so strong in number, were fine in quality. 1st cock, nice size and a good bird, but badly in moult; 2nd also out of condition, but a very fair bird. Hens—1st a grand hen, splendid crest, good in color and lacing; 2nd, 3rd badly in moult. Pullets—First a good one, rather young; 2nd close up. Cockerels—Only two and both rather young; winner will make a good one. Pullets—First a nice bird in every way; 2nd very close up. Pens—First contained birds of nice size and lacing.

Plain White.—Cocks—First a grand bird and a Polish all over and fit to win anywhere; 2nd close up. Cockerels, only two, both rather young. First will make a good one with more time. Hens—First a beauty, large and good in every section. Pullets—First a nice bird, will make a good one. Second close up. Pens—First contained nice, large birds and good in color; 2nd and 3rd good ones, but a trifle out of condition.

Bearded White.—Cocks—First a typical Polish, an old line winner; 2nd a very good bird; 3rd close up. Cockerels—First a very fair bird; 2nd not in the best show form. Hens—First a fair bird, nice crest, but hardly fit for showing at present; 2nd a beauty and could have changed with first. Pullets—First a grand bird with excelelnt qualities and pure white plumage; 2nd good bird, but out of condition. Pen—First a good one and fit to show against the world's best.

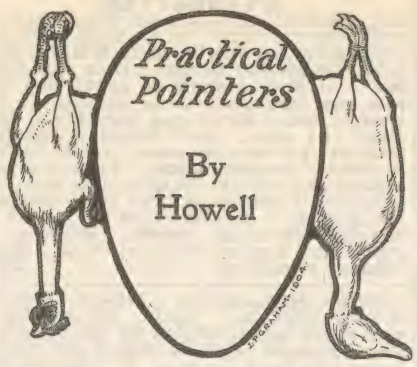
Golden Laced.—Cocks—First a grand bird, fine crest, good plumage and nice size; 2nd also a good one, but badly in moult; balance of class very fair. Cockerels—First a sure winner anywhere, fine crest and grand tail; 2nd a plain bird. Hens—First, a fair hen, rather dark in tail; 2nd should have won, she is good; a beauty in back and breast lacing and has a fine crest. 3rd has a large crest, but too dark in color. Balance of class very fair birds. Pullets—First a nice pullet with good crest, but lacks in breast and tail. Pens—First a fine one, fit to win anywhere; 2nd close up.



Bearded Silver Laced.—Cocks—First a grand bird and laced in every section, fit to win anywhere; 2nd a nice bird, but too dark. Cockerels—First a very fair bird, nice crest, good in plumage; second a beauty and should have changed places with first. Pullets—First a grand bird, with Polish qualities, good in tail, color and crest. Hens—First, grand crest, laced all over and a typical bird; second a good hen, but too dark in tail. Pens—First a grand lot of birds and in good show form; 2nd also a good one, as is 3rd, which loses on condition.

Plain Silver.—Cocks—First a nice bird, but poor in tail; 2nd close up. Cockerels—Winner lacks in breast; 2nd too dark in color. Hens—Winner a nice bird, fit for any competition; 2nd loses in tail. Pullets—First a nice pullet, but in wrong class,as she shows signs of a beard; 2nd a beauty in every way. Pens—First very nice birds; 2nd only a very fair pen.

Buff Laced.—Cocks—Winnera grand big bird, good buff all over, nicely laced, good crest; 2nd also a nice bird, but trifle dark in color; 3rd another good one, but has a crooked toe. Balance of class very fair birds. Cockerels—Winner an A1 bird in lacing, etc., but trifle dark in color;2nd also a good one; 3rd just the proper color, but not good in lacing. Balance of class very fair. Hens—Winner a nice bird, but light in color; 2nd also a good one; 3d has the right shade of color and should have changed with second. Pullets—First a good one and fit to win anywhere; 2nd close up; balance of class very fair birds. Pens—First a grand lot of birds and contained some very fair females.

White Crested Black.—Cocks—Winner a grand bird in size and color,with fine crest; 2nd another good one, but not ripe enough for showing; 3rd very close up. Balance of class away above average quality and could win anywhere when in the best condition. Cockerels—First, grand quality, fine crest, good color, nice shape; 2nd close up, but fails to winner in crest; 3rd good all around bird but lacks in symmetry. Balance of class top-notchers, and fit for any competition. Hens—First, one of the best we have seen to date, with a grand large crest, beautiful color, with excellent shape; 2nd another good one, fails to win in crest, but has grand color; 3rd lacks in crest. Balance of class good ones. Pullets—First, a grand pullet, fine crest and good all over; 2nd also a good one, with fine crest, but lacks to winner in shape and plumage. Balance of class could also be called almost typical birds. Pens—1st a picture to admire, as they were grand in every way; 2nd close up and pushed very closely. This is the grandest collection of this variety ever penned in one show room and anyone who could win here is to be congratulated, as never before were so many good Polish brought together.

If any careful brother who believes in letting his hens rest through the winter that there may be no extra wear and tear on their machinery, is having any trouble to keep his hens from laying, I wish he would send us down a photo of the hens.

Green food is as necessary to poultry as forage is to cattle. The fast approaching winter has depleted the natural sources from which the fowls have been supplying themselves and other sources of supply will need to be drawn upon. In my last trip through one of the city market squares, I saw cabbage heads of such enormous size, two of them would have fed a flock of fifty for a week.

CHICK STAR FOOD

IS THE CHICK FOOD.

Everyone that uses it says so. Your dealer will get it for you IF HE IS UP TO DATE. DON'T TAKE ANY SUBSTITUTE. For printed matter address 54tf

Star Incubator Co., Bound Brook, N. J.

Cabbage and turnips are two of the less costly vegetables suitable for poultry forage. Field beets can also be utilized when the others are not to be had. By far the major portion of poultry keepers have to depend on clover hay. Second crop clover is what is wanted. Cut as fine as you can, and soak well before feeding to the stock; by so doing, the cases of crop-bound will reach the minimum.

Try and have your stock in the best of condition to start the winter on. The old hen with her new coat of feathers should look as bright and sleek as an up-to-date young woman in a new gown.

The above parallel is not put forth with any desire to incite the younger fanciers to forget feathers for the time being and take up the study of the latest fashions in dress goods, but I am willing to wager, a lot of the out-of-town visitors to the Herald Square show will be looking over the exhibit of pullets and young hens on more floors than one of the Macy building.

To again become serious, it is nothing but contrariness on the part of moulted hens and well matured pullets, having a sleek coat of feathers and a red head, to go around singing a swan song and never lay an egg, when eggs are worth forty cents a dozen.

The only thing to do is to keep everlastingly at them, make them work for every bit of food they get; it is also the better plan to put them in their winter quarters before the serious business of feeding for eggs is commenced. Once they do commence they will then lay more regularly and steadily, and once the snow does come there will not be so many cases of fall roup and running noses to care for.

The agony of St. Louis is over. In the big classes it was a case of many entering expectantly and few coming out jubilantly, a case where many were called and few chosen.

A fellow could go in that show feeling as if he was wearing a No. 9 hatband, and come out in search of juvenile headgear. Oh, well! the St. Louis halo will be worth something commercially; there ought to be a little of the glamor attached even to a disqualification.

That gay guy who announced a chop suey poultry show in Chinatown in the last issue, proved to have gotten up an item of interest in this section of the city.

In view of the fact that the police have—following last Thursday morning's tragedy in a Bleecker street laundry in which the celestial participant lost his life—upon investigation found from two to four butcher cleavers in every laundry shop in the city. This proves our brand of chinks the equal of any Boxer in the Orient, and therefore well fitted to take part in the show he portrays.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

TWELFTH ANNUAL SALE.

We will have our Twelfth Annual Sale for the month of NOVEMBER of the World Wide Known Egg Producer,

BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC.

On account of the late Spring this year, there were less birds raised than ever before, so the demand for fresh laid eggs will be the greater.

To help supply this extra demand a little BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC in the morning mash will do the work. It starts the pullets laying early and keeps them laying all through the winter. It helps the old hens through moulting and gets them to laying before the very cold weather sets in.

Those who have used BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC once will never try anything else, as it does more than we say it will do.

The regular price is 1 lb., 25c; by mail 40c; or, 5 boxes, $1.00.

We will sell during the month of NOVEMBER only a 1 lb. box, 15c; by mail, 30c! or, 7 boxes $1.00, shipped via express or freight from New York.

This is a big saving to our customers, old and new, and those wishing to double their profits should take advantage of this special offer.

At these reduced prices, positively no orders filled before November 1st nor after November 30th.

We sell all kinds of POULTRY SUPPLIES and all are listed in our Immense Illustrated Poultry Supply Catalogue, mailed free. Send for one.

World's Fair Winners

Graphic Description of Many Varieties Exhibited at St. Louis.

Below will be found the continuation of the expert criticisms of the birds written by Mr. Theo. Hewes:

SILVER PENCILLED WYANDOTES.—Cocks. First—A grand specimen in every section, especially strong in color—not a sign of white in breast; well laced hackle and saddle; good comb; about the proper length of back; tail carried too high and about one inch longer than we like. Tail about the only section on this bird we would criticise. Comb, eyes and legs especially good. Wing flights and secondaries absolutely correct. Second—As good in color and comb as first bird, but longer in body and back. Better shape in tail than first bird and well developd. Bird shown in pink of condition; easy winner in his class. Third—In shape very much like 2d bird; not so good in tail shape. Body color fairly good, showing a little brass on back. Body and breast splotched with white, more like a pullet breeding Dark Brahma male. Comb, eyes and legs good. Fourth—A well shaped specimen in body, back and breast; very similar to first bird. Tail nicely finished and carried at the proper angle; comb too high in center and narrow at rear; slightly flecked with white on breast and body. A rare good specimen and one had we been judging the class would have been placed third without a minute's consideration. Fifth — A small bird. Quite a nice Wyandotte in shape but no larger than a cockerel. Tail only about one-half finished; sickles entirely absent; breast and body good in color; neck and back only half developed and showing quite a bit of straw in surface. Cockerels. First—Remarkably good in comb, eyes and legs; top color silvery white, free from straw. Back and body a little long; breast and body slightly flecked with white. A good specimen and an easy winner. Second—Good shape of back and body, very much like first bird; not so good in breast shape and tail carried a little high, showing some white in sickles. Comb too high in front and hollow in center; breast slightly flecked with white. Eyes and legs good. Third—A fine shaped specimen; especially strong in shape of back, being both short and broad; well developed breast; good comb, tail and legs. Quite mossy on back and considerable frosting in breast and body and showing a grey shade of white in flights. In shape compares favorably with first bird. Fourth—A large bird with particularly good top color; tail is too high and too long, comes up wedge shaped into back, making that section look pinched; breast badly mossed with white; some mossing in tail. Comb too long and straight; uneven on top and too narrow in center. Eyes and legs good. Fifth—A fine shaped bird except in breast; not properly developed, being quite wedge shaped in this section. Neck and back good; clean surface with good black undercolor. Comb too high and carried on a straight line; shows quite a bit of white in lobes. Legs off color down near junction of toes. Bird is small and apparently will never be large. Quite well finished. Hens. First—A grand colored specimen showing steel grey surface with clean cut lacing in all sections. Comb, eyes and legs good. Rather long in back and body and tail too long and carried too high. Color had much to do with landing her in the money. Second—Not quite so good in color as first, showing a little of the mahogany sheening, but a far better shaped specimen and owned by same exhibitor. Comb a little high and uneven on top; eyes good; legs a little off color and would be discounted about one-half point. Body a little mossy at rear. Taking color into consideration, first is entitled to the ribbon, but second makes a close fight for first money. Third—A large hen; very good in shape. Lacing entirely too dark, failing in the bright silvery color so much admired by breeders of this variety. Comb and eyes good. Legs a little cloudy; tail carried a trifle too high; back broad and of about the right length; breast and body fairly well proportioned. Shape, alone, lands her in the money. Fourth—A very clean cut little bird, just about at standard weight and shown in the pink of condition. Good steel color on back, breast and wing bows; a little laced in neck and slightly deficient in tail coverts; lacing on breast up under throat breaks a trifle, but between the two birds we would place fourth over third; leg color being her worst fault, it being quite dark. Fifth—Rather a small hen; low down on legs; something on the pony type. Color a little too dark, failing in that steel gray color so much admired; breast shows a tinge of mahogany color, light and spotted with black. Comb and eyes good. Breast a little narrow; back a trifle longer than we like. Quite a good specimen, however, and worthy a place. Pullets. First—In color very much after the style of first hen; shows a nice silvery edging so much admired by breeders of this variety and carries it down on breast and well up under throat. Tail a trifle high; neck shows some lacing and a little mossy in tail coverts. Comb, eyes and legs good. Second—Better in shape than first, but first prize bird better in color. Not so good in breast and shows a little mahogany tinge in back. Tail not quite developed and carried a little too high. Comb and eyes good; legs a little cloudy at junction of toes and showing two small black spots. This bird needs about thirty days more to put her in show condition. Third—One of the best shaped pullets in the class; fairly good on surface color, but lacks in lacing, not being distinct enough. To look at her from the surface you would think her an easy winner, but don't show good underneath. Comb and eyes good; ear lobes very pale. Legs quite light on upper portion and too dark in toes. Fourth—A fine shaped little bird; the right length of back; well developed breast, carried well down; tail about half finished and good in shape. Her color a little too dark, but quite distinct in lacing. Comb and eyes good; legs rather dark. A first class breeding specimen and one that would win in ordinary shows. Fifth—A little longer in body than fourth, but especially strong in lacing in all sections—in fact, one of the best colored specimens in the class. Comb, eyes and lobes good. Her worst defect is color of legs, which barely allow the specimen to compete, as they have but a bare trace of yellow in back of legs and bottom of feet. This bird with good colored legs would have crowded the first winner. Pens. First—Cock bird and four hens shown in remarkably good condition for the season of the year. Male bird almost in full plumage; good length of back; fine in breast and body color and especially strong in comb, eyes and legs. Females, three in the pen especially strong in color; the other one too light, failing on surface color, but showing up well underneath. Comb, eyes and legs good. Male too long in legs. With about one inch taken off of this section he would be a wonderfully fine bird. Second—Cockerel and four pullets. Same type throughout; good short backs; short tails; well developed brasts. Male bird in this pen showing in bad condition, evidently having a feather eater in the pen, injuring shape of back and body. Color fair throughout, but nothing especially strong. Male bird shows white in sickles.

WHITE LEGHORN COCKEREL

PARTRIDGE WYANDOTTES.—Cocks. First—A big bird, well proportioned in all sections; good comb, eyes and legs; especially strong in surface color. Good lacing in neck and back; not quite through moult, saddle and hackle being a trifle short. Breast could be a little fuller and back about one-half inch shorter. Taking all in all a very good bird. An easy winner in the class. Second—A fine bodied bird; not quite so large as first. In color very much like first bird; a little shorter in back and a trifle deeper in breast. Comb a little coarse and running narrow at rear and not quite even on head. Neck not quite full. Tail about complete and carried at the right angle. Leg color the best ever shown in cock of this variety. A wonderfully good specimen from beak to toe. Third—A different type bird from either first or second; not so well developed in breast and not deep enough through in body. Comb rather high especially in center, and too low in front; not quite through moult; neck and saddle showing quite a number of pin feathers and tail somewhat ragged. Top color very good; eyes and legs good. Fourth—A very nice specimen and one that will stand handling well. Especially good in back and tail shape, but quite deficient in breast,and legs a trifle too long. Comb good. Eyes and leg color fine. This bird with about one inch shorter legs and better breast development would be a hard bird to get around. Fifth—A remarkably fine shaped specimen;good in every section; well developed breast; short back; broad, deep body; good comb; tail only about one-half developed. Color fine in all sections except in breast, showing a little red at junction of breast and body. This bird, in our opinion, should have landed higher in the money. Cockerels. First—An elegant specimen; well developed for this season of the year. Especially strong in neck, back and tail shape. Not quite so well developed in breast as we like; good color throughout. Nice breeding comb, a little flat at rear and not corrugated as far back as we like. Stands well on a pair of short legs. Plenty of depth and breadth. A bird that will make a phenomenally good cock. Legs a little off in color. Second.—An entirely different type bird from first; longer in back and straight; tail rather high and somewhat pinched; breast straight; body narrow and legs a trifle long; color in all sections good. Comb about the right size; hollow in center. Legs entirely too close together and a trifle off in color. Third—A younger bird and not quite so well developed as second specimen. Nice, short, broad back; quite well devloped in breast; tail about half matured, but carried at the proper angle; comb nice in front, but a little hollow in center and spike carried on a straight line instead of turned down at rear. We could never agree with Mr. Tucker on this award. We would certainly have placed this bird second had we been judging the class. Fourth—A large bird, at least a pound over standard weight; very good in color throughout; a little long in back and body; deficient in breast and a little long in legs; tail not fully developed and carried a trifle high; comb very good in front but defective in rear, being too narrow and somewhat knobbed shaped. Eyes and legs good. A better bird than second and a good match for third. Fifth—This bird we think a great deal of. Not quite matured; shows in an awyward stage, hackle and saddle not full; shows a little white in undercolor at base of tail; remarkably good in head points; a little bit off in legs. Lacks about one month of being in show condition. Hens. First—A remarkably fine colored specimen, showing correct lacing so much admired by breeders of Partridge Wyandottes, carrying lacing from throat well to end of tail coverts and on body almost to vent, comb a little high in front. Eyes a trifle light and legs somewhat off in color. A remarkably good specimen and well worthy the place. A little longer in back than we like. Second—A swell little bird; one of the finest shaped hens in the class; quite a darker shade of color than first hen and not quite so even in lacing, lacking quite a bit in body color. Comb smooth on top; spike extending out straight at rear. Eyes light; legs remarkably good, very pure in yellow color for a hen of this variety. A good breeder and a valuable specimen. Third—A large bird, at least a pound over standard weight. Color a shade between first and second; shows a remarkably good lacing in breast and wing bow, not so good in color of body as first; a little long in back and quite a little off in leg color; comb smooth on top, turning a little to one side at rear. Size and front color puts her in the winnings. Fourth—Quite dark in color,showing rich mahogany throughout; color good in breast and wing bows, but lacking quite a bit in lacing in back near tail; comb flat on top, quite well corrugated but a little broad and doesn't finish good. A trifle longer in back than first or second hen, and quite deficient in leg color. Fifth—The shade of color very similar to first hen, especially on back and wing bows; fails in lacing in body and is a little longer in back. Comb and eyes remarkably good; legs very light and showing some ashy color in front. Pullets. First—Remarkably strong in color, rich mahogany sheen in all sections. Comb and eyes good; legs very much after the style of fifth hen, failing in the yellow with qute a bit of black in front. Breast and body well proportioned. A little long in back. Second—One of the grandest colored little birds that has been shown this year; starts well and finishes well. Same pullet than won first at the Indiana State Fair. Comb and eyes good. A little long in back and tail, quite defective in leg color. Third—In shape very much after the type of second, about the same length; a little broader at shoulders and a trifle better developd in breast; not quite so good in lacing, showing a trifle barring on wings and back. Comb about the right size, having two depressions on one side. Leg color better than either first or second. Fourth—In type very much the shape of first bird and comparing favorably with her in color; good style of lacing in all sections carried well back on body. Comb a little high in front and a little longer than we like. Eyes light in color; legs somewhat spotted and slate colored at junction of toes. Back and tail a little long. A good specimen and well worthy a place. Fifth—Undoubtedly a sister to first and fourth; shows same shape characteristics, not quite so well matured; hackle not being full. Legs quite defective in color, showing too dark and splotchy in front. Pens. First—Cock and four hens. Cock a grand specimen; good in every section; elegant depth of body; good breadth to back; well developed breast; fine breeding comb and could not be discounted more than one point in score card show. Eyes a little light and would be discounted one-half point. Color elegant throughout. A grand specimen from beak to toe. Legs yellow. Hens even in color and remarkably good in shape, all showing same type with about the same length of back and body. Tails full, carried at the right angle and the right length. Good mahogany color throughout; every bird matching the other and in describing one we describe the four. Second—Cock and four hens. Male shows in bad condition; not through moult, neck and sadl dle being only about h. in; showing quite a bit of white in undercolor at base of tail. Back rather long; condition of moult having much to do with this. Females in this pen good in color throughout; a little long in back. Third—Cock and four pullets. Cock bird a grand specimen short and broad in back; deep body and fairly well developed in breast. This section, however, not so good as back and body. Tail full and carried at the right angle. Comb, eyes and legs good. Pullets in pen rather small and it would take about two months to properly develop them;two of them showing chick feathers with more barring than lacing. This pen would show better about December 15th. Fourth—Cock and four hens. Male good in color throughout; not quite through moult, hackle only about half matured. Females not matching well in shape; two of them quite a bit larger than the others. Color fairly good on the surface, but lacking in lacing underneath. One hen in this pen remarkably fine in shape and well developed in breast, with short, broad back and short legs. This bird with good color would have made somebody hustle in the open classes. Fifth—Cock and four hens; not shown in the best of condition, male bird being quite scant in neck and tail about half developed. Females not matching well in color; two of them quite inferior. One of them in good condition would have made a good showing in single entry. Condition of pen with the two weak colored females, held this pen down to fifth place. Male bird quite deficient in comb, something on the strawberry type; hollow in front and short, giving the bird something of a Malay head gear.

GOLDEN WYANDOTTES.—Cocks. First—A large bird, but in bad moult; neck, saddle and tail only about half developed. Comb, eyes and legs good. Lacing on lower part of breast and body remarkably fine; upper part of body too dark. Good diamond centers in saddle, showing quite a bright stripe in neck. Bird quite long in back;good depth of body, but deficient in breast. Would show better a month later. Second—Quite a shapely specimen; a little better in length of back than first; not quite so broad and like first specimen quite deficient in breast shape, carrying that section too high, more on the Plymouth Rock type. Color throughout good; quite well finished for this season of the year. Good in wing bar; too much gold in flight feathers of wing. Comb, eyes and legs good. Third—Very much like second in shape; better, however, in back and depth of body. Breast too flat and carried too high up. Color in back good; neck showing quite a bit of striping. Comb one of the best in the class. A good bird and worthy the place. Fourth—A short backed, deep bodied bird and like second and third loses in shape of breast. Hackle only about half in, showing quite a bit of striping. Comb large and hollow in center; tail carried a little too high; breast and body color about all that could be desired. Good wing bar with almost a perfect pair of flights. Eyes and legs good. Fifth—A large bird in bad moult; short hackle and that showing the pin feathers almost the entire length. Back short, but owing to condition of saddle feathers looks narrow and pinched at tail; tail quite good and carried at about the right angle. Comb nicely finished on top and about the right size. Color good in breast and especially strong in body. A very good specimen and will take about thirty days to develop into show condition. Cockerels. First—A nicely finished bird shown in the pink of condition and at his very best; a little narrow in back and pinched in tail; good depth of body, but somewhat deficient in breast. Color immense; good from throat to tail, both top and bottom color. Nice yellow legs, but standing a trifle too close together. Comb somewhat long and hollow in center, showing signs of being forced for this exhibition. Second—Bright snappy cockerel, right in the pink of condition and up to standard weight; tail fully developed, carried at the proper angle. Back about the proper length, a little narrow at junction of tail. Comb especially good and about the right length, but having a small hollow in front. Eyes a little pale; legs good in shape and about the right length, but slightly off in color. Third—A large rangy cockerel; a bird that will make a better cock. In the condition he is shown in, he stands too high on legs; a trifle too long in back and owing to scant saddle feathers is somewhat narrow. Neck hackle only about half developed. Color fine in all sections. Comb, eyes and legs good; tail well spread, but carried a little high in front. Fourth—In condition very similar to third bird, lacks about one month of show condition. A little too long in back and showing at his worst on account of scant hackle and saddle feathers. Color about all that could be asked. Good comb except at rear, spike going out behind instead of following curve of head. Tail well developed, nicely spread and carried at the right angle. Eyes and legs good. Fifth—A nicely finished specimen; better in this respect than either third or fourth. Nice length of back; broad saddle feathers, carrying well up on tail with good depth of body. Somewhat deficient in breast and too dark in color throughout. Comb good. Legs a little cloudy. Hens. First—An elegant bird in every section; good from beak to end of tail; clean cut lacing, the black clearly defined and centers of the right shade of gold. One of the shapeliest hens that has been out for years; not a sign of flecking in back; well proportioned breast and body. Legs the proper length. A little longer in back than we like. This is about the only criticism we could make on this female. She is certainly a jewel and well worth the place. Second—One of the largest hens in the class; would weigh at least nine pounds—in fact, so large that she doesn't show to the best advantage, as her body is so heavy that it pulls her tail down, making back and tail on straight line. At the first glance one would think she was too long, but when shaping her up as she would be with less flesh, one could find but little criticism on length of back or body, and in depth of body she is a wonder. Color, a little too much black for the gold, making the surface look dark, but handles fine. A good comb; legs fairly good, showing a few spots. Take this bird with larger centers, or narrower lacing of black, she would be a flash specimen and one hard to beat. Third—Shaped very much like first hen, undoubtedly the same breeding; not quite so good in back, being a little narrow near tail and that section somewhat pinched. Color a little past ripe, showing some new and old plumage. Comb, legs and eyes good. The worst section of this hen is shape of tail, which will improve when it is fully developed. Fourth—Shows same characteristics as second hen, though not so large; a little better in length of back and quite portioned at breast. In shape she equal in depth of body and better prowould be hard to beat and in color if outer lacing of black was about one-half its present width would be a remarkable show specimen. Legs a little dark; comb somewhat broad and little hollow in center and doesn't wind up well in rear, showing a triple spike. Fifth—A fine colored specimen and shown in good condition; black and white well proportioned except on back between shoulders, showing a little too dark at this section. A rich lustre to both black and gold, and aside from condition of legs hen shown in pink of condition. Back about the right length; tail carred a little high and somewhat pinched in front. A rare bird—in fact, the entire class of winning hens is a credit to the breed and the men who produced them. Pullets. First—A fine colored specimen shown in good condition. Good centers with about the right amount of black on outer lacing; carries color well down onto body and thighs. Comb, eyes and legs good. A trifle long in back and carries tail out too straight behind, making this section look a little longer than it is. A good bird and worthy the money. Second—A large bird, looks more like a hen than a pullet. Nearly up to if not quite hen weight. Comb hollow in front with a depression in the side and narrow behind. Lacing on breast entirely too open, running more on the crescentic order; back color fairly good, but showing some penciling; body only showing a trace of lacing and quite defective at junction of body and breast. Third.—A handsome little pullet, just about up to standard weight; good in color from comb to end of tail, except in neck, a little too dark in this section. A few feathers in back near tail show trace of penciling, but only slightly. Proper length of back; tail a little longer than we like; comb good; eye a little light. We consider this bird far superior to second prize specimen, both in shape and color. Fourth—Rather a small bird and not very well matured. Tail only fairly developed and legs too long for typical Wyandotte. Color good throughout; right style of lacing; about right in proportion in gold and black. This bird would take about thirty days to put in show condition, when she would hustle second bird shown by same exhibitor for that place. Fifth The best colored pullet in the class outside of first. Too long in back; a little long in tail, making back look longer than it really is. Head and beak a trifle longer than we admire in a Wyandotte. Comb, legs and eyes good. The lacing on this pullet is about as good as we will ever find in females of this age. Pens. First—Cock and four hens. First class lot of females and one of the best males in shape in the Golden Wyandotte class; short back, short tail, deep body and well developed breast. A little dark in breast lacing, but carrying well down on body. Females match fairly well in color except one. This female a little light considering the other three. All of them a little coarse in comb. A good pen and well placed. Second—Females compare very favorably with birds in first pen. Male better in color of breast, but longer in back and not so good in shape of body and breast. If first bird could have this bird's color he would be a wonder and would have won easily in the single entries. Third—A well balanced pen of birds—cock and four pullets shown in good condition. Females match nicely in color and in shape; a little longer than we like, but of a pleasing type. Male nice short back, but a little narrow in front of tail. Breast not well developed and too dark under throat. Comb qute coarse and heavier on one side than the other. Fourth—Cock and four pullets Cock not shown in best condition; very ragged in neck and not full in saddle. Very large bird; deep in body; short and broad in back but deficient in breast; comb fairly good for a breeder; a little high and coarse on top. Pullets; three of them very good; the other one too small. Color of females even throughout but compare favorably with the five pullets in the open class. Fifth—Cock and four hens. Cock bird just coming through moult, feathers short, clinging closely to body. Especially strong in color of back; good diamond shaped centers with good neck lacing; breast a little dark, especially so under throat. Body color remarkably good, showing clean cut lacing carried well down on thighs. The pen is past ripe, showing signs of having been overshown. The females a little long in back and body; good depth with good combs, eyes and legs.

SINGLE COMB RHODE ISLAND REDS.—Cocks. First—Well finished considering the season of the year; neck and tail might have a little more filling, but shows well with only a short break at junction of neck and back; color good throughout; neck about one shade lighter than back, but tapering well at point, showing but little contrast. Remarkably good in head points, especially for cock; comb might fill in a little better at rear, having two small points, but showing just as nature made it.. Second—A large bird. Quite well proportioned; tail not quite finished; a very good breeding comb, but showing signs of frost. Eyes a trifle pale; color throughout harmonizing well; a little bit stronger on shoulders than we like in comparison with other sections, making a contrast in color. The worst feature to this bird, as we look as it, is the tracing of white in lobes. Part of this may possibly be due to the condition of moult, but enough showing at the time this award was made to disqualify under the new Standard. Third—Rather a small bird, not through moult. Very good in top color; a little redder on wing bow than we like; stronger in this section than he should be to correspond with saddle and hackle. Breast and body good in color; not as deep in breast as we like and not long enough in back. Comb a trifle high; serrations coarse, two middle ones being too high and last two showing signs of frost. This bird, like the second prize bird, shows quite a bit of white in lobes. Fourth—A big bird; a dull shade of color and a little bit roached in back; tail carried almost upright and not finished. Hackle only about one-half in; quite strong in surface color, especially in back, body and breast. Neck a little lighter shade, and wings too dark. Bird not shown in the best of condition; size alone apparently landing him in the money. Fifth—A well balanced male, showing good in all sections; a trifle longer in legs than we like; tail about one-half out; neck about two shades lighter than back, but shown at the time of year when this defect is most prominent, as a few of the old feathers were left at base of hackle while the upper ones were finished, showing a contrast in color. This bird is good in comb, eyes and legs, and with a little more depth of breast and one-half inch taken off of legs would be a hard bird to beat. Should undoubtedly have been placed 2nd in list of awards. Cockerels. First—A typical Red in shape, good comb, eyes and legs, and specimen shown in the pink of condition. Tail full and sickles showing just at end of main tail feathers. When shape is described we have said all there is to say from a Rhode Island Red standpoint, as bird is too light in color in all sections; many darker ones in Buff Rock alley. Neck shows bad in undercolor. This award in color a surprise to western Red breeders. Second—An elegant colored specimen, harmonizing in all sections, and the shade so much admired by Rhode Island Red breeders. Good comb, eyes, lobes and legs; tail carried a trifle high; breast not quite so well matured as we like and a little shorter in body than the Standard calls for. This bird should have been placed 1st. Third—In color very much after the style of first bird; good shape throughout; good comb, lobes, legs and eyes. Would prefer a little broader back and tail a trifle better spread. Breast would be discounted perhaps three-fourths of a point under score card judging, and neck shows ticking at base. This bird, like first, is a little lighter shade than the western breeders favor, but better in color than first. Shape, alone, placing him in the ribbon. Fourth—A smaller bird; quite well finished in plumage, but not as good in size as he snould be. Color about two shades stronger than either 1st or 3rd, but all sections harmonizing nicely. This bird needs about six

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1904.

The New Illustrated Standard will be ready March 1, 1905, so we are informed.

Mr. "Bill Nye" Schureman, editor of Commercial Poultry, is guilty of the following:

"Where was Drev.? Perhaps, had he been present, he could have thrown some light on the delay in issuing the Standard."

We were at home attending to our business, while several others were looking after the business of The American Fancier at St. Louis. Being the fifth wheel in that bunch of five—the publication committee—our presence could not have changed the results attained at the meeting. We could shed light on the delay of the Standard, but believe it has been shed to a certain extent at St. Louis. Next week or week after we will pictorially illustrate the delay. That's all.

Bro. Rankin, who manages the destinies of the excellent Poultry Herald, published at Minneapolis, Minn., in his November number, has a very complimentary article regarding the great show to be held in the Flour City next January. This we heartily acquiesce to. But we do object to the caption, "The A. P. A. Show." The American Poultry Association, by its constitution, is debarred from holding shows. Its annual meeting is at Minneapolis, and we are glad of it. But that places the "statute of limitations" where it belongs. The members meet, discuss and transact business, while the Minneapolis poultry show entertains and makes the boys feel at home, and at the same time is giving the fanciers a great show. We deeply regret not to be present, but the big show in the Hub—Boston—demands our presence. But the "boys" in the east extend to the "boys" in the northwest their sincere greetings as fellow fanciers and trust the meeting and the show will be a glorious success.

We are reliably informed that at a meeting held at St. Louis, Col. Mills, chief of live stock department, vouchsafed the opinion that the A. P. A. should have another great national show. Pray, when did the A. P. A. ever hold a show?

We are aware that some good members of the American Poultry Association are of the opinion that it should hold a show under its own rules and management. Very bright and commendable thought. But what business is it of the A. P. A. to meddle in show management? This old society should take pattern after the American Kennel Club and insist on having shows run under its rules and put a damper on a lot of hot-air propositions and bogus advertising schemes that simply drag the old society into the mire.

The result of the American Poultry Association meeting is crystallized in Secretary T. E. Orr's report in this issue. It is at least official.

The report of the Light Brahma classes at St. Louis are not complete. A protest was entered after the awards were up, and we are informed the protest was sustained. Consequently there was a change in the awarding of the prizes. This happened after the judge of the class had gone home. It was not error of judgment on his part, but involved a violation of the rules governing entries, so we are informed.

One prominent exhibitor at St. Louis bought nearly four hundred dollars' worth of birds from a prospective competitor, and tried to buy all another rival had, but did not succeed. Still he won out. He had the nerve and the coin. And that settles it.

What was the matter with some of the pigeon judges at St. Louis? One staid home; the other got there and would not judge.

Here is an opinion clipped from that great agricultural weekly, The Country Gentleman, anent the poultry show at St. Louis:

"The complete catalog of the poultry display was on sale prior to the opening to the public, thus removing all concealment as to the identity of the ownership, and making it possible for judges and jury alike to be fully informed. There is the most marked evidence on all sides as to the penny wise and pound foolish" plan of running the live stock department; those who would love to do their work well are so hampered by these conditions as to make it quite impossible for them to do their best. This is in very poor contrast with some of the signs of extravagance displayed along other lines. We find that the citizens of St. Louis, and visitors as well, notice the seeming lack of attention to the live-stock interest, compared with others."

Mr. T. F. McGrew, one of the committee of three, is the poultry editor and presumably the writer of the above in our esteemed contemporary.

This leads us to publish the following note sent by a prominent fancier and friend at St. Louis: "One of the busiest men on the grounds was T. F. McGrew. Thomas was in his element, and the element needed him. The grand success of the poultry show and general satisfaction shown by exhibitors was largely due to the efforts of the little New Yorker." A copy of this is on file in The American Fancier office.

The Turkey—"Say, Goosey, how do you like your coop?"

The Goose—"Rather circumscribed, deary."

The Turkey—"How's that?"

The Goose—"Can't see my back hair."

The Turk—"That's nothing; haven't seen my tail in a week."

THE CHRISTMAS DELINEATOR.

The December Delineator, with its message of good cheer and helpfulness, will be welcomed in every home. The fashion pages are unusually attractive, illustrating and describing the very latest modes in a way to make their construction during the busy festive season a pleasure instead of a task, and the literary and pictorial features are of rare excellence. A selection of Love Songs from the Wagner operas, rendered into English by Richard de Gallienne and beautifully illustrated in colors by J. C. Leyendecker, occupies a prominent place, and a chapter in the Composers' Series, relating the Romance of Wagner and Cosima, is an interesting supplement to the lyrics. A very clever paper entitled "The Court Circles of the Republic," describes some unique phases of Washington social life, is from an unnamed contributor, who is said to write from the inner circles of society. There are short stories from the pens of F. Hopkinson Smith, Robert Grant, Alice Bacon, Mary Stewart Cutting and Elmore Elliott Peake, and such interesting writers as Julia Magruder, D. Frank Baum, and Grace MacGowan Cooke hold the attention of the children. Many Christmas suggestions are given in needlework and the cookery pages are redolent of the Christmas feast. In addition, there are the regular departments of the magazine, with many special articles on topics relating to woman's interests within and without the home.

BROWN'S BUDGET.

By G. O. Brown, Associate Editor.

Oak leaves make the best material for the scratching shed. They stand it much better than other leaves.

Build the winter scratching shed low. Let it face the south. Barrel a good supply of leaves when they are dry. Pack in the barrels by tramping them down.

Change the scratching material two or three times each week. Oftener if it becomes damp or out of condition from any cause.

The litter should be at least 3 inches deep. Cold, raw afternoons scatter a portion of the flock's winter food among the litter about 3 o'clock and let the hens scratch for it. Warm the balance of the supper allowance of grain just enough to take the chill off, and feed late in the evening.

Never feed corn in the evening icy cold. Corn kept stored in cribs or barns is icy cold, and will cause the hens to go to roost shivering with cold. It takes half the night to overcome the chill. If the chill is taken from the corn by warming it in the oven, the hens will go to roost contented and often singing.

"It is a trouble to do this." Yes. But the man who classes humane methods as troubles, will always find trouble in making poultry raising profitable. The true fancier never counts anything a trouble that adds to the comfort of his flock.

A close observer will nip many troubles in the bud. Not to observe carefully is a serious neglect in poultry raising.

Cheap or damaged food is a serious deceiver. Such things lay the foundation for diseases and mysterious ailments in a flock.

If you have specimens that are somewhat off, sell them as soon as possible. But kill and dress them—never sell them alive. Even if a man comes and tells you he just wants them to kill and eat—don't let him take them away alive. There are many poultrymen who wish they "hadn't done it."

Build up your flock by careful selection of the best for breeders.

Lack of variety of food invites indigestion. Vary the diet as much as possible. Always avoid sloppy food of any kind.

The man who sees only dollars in his flock never makes a sensational success. Dollars and sense are right in their place, but sense makes dollars where greed loses them.

Work for a reputation in the poultry business. If you are honest and love your occupation, you will soon make friends and customers.

THE OLD JUDGE.

Scarred, withered and torn,
He weathered many a storm.
Year in and year out
He travelled the same route,
Never squealing nor complaining,
Doing the best he knew how.
His only satisfaction was in sustaining
The old man's awards then and now.

THE YOUNG JUDGE.

Chipper, full of assurance and gall,
With lack of experience and no knowledge at all,
He figures, studies and compares to get
All the good jobs in the land, you bet.
Then old Father Time, in a manner memorable,
Sends him back to the woods in a condition most deplorable.

BIRDS AT ST. LOUIS.

weeks to round him out to show size. He will undoubtedly be one of the best shown by these breeders at the winter shows. Fifth—A big bird; elegant depth to body; good in breast development; not quite so long in back as some of the breeders like and too strong in color on wing bows; neck and saddle feathers not harmonizing in color with shoulders, breast and body. This bird has elegant comb, lobes and legs; tail is carried a trifle high, but is quite well finished, showing sickles extending beyond main tail. Hens. First—Good all over; sound in color and the shade of red so much admired; grand in comb, eyes and legs. Tail about three-fourths full and carrying an elegant concave to back. This bird is certainly a rare specimen. About the only criticism we would make in this female in color would be in ticking of neck. There is enough but not quite distinct. Second—A great deal darker than the first; undoubtedly a much older hen. Color stronger than we like; shows quite a lot of shafting a nd a mealy shade on shoulders. Tail is streaked with red and black, showing a mingled up color that in our opinion is very objectionable. In this variety, as in all parti-colors, the color should be sound and distinct, not having two colors run together and mussed up. In neck she shows more ticking than we like, extending too far into cape. Only fairly good in comb; eyes quite light in color; a fine breeding hen where flock is running a little light. Third—Quite a bit lighter shade than either first or second. In shape very much after the style of first; tail not quite full, lacking some of the side feathers, making this section rather pinched and a little narrow at the junction. Color is sound, harmonizing in all sections. Only fault we find it is a shade light. Neck not quite full, but showing proper amount of ticking and the right color. A good bird and worthy the place. Fourth—Almost exact type of third; about one shade darker; tail not quite finished at sides and carried a little too upright, making a slight cushion in back. Breast and body development good. Good breeding comb, but shows sign of age; tail somewhat flecked with black and red and might have been improved with a little handling. Fifth—Rather small hen; doesn't carry herself as well as we like; crouches down in coop and when she stands raises too high in front,giving her too much drop at rear. Comb too large and not evenly serrated; apparently forced, however, to get her through moult; shows some shafting in back with occasional lighter feather in general surface. Tail and neck good; comb and her general carriage being her worst defects. Pullets. First—A little beauty; good from comb to end of tail. Color sound in all sections and harmonizing throughout and of the right shade. Fine in comb, eyes and legs. About the only criticism we could make on this female is to add about one month to her age so she would broaden out a trifle more in back at junction of tail. Second—Another good one. A little bit stronger shade than first; aside from this but little difference could be found in comparing them. Second not quite so large as first and tail only about half matured; a little shallow in breast. Needs about six weeks to finish her. Comb, eyes and legs exceptionally strong and good red in every section. Third—A nice styled bird. In shape very much after the style of second, but several shades lighter than either first or second. A little better developed in breast; tail about full. Good comb, eyes and lobes. would prefer a little more yellow in legs and tail carried a little more upright; this section being almost on a straight line with back, making specimen look longer than she really is. Fourth—Quite a shade lighter in color than second; but harmonizing well in all sections; a smaller pullet, not yet finished. Back a little too narrow at rear; tail too long and not full at sides, making this section look pinched. Head points about as near perfect as you could breed them. Leg color good. Fifth—Red all over; strong in color in all sections and every section harmonizing, next to impossible to tell where one section joins the other, as they shade into one another. Tail about the right length, not full at sdes. Good head points. Had I been judging the class fifth and fourth birds would have changed places. Pens. First—Undoubtedly the best one that has been shown west and as good as we will likely see for some time. Male bird absolutely red in all sections. Good in comb, lobes, eyes and leg color. Tail well spread, but carried a trifle higher than we like. With this section improved it would be hard to find a single point to criticise. Females in first pen an even shade of red, harmonizing in all sections, and every bird having same shape; look as much alike as four peas, showing that they are of the same breeding, having every characteristic from comb to end of tail. Second—Females large, well matured, a good average throughout; not harmonizing so well in shape as first pen. Male a trifle small, neck several shades lighter than back; wing bows about four shades darker than saddle. Body and breast color very good; good breeding comb on male, having one extra serrate. Females in this pen had much to do with helping to win the coveted prize. Third—Very good in females, but not quite matured. Two of the pullets show too much of the chick characteristics; combs small; head points not well developed. Male good in color; nice shade of red throughout; a little long in legs. Breast and body not well matured. This pen will show better two months later. Fourth—A good male, especially strong in color. A little shorter in back and body than some breeders prefer. Females two of them very good; the other two show signs of over-feeding,one of them having comb slightly lopped. In general surface color the females will compare favorably with any of the winning pens outside of first.

ROSE COMB RHODE ISLAND REDS.—Cocks. First—An elegantly shaped specimen. Good length to back and body; well developed breast; comb turns over nicely to back of head equal to our best Wyandottes. A little bit lighter in neck and back than we like but harmonizing well and carrying himself like a major. An easy winner and one of the best Rose Combs that has been shown in the west. Second—Not quite so large a bird as first. Lighter in breast and body color and not through moult. Tail only about half developed and hackle showing quite a number of pins. Saddle, like neck, only about half moulted through, making the bird look narrow in this section. This bird would show better about December first. Third—A large bodied bird shown in bad condition. Neck only about one-third moulted in. Bird slightly out of condition and carrying himself badly. Color throughout harmonizing well in all sections. Tail only about two feathers in. Lobes show quite a trace of white, due partly to condition. Comb and head points only fairly good. Fourth—Another good bodied bird with strong color points, but badly in moult. Like third bird needs at least three weeks to put in show shape. Fifth—A better finished bird than either third or fourth. Quite strong in color, all sections harmonizing well, and taking the condition of the birds into consideration, should have landed higher up the list. Comb is a little large and carried more after the Minorca type, but even on top. This bird strikes us as having some of the best features of any male in the class aside from first. Has good length of body and back; well developed breast; stands well on his legs and is a valuable specimen. Cockerels. First—Good bodied bird. About right length of back, but too straight in this section. Tail only partly developed and front part of this section carried too high. Color a little light and quite a contrast between wing bows, neck and back. Breast and body very sound in color with good breast development. Small comb, especially for the size of the bird. Neck not quite full, making a break at junction of back. Eyes good; legs showing a shade of willow in front. Second—Fine type of bird in length of back, body and general carriage. Tail a trifle too high and color too light. Comb quite large, uneven on top and not quite straight on head. Comb and color are about the only faults we could find with this male, and in color this bird is not lighter than many others that are winning at the World's Fair. Third—Quite a shade lighter than the other ribboned birds in this class. Good in length of body and back. Tail not quite matured and carried too high. Breast somewhat deficient. Very good comb. Remarkably strong in legs. A little light in eye. Fourth—Rather a small bird, about the same shade of color as third. A little stronger on wings than body. Tail only about half finished, side feathers being missing. Neck a little scant at junction of back. Comb small, uneven on top and narrow in center. Back a little roached, due partly to condition of cooping and short feathers in saddle. Fifth—A young bird, but a big rangy fellow; elegant in bone. Neck not full. Tail only about half matured, making bird look shorter than he would ordinarily. Color even on tip, but a little light. Hens—First—Strong in color and even throughout. Tail a little pinched. Comb a little large and not as nicely finished as we would like. But aside from comb and tail, but very little criticism could befound with this specimen—in fact, she is the best Rose Comb hen that has been shown in the west this year. Second—Not quite so large as first hen and about two shades lighter in color; all sections harmonizing in this as in first. Better in comb and eye. Tail not quite developed and shades of color we find in the winners somewhat pinched. With the many in the Rhode Island Red class we wonder whether the amateur has any more information after looking at the awards in this class than he had before he saw them. Third—Quite a trim little hen, varying in shade of color between first and second. Back a little narrow and tail about one inch longer than we like. Comb good. Especially strong in color of hackle, except she carries ticking a little too far up near the arch of neck. All females in this class strong in undercolor and free from slate. Fourth—Considerably lighter in shade than first and third. Some of her feathers in back and wing bows being old, while others are new, giving the surface something of a blotchy appearance. We would prefer about two shades darker color in breast and body. In breast shape the fourth hen is the best in the class. A little more length of body and back would be required to fill the points of the Red breeders. Fifth—A large hen; largest in class. Undoubtedly quite an old bird. General color and shape good, but uneven in surface, showing many new feathers with the old and only about half of main tail grown in at its sides, making this section look too open and broken. Would prefer a little more ticking in neck and a little more length of body. Pullets. First—A good Red in every section and about the right color. Very little fault could be found with her from beak to toes. About the only fault we would find with this pullet is the undeveloped tail, and not spread sufficiently to carry the concave to back as she will a month later. This award well placed. She is undoubtedly the best pullet in the class. Second—What we have said of first pullet might be duplicated for second. Not quite so even on top as first and showing a little shafting and mealy on shoulders. Fine in comb. Tail about two-thirds developed. Another ribbon well placed. Third—In shape very much after the type of second, but not nearly so good in color, especially in shoulders just back of hackle. Feathers at this point show somewhat mealy and uneven. Tail carried a trifle too high and not well finished. Comb rather long, broad in front with a slight depression and narrower behind. Fourth—Same type as second and third. Color very much after the style of first bird. Comb rather long, hollow in center; rear turning up a trifle. Neck good in color. Good length of body; color sound throughout. This bird, in our opinion, should have landed in either second or third place, but all belong to the same exhibitor. Fifth—A large bird; quite well matured. Several shades lighter than first and fourth. Nice ticking in neck. Good comb and sound throughout. Tail carried a little high, making a sharp junction with back. In length of body and back this pullet compares favorably with any in the class. Tail alone being the section we would criticise mostly. Pens. First—Quite good in color, harmonizing well in both male and female. Two of the pullets not well matured and showing three different kinds of type. Cockerel a little light in neck, back and body; quite good on wing bows and breast. Very good in comb. A little longer in legs than we like and a little deficient in breast. Second—But very little difference between first and second pens. If anything we like the pullets in the second pen better. No doubt considerable time was spent by the judge in deciding which of the two should take the blue ribbon. Third—This pen not so well finished as first and second; two of the pullets being almost entirely without tails. Cockerel's tail only about one third grown. Male and females quite a shade lighter than the other two. Birds in this pen hardly old enough to show in such strong company. Fourth—Females in this pen large. All different types. Combs varying considerably; at least two of the pullets apparently laying. Head points well developed. Eyes a little light in females, but all females well finished. Cockerel rather a small bird and hen with two of the pullets showing quite badly in lobes. Tail of cockerel only about half finished and carried a little too high, due largely to the fact that saddle feathers are somewhat deficient, not holding this section in position. Fifth—Male bird at head of this pen good in length of body; fairly good in back; tail a little pinched; color harmonizing well; but a comb that is simply an abomination and would be cut in a score card show at least four points. Females very good throughout except in combs. One of them being especially bad, being entirely absent of spikes and a little pale in lobes. This pen runs good in size and shows an evenness in type.

BUFF COCHINS.—Cocks. First—A magnificent specimen; sound in color from comb to end of tail. Especially strong in wing flights and tail; fluff filling in well in front and back of legs; a little harsh behind. Color rich, golden buff in every section and all sections harmonizing. Comb, five points, nicely poised and as fine a Cochin head as we have seen in years and one of the best Cochins shown to date. Second—A large bird; soft in color, with breast carried well down; plenty of feathers and perfectly soft. Back broad, lacking a little at junction of tail, due to the condition of moult. Hackle only about one-half in. This bird is winner of many firsts and in show condition would have crowded the first bird, but was lucky to land second, owing to short feathers in neck and saddle. Third—Very pleasing color, soft and even in all sections—back, wings, breast and body harmonizing; six point comb, but showing signs of frost. Not entirely through moult; tail only about one-third in and showing some black; plenty of feathers filling in around back of legs. Fourth—Quite a bit lighter shade than third and not showing good in leg feathers. A little stiff in hocks, neck showing two shades of color owing to new and old feathers appearing in same section. Good shaped back, but slightly deficient in breast and a little long in legs. Fifth—A better colored bird than fourth; remarkably good in back shape and carries breast well down; evenly balanced bird; not entirely through moult; tail only about one-half in and showing some black; not so heavy in leg and toe feathers as other cocks in this class, but a remarkably good bird; with more time would be hard to beat. Cockerels. First—A soft colored specimen; good in all sections—neck, back and wing bows harmonizing. Nice five point comb with two small serrations at end of blade. Remarkably good in leg and toe feathers. A little narrow in back as compared to second prize bird. In color it is doubtful if this bird has a superior, as he is entirely free from black or white in every section. Second—About one shade stronger in color than first and not entirely through moult. A little longer in legs than we like but by far the best shaped back of any male in the cockerel class; heavily feathered in legs and toes; quite stiff in hocks. Think this had much to do with setting him back to second place. Third—A fine shaped Cochin with plenty of feathers; low down on the ground; short in back but not quite enough cushion. Back feathers running up on tail and curling around that section; plenty of feathers on legs and toes; a little harsh but not quite so much so as second prize bird. This award well placed. Fourth—A smaller bird and not well matured; heavy enough in weight and of the peculiar type that it takes time to develop. A little longer in legs than we like and breast carried too high. Color very similar to second bird. Good comb; eyes a trifle pale. Fifth—In size and show condition compares favorably with fourth bird, apparently same breeding. Secondaries of wings not in full feathers; neck only about half grown. Will make a better bird in shape of breast than second bird, but like 2nd cockerel is a little stiff in hocks, more than is admired by western judges. Color almost an exact counterpart of fourth cock. Hens—First—A Cochin from beak to toe; mammoth in size; elegant in shape; breast carried almost to the ground. Heavy feathers extending both in front and back of legs without a harsh feather in them. Good comb, tail and wings. Body color shafted slightly in wing bows and breast. Second—A little lighter shade in buff than first, but even throughout. Tail not quite matured and showing a little black. What is said of plumage in first, as well as shape of breast and back, can be said of this bird. Her fault in color is difference in shade of neck and back; neck being a trifle too strong for other sections. Third—A smaller bird than first or second; cushion carried higher up and not quite so low in breast line. In color we like her a little better than either first or second, but lacks in feathering around the legs. Tail not quite full and showing some black. A remarkably good Cochin and one that would win in ordinary classes. Fourth—A well balanced specimen, not quite so large as other winners in the class. A pleasing shade of color in all sections, all sections harmonizing. Not quite as heavily feathered in front of legs as we like and a little deficient in breast shape; back quite good. Tail not full, but showing good color. Comb in bad shape, turning over a trifle at rear. Undoubtedly this had much to do with setting the bird back. Fifth—Rather a small hen, especially good in back shape. Good depth of body; a nicely rounded breast; tail not quite full, but showing good color; comb a little coarse; eyes a little pale and not so heavily feathered in front of legs as we like. Pullets. First—A wonderfully good Cochin from beak to end of tail, not a hollow place in her; round as a ball; plenty of feathers in front and back of legs. Broad, deep through and that pleasing color so much admired by Buff Cochin breeders. The right shade and all sections harmonizing—even neck and breast feathers, making no contrast. Second—In color a counterpart of first; not so good in shape nor nearly so large. Wings, owing to moult, not folded as nicely as we like. Good comb and tail. Nice broad back with elegant cushions. These two ribbons well placed. Third—A different type of bird than first or second. Quite a bit shorter in plumage, not showing nearly so much in front of legs. Color very good throughout, but slightly shafted. Tail quite well developed, showing a little flecking in tail proper. A little bit red on shoulders. Fourth—A fine bird in every section. Remarkably sound in color and of the proper shade—rich golden buff in all sections, carrying this shade down on breast and body; the least tinge of shafting on breast. Nice broad, well rounded back; good tail and wing; not quite so well developed in breast as we like, due largely to age. This bird will show a great deal better about January first, as she is coming in every section and will improve. Fifth—Almost an exact counterpart of fourth, undoubtedly bred from same male and hen. Tail not quite developed, making body look a little shorter than it should, and injuring shape of back. This pullet, like fourth, is sound in color in every section and will show better at the later exhibitions. Pens. First—Cock and four hens. The cock bird in style, shape and color very similar to first cock in single entries, and owned by same exhibitor. Hens grand in shape and matching well in color, except one specimen that shows a little splotchy plumage, due to old and new feathers in same section. The coops in this house are entirely too low to show off a bird to good advantage. Every time the males crow they rake their combs against the top of wire and some of them begin to show the effects of it. Coops should have been at least six inches higher for single comb varieties. Second—Cockerel and four hens. A little in doubt in regard to male; may be a late hatched cock of last year, but shows no sign of spurs, but finish would indicate he is a cockerel. Three females in this pen good in shape, especially strong in cushion and comb, but not as well feathered on legs and toes as those in the first prize pen. Color in females throughout very good. Male shows a little red on wing bows and saddle; about two shades darker than we like. Third—Cock and four hens. Cock not shown in best of condition, only about half through moult and tail but slightly developed. Females in this pen grand; two hens especially strong and compare favorably with first and second hens in open class. Color of hens sound throughout. Male, alone, holding this pen back to low position. With a male in this pen equal to that in first the story would have been told in a differnt way. Fourth—Cock and four hens. Cock not in best condition and only half through moult. Three hens remarkably fine; the other one just in that stage of moult that makes the feathers stand out, making a bad contrast with other females. Color of females throughout good except tails that show some black. Feathering soft on females and especially strong in hocks; the soft curling feathers about equally divided in front and behind legs. Male bird of this pen good in color, but somewhat deficient in breast. Comb too high; eyes pale. Condition of male and one hen, referred to, sets them back. Fifth—Cockerel and four hens. Cockerel in good shape, but slightly uneven in color, showing quite a bit of shafting in back and wing bows! neck not entirely moulted in; tail somewhat deficient, showing quite a bit of black. Females average well in color, but show more or less shafting on wing bows and breast, and not as much leg and toe feathering as we like.

PARTRIDGE COCHINS. — Cocks. First—One of the best shown for years, especially in shape and color. Only serious defect is, the comb showing signs of frost, serrations being scarcely visible. For length of back and tail, depth of breast and body, with long, soft plumage, it would be hard to find his superior. Second—An elegantly colored specimen, showing good stripe in saddle; neck not quite full; plenty of feathers, but deficient in breast and carries that section too high. Comb small, serrations uneven; back the proper length, but not broad enough. Third—In back and body very much the same type as first, but longer in legs and not nearly so well developed in breast; that section being too flat and carried too high. Fourth—Another magnificent specimen, but not shown in the best of condition. Hackle, saddle and tail only about half matured. Better in shape of breast than third bird and equal in color to first; plenty of feathers on legs and toes; legs standing well apart with soft curling feathers in front and back of hocks. Fifth—A large bird with short, broad back; well balanced tail, but badly in moult, neck feathers only barely starting. Shows good color in all sections. Comb is too large and beefy, carried too far back over the head. This bird when in full plumage in body shape would compare favorably with first bird, but is not in condition to compete in the company he is in. Cockerels. First—In type almost an exact counterpart of first cock. Good in color in all sections; plenty of feathers on legs and toes. Comb slightly over size, due no doubt to forcing for exhibition. A grand bird and worthy his place. Second—Rather a small bird as compared to some others in the class. Fine in color; elegant striping in neck and back; clean cut in all sections. A little narrow in back and a little high on legs and not quite as heavily feathered as first prize bird. Carries his breast well down and will make a magnificent cock. Third—Quite a bit smaller than first bird and lacking considerable in color; back showing splashing at end of saddle feathers. Quite a number of chick feathers in neck and back. Ear lobes pale; breast not well matured—in fact, cockerel shown about six weeks ahead of time. Fourth and fifth cockerels not placed. Hens—First A Cochin from beak to end of tail—short, broad back, nicely cushioned, deep body; breast carried well down; rich mahogany color in all sections, lacking in color only in body and flights. A bird so good in color as this one in back should have better color in these two sections. Aside from this defect, but little fault could be found with her. Second—Owned by same exhibitor and shown in coop next to her. What has been said of first can be said of second except in shape of tail. Second hen lacks in this particular, being a little too long and carried too high. In color she has a richer sheen throughout and carries lacing back into body better than first hen. Third and fourth—So near alike that one description will do for both. Especially strong in penciling from neck to tail, carrying it well down on thighs and even down on to leg and toe feathers. Short, broad backs; deep bodies; good breasts. Second a rare specimen and hard to beat. Fifth—In size and general makeup very similar to third and fourth; not quite so good in shape of back, being pinched a little at tail and comb shown in bad condition, falling over to one side and poorly serrated. Color equals that of either third or fourth hen. Pullets. First—Almost a round ball—same length as depth. Good lacing in all sections; grand in feathering and for a pullet a wonder in color, even carrying the lacing down into the leg and toe feathering. Second—Owned by same exhibitor and so near a counterpart of first as to hardly warrant further description. What we have said of one can be truthfully said of the other. Third—Color very similar to first and second. Very nice shape in breast, but too narrow in back and lacing in cushion not so strong as that of other winners in the class. Fourth—Better in color than third, especially in cushion. Rather peculiar back shape, cushion coming up in a hump in middle of back, leaving strong concave between cushion and tail proper. Tail a little long and pinched. Fifth—Fairly good in color throughout,breaking a little in front of tail, lacking in lacing at that point; don't carry lacing down into thighs as well as we like. Comb too large and twisted, showing signs of forcing. Pens. First—Cock and four hens. A grand lot of Cochins; females all nicely developed; elegant in lacing; rich mahogany sheen in all sections, with good leg and toe feathers. One hen in this pen carries penciling down onto thighs better than anything in the single entries. Cock bird a large fellow; good in length of back; short, broad, deep in body; very good in comb; however, a little coarse,showing a trifle white in lobes. Second—A cock and four hens, not nearly so large as birds in first pen. Good in color except a little scant in lacing near tail. The females in this pen carry lacing well down on thighs, but do not show as well feathered on legs and toes as first pen. Third—Cock and four hens. A good average pen throughout, but not shown in best of condition. Two of the females not through moult,making their feathers stand our rough, especially on back and neck. Male bird a little high in legs and not feathered quite enough in front of legs. This bird especially good in back shape, being short and broad, but not sufficiently developed in tail. Fourth—Cock and four hens. Shown in first class condition; two females lacking in lacing, being more on the style of a bar than a triple lace. Male bird in this pen in good condition and with a better color in females would have landed high in the money. Fifth—Cock and four hens. Shown in good condition; all of the birds being quite well finished and females starting well in color, being especially strong in breast and wing bows, but breaking a little in cushion, running more after the style of barring on those in pens first and second. The male bird a nicely colored specimen; comb a little large, with three extra serrates; male a trifle long in legs and deficient in breast, carrying that section too high.

(Concluded next week.)

A WARNING NOTE.

By the first of November, chickens should be in their winter quarters. Previous to this date the houses should be repaired and fixed up in good shape, so as to resist the chilling rains and blustering winds of late fall and early winter. Don't forget that winter weather lasts four full months and more in some sections, and that temporary repairing is time wasted. Don't wait until the weather is so cold that you can't hold a nail in your fingers. Do it when the weather is mild and you will accomplish twice as much,and do a better job. Then when you nail on a board or a strip of paper, it will stay there. Now after you have made your buildings wind and rain proof, especially from the north and west, then see to the front part of the coop. Do not have too much glass, as the more glass you have, the greater will be the variation of temperature.

To every 10 feet square of floor space, from 15 to 20 square feet of glass is sufficient. This should be placed so that as much sunshine as posible will strike the floor, instead of the walls of the coop. Have the windows so arranged that they may be easily opened. Do not be afraid to give your fowls air, even if it is cold. They must have it, or they will be sick. The windows should be open in the day always, and when the sun is bright, the doors also. I think that ventilation is of more importance than feed, in the way of keeping fowls healthy. I speak more especially of winter care. A great mistake that many of us make, is in crowding the chickens into winter quarters. As a rule, after you have placed your birds in winter quarters, go around and pick out half of the number, taking the smallest and weakest; dispose of them at whatever price you can get, even if you have to eat them, and the remaining half will produce more eggs than the whole would have done, and at a much lower cost. This is not all theory. You will find it true when you have tried it. I am thoroughly convinced that each and every fowl in winter quarters needs from six to ten square feet of floor space, according to size and breed. A coop 10 feet by 12 feet will comfortably accommodate 15 average-sized fowls. House birds in this manner and you may expect results.

POULTRY INSTITUTE AT CORNELL

Under the direction of Mr. Dawley and assisted by the Poultry Department of Cornell University, a Poultry Institute will be held at Cornell University on November 28th, 29th and 30th. Various halls in the University buildings will be opened for this purpose. Following is the program: Regular Institute speakers, among whom will appear: Mr. T. E. Orr, secretary of the American Poultry Association, Mr. T. F. McGrew, a prominent poultry writer and judge; Mrs. George A. Monroe, and others, assisted by the New York State Veterinary College; Dr. V. A. Moore, on "Important Diseases of Poultry;" Dr. Pierre A. Fish, on "Some Points on the Comparative Physiology of Poultry;" Prof. G. S. Hopkins, on "The Embryology of the Egg," and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Mack, on "Nature and Treatment of Roup." By the Department of Zoology: Prof. M. V. Slingerland,on "Poultry Parasites;" by the Department of Poultry Husbandry: Prof. James E. Rice, on "Some Poultry Problems by Lime Light." And by short talks from the following poultry students: Mr. J. G. Halpin, Mr. F. G. Thayer, Mr. H. F. Prince, Mr. H. Jennings, Mr. F. H. Ryan, Mr. R. C. Lawry, Mr. C. H.Chapman and Mr. C. A. Rogers. Dean L. H. Bailey will undoubtedly deliver an address on "The Attitude of Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations toward Poultry Husbandry." All the meetings are free and every one interested in poultry is welcomed.

THE HERALD SQUARE SHOW.

Editor American Fancier:

Please make in your next issue the following corrections regarding premiums offered at the Herald Square poultry show in premium list. On page 20, Turkeys; in classes of 6 or more, 1st prize, $5.00; second prize, $2.00; 3rd prive, $1.50; 4th prize, $1.00. 4 or more, first prize, $4.00; 2nd prize, $2.00; 3rd prize, $1.00. 3 or more, 1st prize, 3.00; 2nd prize, $1.50. On page 46, $3.00 for best display of Helmets.

Dr. Leslie Ward of Madison, N. J., has donated a $100.00 silver cup for the best Angora goat in the show of any age; also Mr. Henry L. Stoddard of the New York Evening Mail has given a substantial silver cup for an Angora class. Tuesday evening, Nov. 29th, has been set aside for awarding the prize ribbons to the Angora goats. Dr. Ward intends to make this evening one of the biggest social events in New York. Very many entries have reached us within the past week. Our one inch ad. venture — a new feature in a poultry show catalogue—is evidently popular with the fanciers; many one dollar bills have been received. The "Auction Sale" column is also appreciated and many birds will be "auctioned off" during the last three days of the show.

AMERICAN POULTRY ASSOCIATION.

To Members of the American Poultry Association:

Notice is hereby given that the twenty-ninth annual meeting of this association will convene in Minneapolis, Minnesota, at 4 p. m. on Friday, January 13th, 1905, in a hall to be supplied by the Twin City Poultry Association.

Notice is hereby given that at that meeting application will be made for admission to the Standard of the three following varieties of poultry:

Buckeye Reds, American Reds and Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds.

The following notices are also given:

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 7th, 1904.

I hereby give notice that at the next annual meeting of the American Poultry Association, a motion will be made to change the constitution, as follows:

On page 253 of the present Standard, in the twentieth line from the top of the page, after the word "petition," add, "This Standard shall be read at the meeting when it is proposed to admit the variety. Notice of the presence of such fowls at the exhibitions referred to shall, upon every occasion, be given the Secretary at the place of meeting in order that he may satisfy himself that the requirements for their appearance have been complied with."

ROBT. H. ESSEX.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, Nov. 8, 1904.

I hereby give notice that at the annual meeting of the American Poultry Association, to be held at Minneapolis, Minnesota, in January, 1905, there will be presented a resolution to amend the first clause of Article V, of the By-Laws, so that the salary of the secretary-treasurer, shall not be limited to three hundred dollars per year.

(Signed) THOS. F. RIGG.

The report of the publication committee to the St. Louis meeting of the Association makes it clear that the new Illustrated Standard can not be ready before March 1, 1905. The secretary-treasurer is booking orders for the Standard at the following prices:

The regular edition, $1.50 postpaid.

The morocco bound edition, $2.00 postpaid.

The regular edition, to publishers and dealers who advertise it, in dozen lots or larger, by express at $12 per dozen. No order booked unless accompanied by full cash payment.

At the St. Louis meeting some seventy new members were added to our list, a majority of these being life members. Let the good work go on so that we shall have as many more additions at the Minneapolis meeting.

BUFF LEGHORN CLUB MEETINGS, CUPS, RIBBONS ETC.

The annual meeting of the Club will be held at Madison Square, New York city, Jan. 5, at 2 p. m. All members who can are requested to be present.

The Club is highly pleased with the showing of this breed made at the World's Fair, 149 birds being on exhibition. The even color, clear tail and wings, made many of the breeders and judges remark that they were the best buff colored birds found on exhibition.

The Club will offer the following specials at the coming winter shows:

Handsome silver cups at $10 each at Guelph, Ont.; Peoria, Ill.; Auburn, N. Y.; Harrisburg, Pa.; Newark, N. J.; Hamilton, Ohio; Detroit, Mich.; Corvallis, Ore., and one in Ky. at show selected by members.

Silver cups valued at $15 each will be offered at Madison Square Garden and Chicago.

Handsome ribbons valued at $2 each at Madison Square Garden, Chicago, Boston, Denver, Minneapolis, Detroit.

Beautiful ribbons valued at $1 each at New York city, Rochester, Johnstown, N. DETROIT, MICH., SHOW.

The Michigan State Poultry Association will hold their annual show, Jan. 3-7, '05, at Concordia Hall, Gratiot ave., Detroit. The officers who have charge of the arrangements meet at the above hall every Wednesday evening. Breeders and friends are cordially invited to attend these meetings. Nothing will be spared to make this show the best ever held in Michigan. The committee are now working on the premium list, which can be had as soon as printed, by sending to Daniel Thomas, Sec., Pontiac, Mich.

The Detroit Journal says: "'The Detroit Poultry and Pet Stock Association will hold no annual show this winter, announced Secretary Bennett after a session of poultry men held at the Griswold House Thursday night. 'We have fully decided on this course, first announcement being made by the Michigan State Poultry Association, and we will use our efforts to pull for this one show. We take this action to preserve interest, as two shows would divide attention and work more harm than good to both associations. Next year will find the Detroit society as the one holding the show, if the members are willing.'

"Incidentally it was announced that the dates for local shows in this city are Jan. 3 to 7, at Concordia Hall. Exhibitions from all parts of the state will be shown, and fanciers from Canada will be here. The Detroit society has voted to donate the sum of $25 for specials at the show."

The pagodas standing at the entrance of our new subway have given me an idea in poultry house building, by which an inside scratching pen can be added to every long building with but a little extra outlay of cash.

If it looks as plausible to the American Fancier readers as it does to me, I hope some one will inaugurate it in the next new building and report. It is this, instead of making the alleyway at the rear of the house 3 feet wide, make it 6 or even 8, then build the western end opposite this hallway one or two stories higher than the main building, according to its length; let the glass run from the ground up, and run the roof down to the main building on the same slant as the rays of the afternoon sun take in reaching well to the eastern end of the house.

A dust bath could be arranged and each pen of fowls could take turns in enjoying the sunny playground throughout the afternoon.

The general outline of this structure would hardly suit the taste of our municipal art commission, but the carpenter could be trusted to do away with much of the unshapeliness on the outside, and the ingenuity of the owner would surely utilize every foot of extra space—Bantam, or hospital pens, for instance—on the inside.

It is generally agreed among authorities on the subject of winter eggs, that the price of success, even partial success, is constant attention and generous feeding.

Despite carefully laid plans and timely provision, a generous supply of winter eggs is achieved about one time in five. A hen cannot lay on a food ration bulky enough to barely retain the spark of life in the body; there must be more than a life giving quantity. With crops extended to the utmost twice daily, and numerous piecemeals and lunches between times, a hen will be in such condition physically she can combat the rigors of winter and lay quite regularly. A hen kept continually on the tread mill, which is the scratching pen in this case, will not store up fat to the detriment of her laying qualities. Throw the feed into them and don't worry about the fat, but don't forget the treadmill.

The ingratitude of mere man is something amazing.

A certain philanthropic merchant in this city, feeling that the people in the agricultural communities were not getting their due from those entrusted with the selling of their wares, and noticing the covetous glances of admiration cast in the direction of the products as left at his place of business, fresh, crisp and inviting—for the use of his personal family, he conceived the idea of giving his customers the benefit of any odd shipments of the kind he received. They jumped at the chance, and bought all up eagerly, and the philanthropist was well pleased with the part he was playing in the life comedy of his fellow man. But there came a change. Upon receiving advance information that he would receive a consignment from a certain point at a certain date, he notified his trade and allotted the whole among them. What was the result? When the shipper, the one most benefitted, started to fulfill the contract, along came a trust agent, soliciting this commodity, and bought it, causing much vexation of temper on the part of the good Samaritan, and great disappointment to his customers, whereupon he dropped out as middleman and closed forever an outlet for the products of some forty odd producers who had been enjoying more than ordinarily high prices for what they sold. Moral: Fulfill every contract you enter into, and make good every promise.

MODEL INCUBATORS and BROODERS

A Valuable New Feature for 1905

It has been demonstrated the past season that my new incubator, the Model, has no equal as a hatcher. The new arrangement of the diffusive system in the heating and ventilating has proven more efficient than the old. The evidence given by the large breeders is conclusive. The Regulator used last season, though easier to adjust, did not present any radical improvements over that used in my older invention, The Cyphers. Considerable adjustment of the lamp flame was still necessary to enable it to keep the temperature at one point. To obviate this a more active thermostat was necessary. After a season's work and the expenditure of several thousand dollars in experiments I have secured a thermostat more than four times as active as the old—as sensitive and accurate as a thermometer.

Patent applied for.

This thermostat cares effectively for the difference in lamp heat between the lowest flame that is required to heat the hatching chamber to the proper temperature, and the largest flame the lamp may carry. It reduces to a minimum the attention required to keep the temperature at one point. Another satisfactory feature, it always comes back to the same point after cooling the eggs. It is sure to satisfy you. All Model Incubators are now equipped with it. Send for descriptive circular.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

$300,000,000 IN POULTRY

Do you know that the government census of 1900 gives the value of the poultry produced in that year at very nearly $300,000,000? POULTRY SUCCESS, the 20th Century Poultry Magazine, is absolutely indispensable to every one interested in chickens, whether they be begnners, experienced poultry raisers or only keep a few hens. It is, without any question, the foremost poultry monthly in this country and readers of its articles on pure bred chicks and their better care and keeping have come to realize it is a plain truth. "There's money n a hen."

Regular subscription price 50 cents. 36 to 80 pages; beautifully illustrated, handsomely printed on fine book paper.

Special Introduction Offers: If you keep chickens or are in any way interested in them, we will send Poultry Success one year for only 25 cents and include a large illustrated practical poultry book free; or three months trial for three two cent stamps. Sample copy free. Address to-day.

TWELFTH ANNUAL SALE.

We will have our Twelfth Annual Sale for the month of NOVEMBER of the World Wide Known Egg Producer,

BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC.

On account of the late Spring this year, there were less birds raised than ever before, so the demand for fresh laid eggs will be the greater.

To help supply this extra demand a little BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC in the morning mash will do the work. It starts the pullets laying early and keeps them laying all through the winter. It helps the old hens through moulting and gets them to laying before the very cold weather sets in.

Those who have used BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC once will never try anything else, as it does more than we say it will do.

The regular price is 1 lb., 25c; by mail 40c; or, 5 boxes, $1.00.

We will sell during the month of NOVEMBER only a 1 lb. box, 15c; by mail, 30c! or, 7 boxes $1.00, shipped via express or freight from New York.

This is a big saving to our customers, old and new, and those wishing to double their profits should take advantage of this special offer.

At these reduced prices, positively no orders filled before November 1st nor after November 30th.

We sell all kinds of POULTRY SUPPLIES and all are listed in our Immense Illustrated Poultry Supply Catalogue, mailed free. Send for one.

World's Fair Coops

Cold Facts Regarding the Lack of Suitable Accommocations Provided at St. Louis

Owing to the conflicting rumors in regard to the cooping of the World's Fair show, the facts in the case will do no harm and may be the means of placing the responsibility where it really belongs.

It has been stated repeatedly that the proposition submitted by the Spratt's Patent Company was such that the committee could not accept it. I learned from a reliable source that the committee had nothing to do with accepting or rejecting any proposition. The World's Fair management, and especially the live stock department, have used every means in their power, both verbally and through the press, to make the public believe that the American Poultry Association had charge of the cooping and were responsible for the work.

The facts are that the committee in charge of the cooping did not represent the A. P. A. Chief Coburn asked that the three men named have the indorsement of the Association at the Rochester meeting, and in view of the fact that they had the appointment they were given this indorsement, but with the distinct understanding that the Association had nothing whatever to do with the work.

So far as the committee is concerned it is due them to say that they were simply figureheads and could not make a move without the consent of the World's Fair Board, and this Board of Managers and not the committee are responsible for the bum coops provided.

Let it be understood once and for all that this committee was not only ready but anxious to close up with Spratts—in fact, did, only to have this board annul it on technical grounds. From a money making standpoint, if this were the only object the committee had in mind, then the proposition submitted by Spratts should have been accepted, as is shown by the copy of contract from that company attached to this article. For by accepting the proposition of Spratt it would have given the committee forty cents on every dollar, and released them from any responsibility, and the labor connected with the show, and they could have played the part of gentlemen during the entire exhibit and not worked themselves like slaves as they did. Further, they would have received the compliments of the breeders of the United States and Canada for giving them the best there was in cooping and feed. Instead they must take the censure of those who are dissatisfied, and in justice to the breeders it is only fair to them to say that there were many cases where they had a kick coming, and in some cases a big one. No matter how much the committee may receive over and above the actual cost of coops, feed and assistance, it is a question if the ill will of the disgruntled exhibitors won't more than offset it in the end, and show itself in such a way as to really cost every one of them more than they received. I, for one, have my doubts about the committee coming out whole in the transaction. Further, it is dollars to doughnuts that every fact not alone in connection with the cooping but selection of judges, will come to light, and some men to-day high in public favor will be stripped for the gaze of the public. You can't fool all the people only for a minute; men won't turn over the wrong shell all the time, and when men come to me and say that they were well aware of the fact that they were paid a salary, simply for their influence, it shows to what lengths things are carried. One man boasted of the fact that his influence landed one of the judges. He said it wasn't a question of the man's abilty; he was simply gettng even on an old score.

The more of this stuff that comes to the surface the more respect I have for the hard-working cooping committee. Every day that I was at the show (and I went early and stayed late) the more I thought of the committee of three, and I believe had the show lasted another week I would have fallen in love with them, and the higher this committee went in my opinion the lower the ones went that were over them. No matter how well men cover their tracks there are too many decent people in the business to allow the wrong man to suffer for the wrongs of others.

Following is the proposition submitted by the Spratt's Cooping Company, together with the several changes made by them to conform to the World's Fair rules, and it is only fair to this—one of the best and most reliable cooping concerns in the United States and England, that the facts be known. We don't believe in growling about spilt milk or kicking about what can not be improved, but we learned enough at St. Louis to know that there will be things said about it far from complimentary, and facts will find their way into the public press and the readers of the Inland have learned long ago that here is one publication that is not afraid to tell the truth.

The Spratt Company first agreed to furnish and erect in proper time not less than 5,000 and not more than 10,000 of Spratt's Improved Wire Cages for poultry, bantams, geese, ducks, pigeons and pet stock, assorted to suit the requirements of the show; pay all the labor for the erection of same prior to the exhibition, and furnish all labor to take down at the close of the exhibition; to supply all the food for all of the exhibits during the whole time; to prepare the same and hand it to their attendants; also to supply the food and water vessels, numbers, canvass, entry blanks, etc., for the sum of twenty cents per pen for pigeons and twenty-five cents per pen for poultry, f. o. b. Newark, New Jersey, each coop to contain one bird; price for breeding pens, fifty cents each. The committee was to pay for 5,000 cages whether they were used or not.

The above contract was to include all the tables, trestles, horses, etc.

They also made a flat propositon of sixty cents an entry for which they agreed to do all the above and also to receive the birds from the express companies as soon as they reached the fair grounds; un-pen the same; place them in their coops; find all the laborers and attendants during the whole time of exhibition; take entire charge of the feeding and watering; to recoop the same at the close of the exhibition; hand to the express companies and take a receipt for the same and hand them over to the committee at the close of the exhibition—in fact, they proposed to do all the work that is known as the superintendent's work in the show, for the sum of sixty cents per entry.

Figuring on the basis of 10,000 birds, and that is what the committee was calculating on at all times, the first proposition would have left $7,000 with expenses to pay out of it, and the second proposition would have left the committee $4,000 withnothing to pay out of it but their own salaries. These figures were based on the estimate of 10,000 birds at $1.00 per entry.

They also submitted four or five different propositions on the above lines, each time changing and striking out certain things that the committee did not approve of.

In the first place, Spratts asked for the usual page advertising in the premium list and page in catalogue that is accorded them by all shows where they have done the cooping. This privilege was refused, and they were told that there would be no advertisements of any kind allowed in any of the books.

The poultrymen and supply dealers of this country know, however, that advertisements were solicited by the World's Fair management for these same books and were accepted by them at from one to two hundred dollars a page. Col. Mills promised, on his visit to New York last spring, to give the Spratt's Company the right to use the top floor of their barn for sleeping accommodations for their men, but afterwards this was struck out of the contract and refused; the claim made that no one would be allowed in the buildings. Those who attended the World's Fair know that poultrymen slept in the buildings every night from the opening to the close of the show, and no objection, so far as we were able to learn, was made to it.

The Spratt's people afterwards, being refused space in the catalogue, asked for space in one of the buildings to display their goods. It was granted at that time, but later on this was struck out. Those who were in attendance at St. Louis know that there was no charge made for incubators, supplies, poultry journals or any other poultry paraphernalia.

The latest contract that they wanted the Spratt's people to accept, after the committee had agreed upon the first one and it had been turned down by the World's Fair management, was this:

No free advertising in the premium list nor in the catalogues; no stalls to place Spratt's goods; no stalls for sleeping rooms for help and attendants and they wanted them to guarantee to be ready to supply benches for 2,000 dogs at exactly one-half the usual price and half the price that the Spratt's people had submitted to Col. Mills, and which they told him at the time was the very lowest it could possibly be done for. They also wanted them to guarantee to be ready to cage 250 cats at 75 per cent. of their regular rates.

These conditions were not acceptable to the Spratt's Patent, but they were willing at all times to sign on the basis as submitted in the first part of this letter. They were willing to forego the advertising in the premium list and catalogue, etc., providing the space in these books was not sold; they were willing to leave their food out, but they did insist that they should be allowed to feed the fowls once each day—in the morning—with Spratt's food, and in justice to this company we say that this should have been granted them. There may be better foods on the market than Spratt's (we don't say that there is or is not.), but every man who has followed the shows, and especially the large ones for the past fifteen years, will have to admit the fact that T. Farrar Rackham and other superintendents of the Spratt's Patent Cooping Company, have been able by the use of their food to keep fowls in the best show condition, and every fancier in the United States should take off his hat to this company for standing pat on this proposition. They simply asked for what was right and fair—to be allowed to take care of the biggest show in the world and see to it that breeders, who had perhaps invested their last dollar in exhibition stock, should receive that stock at the close of the exhibition in the best possivle shape that it could be kept in.

Before leaving St. Louis I had quite a talk with Mr. Henry Steinmesch in regard to the cooping proposition and later on I expect to be able to have an article from him, explaining all the facts connected with the work. It is due the breeders and it is due Mr. Steinmesch.

We have tried to look at this thing from an unbiased standpoint. The coops provided by the committee were not satisfactory in many instances. There were cases at St. Louis where birds, especially geese, were placed in cages and compelled to stay there for ten days when they positively could not straighten up. In the single comb varieties time after time I noticed that the male bird in trying to crow would rake the top of his comb half the breadth of his coop.—Theo. Hewes in The Inland Poultry Journal.

CURTIS' COMMENTS.

The World's Fair poultry show held at St. Louis, Oct. 24-Nov. 5, has gone into history as the greatest exhibition of the kind held to date in this or any other country. It was the greatest in number of entries, more than 9,000, and in number of birds on exhibition, about 7,200. It was the greatest in number of varieties shown, including all standard and several non-standard varieties, and the greatest in size of classes, ranging from single pairs among the odds and ends up to the heretofore unapproached entry of eight hundred and eight White Wyandottes. It was the greatest in area covered by the exhibits, but this was nothing to its credit. It was also the greatest in attendance, the visitors to the poultry show averaging more than twenty thousand daily. It was greatest also in number of exhibitors, nearly five hundred, and in the attendance of fanciers from all parts of the United States and Canada. It was greatest, too, in the amount of cash premiums offered.

As to the accommodations, they were poor enough. Mr. T. F. McGrew, in a short, extemporaneous address made at the first session of the American Poultry Association, pointedly remarked that he hoped the day would come during his life time when the live stock interest of the country would be so far recognized and appreciated that a later World's Fair management would not dare relegate it to the back gate, but instead would locate the stock pavilions near the main entrance and send all Pike features far to the rear, where he believes they properly belong—judged by comparison or any other way. Mr. McGrew's remarks were greeted with instant and prolonged applause by the large gathering of members of the American Poultry Association and other visiting fanciers. We heartily endorse the substance of what he said and hereby join with him and others in entering an emphatic protest.

What the poultrymen were made to endure at St. Louis, in the way of poor accommodations, other stock breeders had been forced to put up with in turn. One circular that was sent out by an enthusiastic solicitor for the World's Fair poultry and incubator exhibition, called the buildings in which the poultry and pigeons were to be exhibited "poultry palaces." This is too much. We noticed that the signs on these buildings, announcing that they would be for sale at the close of the fair, read, "These barns for sals at close of the exhibition." It was reasonable to call them "stock pavilions," and let it go at that. The soil inside of and surrounding these buildings was of virgin yellow clay, the kind that clings with the grip of death when wet and makes a special brand of all-pervading dust when tramped upon day after day by thousands of eager feet. Poultrymen have not only the World's Fair management to thank for the superb cash premiums offered, but likewise Dame Nature for sending her water cart to other realms during the days of the poultry show, because had it rained at St. Louis during this time, gum boots and float boats would have been at a premium. Fortunately, the weather was ideal.

The light in these stock pavilions, which were built for cattle, sheep and hogs—not for poultry, was sadly deficient. There was no more chance of the visitors being able to see, admire and appreciate the beauties of form and feather that fanciers have striven year by year to attain in their choicest specimens, than there was for them to stand on solid ground and jump a mile high. There were no board floors in the pavilions which contained the poultry, and the yellow clay dust played sad havoc with the garments of women who were brave enough to enter. You could write your name on the coops and your initials on the backs of the fowls. There were two octagonal buildings, "Palaces B and C," that were exceptions to the rule. These buildings had board floors and contained the incubator, brooder and poultry supply exhibits and the poultry journal booths. These were well lighted and reasonably homelike. Mr. Frank B. White deserves credit for bringing out a large and varied exhibit of incubators, brooders, bone cutters, poultry foods and supplies. Nearly all the poultry papers were represented and appeared to be doing a thriving business.

The cooping was fairly satisfactory. It compared favorably with the best that the World's Fair people did for the housing of the poultry and the entertainment of visiting fanciers. Perhaps it was unavoidable for the American Poultry Association to hold its meeting in the stock judging pavilion, a round building with a sawdust arena in the center and soft pine steps to sit upon. The place could have been worse, inasmuch as the building had a roof, but it was decidedly "wide open" in other respects. One thing may be said in its favor: it was conveniently located. Visiting fanciers who did not pick up a generous cold at this World's Fair poultry show were at liberty at all times to help themselves to what dust they could carry, inside and out.

The committee of three came near meeting a "Waterloo." The fact that it achieved success when disaster seemed inevitable—overcoming seemingly insurmountable obstacles—is far more to its credit than could have been the case if everything had been as it should have been. They were told that they could have possession of the stock pavilions five days before the opening of the poultry show. Instead of this, not one of the buildings was placed under their control earlier than within forty-eight hours of the opening date, and a majority of them were not in their possession until within twenty-four hours (fourteen hours of daylight!) prior to Monday morning, Oct. 24th. By this time thousands of chickens had arrived and with them many of their owners. As late as Saturday afternoon, Oct. 22nd, these stock buildings were six to ten inches deep with straw and manure. They had not been cleaned nor disinfected. The cattle, sheep and hogs were moved out as late as Friday and Saturday, Oct. 21 and 22. All cleaning had to be done and the poultry coops put in place in the short space of twelve to forty-eight hours. It was a well-nigh superhuman task, and the marvel among visiting poultrymen was that the committee of three and its assistants accomplished so much in so short a time, and did as well as was done.

While all the poultrymen who accompanied their birds were tolerant, encouraging and very ready to help, the Canadians especially distinguished themselves in this respect. When matters were at their worst and the committee of three and the numerous assistants were working like so many Trojans, one of the Canadian exhibitors approached a member of the committee and said: "Don't worry one minute about us Canadians. We will help ourselves and also help you." The blame for the apparently inexcusable delay in turning the stock buildings over to the poultrymen was charged to the railroads, and justly so, it would seem. They failed, probably through inability, to place stock cars on the tracks at the time they agreed, so that the cattle, sheep and hogs could be removed from the buildings and grounds. It was out of the question to dislodge these animals until the cars were available. That tells the story.

The result was that the committee of three and its helpers had the "time of their lives," with not a soul to envy them! Suffice it to say that the World's Fair management builded better than they knew when they recognized the American Poultry Association and asked it to appoint a committee from among its members to receive the poultry at the World's Fair, to coop it, feed it and return it to the owners. As matters turned out, the World's Fair people were fortunate indeed in this arrangement, and the poultrymen of the United States and Canada who exhibited at this great show were still more fortunate. If men of less experience and less resolution than Messrs. Steinmesch, McGrew and Fishel, with their twenty-five to thirty lieutenants, had been in charge, it would have been a case of "confusion worse confounded," and the Old Nick would have been to pay, sure enough.

We cannot say that it would be just to specially blame the World's Fair management or the Live Stock Division for the unfortunate conditions that prevailed during the big poultry show. This World's Fair will pass into history as a colossal success and a colossal failure. Early in the undertaking, St. Louis far over-reached itself. Starting out with an unprecedently large sum of money, it planned the expenditure of this amount and two or three times as much more. It undertook far more than its large capital justified, and a great deal more than the time available permitted being done and done right. The inevitable result was that the fair was unfinished, incomplete. The comparatively small attendance was a sore disappointment, but should have been anticipated. The honor of St. Louis as a mercantile community will remain untarnished. Every obligation to outsiders will be met at full one hundred cents on the dollar. That is the St. Louis way. But let us hope more earnestly that by the time the American people hold another World's Fair, the live stock interest of the continent will have so far asserted itself that proper recognition will be accorded it, not alone in the way of tempting prizes, but suitable buildings in which to display the choicest specimens—the breeding triumphs—of one of this country's chief sources of national wealth.—Grant M. Curtis in Reliable Poultry Journal.

MINORCA AWARDS AT ST. LOUIS.

Editor American Fancier:

In your list of awards of the World's Fair poultry show I notice that the Single Comb Black Minorca cockerels and the entire Rose Comb Black Minorca class is omitted, owing no doubt to the fact that neither were mentioned in the World's Fair catalogue. The truth of the matter is that there were 27 Single Comb Black Minorca cockerels exhibited. The awards were as follows: 1st, J. H. Minshall; 2nd and 4th, J. P. Hilldorfer; 3rd, Mrs. Geo. E. Monroe; 5th, Geo. B. Nelson; 6th, J. H. Santee; 7th, H. J. Feeder; 8th, W. A. Pabst; 9th, Dan Oberhellman; 10th, P. Erhbar.

In Rose Comb Black Minorcas there were 37 birds entered. 22 single birds and 3 pens, awards as follows: 1st, 2nd and 3rd cock, Geo. H.Northup; 4th and 5th, A. Didrickson. Cockerel 1st, 2nd and 3rd, A. Didrickson; 4th, T. A. McKittrick. Hen, 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th Geo. H. Northup; 5th and 6th, A. Didrickson. Pullets 1st and 3rd, T. A. McKittrick; 2nd, 4th and 5th, A. Didrickson. Pens, 1st and 2nd, Geo. H. Northup; 3rd, A. Didrickson. I shall be glad to have you publish this as one of the mistakes which can be traced directly to the World's Fair catalogue.

PROPER METHOD OF DEALING WITH CUSTOMERS.

Editor American Fancier:

I have been somewhat puzzled as to the proper method of dealing with customers from whose letters I quote and others like them, and at the same time be just to the customer and to myself; hence write for the opinion of yourself and brother fanciers who have like experiences.

Nov. 8th I recived the following: "Please quote me on good S. C. Buff Orpington pullets for breeders next spring." I quoted price on good breeders and very promptly received a check and the following letter: "Enclosed find my check for ($) for three S. C. Buff Orpington pullets, the same to be guaranteed, and if they are not of best quality I am to return them." Thus as you see quite a different class of stock is demanded when the order is given than was called for in the letter of inquiry.

To another I had written of a late or rather late hatched cockerel that then weighed about 7 pounds, but quite a promising one. In reply he thought he might suit, but as it would be impossible to know how he might develop he did not care to pay more than —— dollars. I accepted his offer and when I received his money order for the bird he specified as follows: "Enclosed find money order for one of your earliest cockerels. What I want is a good buff wing and a good strong undercolor right up under hackle. Not too dark in surface color," etc., etc. In short, he demanded perfection.

In both these and other similar cases I have given liberal values for the prices paid, as I always aim to more than satisfy customers, but when a man shows such a strong disposition to get more than his money's worth, it is, to say the least, annoying. Brother fanciers, what say you?

BANTAMS AT NEW YORK.

The coming meeting of the National Bantam Association, in connection with the Madison Square Garden show, gives every promise of being the greatest Bantam exhibit ever held in America.

The inducements in the shape of cash specials are larger than at any previous meeting,and each breed will be well provided for in this respect. This list of cash specials will shortly be published in the leading poultry journals.

The judges are selected by a popular vote of the N. B. A. members, thus insuring to each exhibitor that the quality of birds and not the exhibitors will determine the awards.

No better facilities are offered at any other show for providing care and attention to every bird, whether the owner is presnt or not.

Madison Square Garden is too well known to most Bantam breeders to require any further commendation as a show room, and the motto of the New York association has always been "Equality and justice to every exhibitor."

Every bantam breeder in this country should see to it that his name is enrolled at once as a member of the Nat. Bantam Assoc., in order that he may participate in these cash specials offered to exhibiting members.

On our title page will be found the history of the cooping fizzle at the World's Fair. It is a plain statement of facts which American poultry fanciers are entitled to. Mr. Hewes puts the blame where it evidently belongs and we trust that further investigation will reveal the real "nigger in the wood-pile." It was a downright pity that such a grand lot of birds should have been hidden away in buildings and coops that a county fair of twenty years ago might have possibly taken comfort and pride in. The comments of the poultry press, excepting in a few nstances, are very caustic on this matter and justly so.

Editor John H. Robinson copies the list of entries at the World's Fair as compiled and published in The American Fancier, giving the latter due credit for the same. This is journalistic courtesy and is appreciated. For be it known, it was no eays task to get that list ready from the catalog, many corrections being necessary in the nomenclature of the breeds, some having names never heard of before in the history of fowldom.

As to the awards, Mr. George H. Northrup was kind enough to supply the missing Black Minorca awards, it being impossible for our representative at St. Louis to obtain them from the officials in charge. They are published in this issue.

Speaking of Black Minorcas reminds us of the fact that Mrs. George E. Monroe, Dryden, N. Y., who was very successful in capturing a share of the prizes at St. Louis, will retire from the fancy and offers her entire flock for sale, some 225 birds. This will be a rare opportunity to get some very choice birds. We regret that the fancy will lose such an enthusiastic and thorough fancier of Black Minorcas as Mrs. Monroe has been.

The Herald Square show, New York city, opens next Monday with three thousand, six hundred and eighty-four entries, a remarkable showing for a new show. The entries in pigeons are very large, fanciers in Boston and vicinity being unusually well represented.

There is considerable well-meant sympathy expressed in a number of poultry journals regarding the fact that some of the old-time or professional judges were not placed at the World's Fair. No doubt the motives that actuated all this can be attributed to journalistic courtesy in one sense, and a fancier like spirit in another. But in most cases the goodwill of the writer is confronted by facts that remove outside the pale of sympathy a number of the older judges. They absolutely refused to sign the applications sent them by Col. Mills, and consequently eliminated themselves entirely from any consideration by the powers that be. They acted within their rights and have no kick coming.

We are surprised to read in the Southern Poultry Journal that the south has only one judge who is a member of the A. P. A. and not an editor of a poultry paper. How about G. O. Brown of Maryland, Dr. S. T. Lea of South Carolina, Loring Brown of Georgia, and D. M. Owen of Tennessee? We believe all are members of the American Poultry Association and not editors of poultry papers.

* * *

One of the handsomest specialty breed catalogues ever issued is the one just received from U. R. Fishel, Hope, Indiana, the famous breeder of White Plymouth Rocks. It is beautifully printed, splendidly illustrated, and indicates forcibly the push and energy of Mr. Fishel.

It is, however, amusing to read the comments by editors that have an axe to grind and personal animus to be relieved of. They forget journalistic courtesy, lower the force of their arguments by abuse and make insinuations against the whole, when their spleen is responsible for the part. It is a pity, but 'tis true.

We expected to give reports of the two great rival shows held in London, England, week before last, the Crystal Palace and International at Alexandra Palace, but our foreign mail did not reach us in time for this issue. All we know at the time of writing is that the International show had 4,625 entries in poultry alone. More next week.

Some bold warriors went to St. Louis with bells on, blood in their eye and "wampum to burn." They came back milk, meek and thoroughly impressed and awed by what they saw, but minus the "wampum" and considerably less enthusiasm and bravado. It takes a week or two at a World's Fair to test the mettle of the visitor.

We regret to learn of the death of E. M. Curtiss at Bristol, Conn., November 16. Many visitors at the poultry shows in the east will remember him as the famous "Daisy Bone Cutter Man." Genial and sunny of disposition, full of energy and good humor, he was everybody's friend, and we all liked the cheerful old gentleman and regret that he is no more.

* * *

The "only Zim," sometimes called "Debonair," but known on the voting list of Gloversville, N. Y., as F. B. Zimmer, is enjoying an immense trade in Beagle hounds and, incidentally, is disposing of many choice Bantams at good prices. That new kennel building at Debonair is a winner and at one time 172 Beagles sang its praises in the morning dew. Zim's new circular is a stunner, and no mistake. Hard work and square dealing have placed Mr. Zimmer in the front ranks of doggy men, the same as it did in the chicken crowd years ago.

The Buff Leghorn male winnings at St. Louis, credited to Mr. W. L. Howell, belong to Mr. Nate K. Cornwall. Mr. Howell did not send his birds, although he entered them.

Mr. George W. Webb will again represent The American Fancier at some of the leading shows and has full authority to accept advertising contracts, collect accounts, etc.

We are indebted to Mr. Edward S. Schmid, Washington, D. C., for his new, complete and handsome illustrated catalog of Birds, Pet Animals and Appliances. This is the most complete book of the kind published in America and should be in the hands of every lover of birds and other pets. The press work by George E. Howard is first class, as might be expected.

BROWN'S BUDGET.

By G. O. Brown, Associate Editor.

Better stuff some old newspapers in the open spaces next to the rafters, if you have neglected to board them up.

How quick a cold snap reminds you of the many things you should have attended to long ago. Now it must be done. "Gee, but fingers get cold. Why didn't I do it 6 weeks ago?"

It is such neglects that cost lots of trouble and loss.

Keep the lantern filled and the globe clean. Take a peep last thing at night. It's a great satisfaction to know that everything is all right.

Fowls do not mind the cold as much as they do high winds. Make some wind shelters. Old corn fodder is better than nothing. We have used a long shed made of fodder and rails,that a flock of hens picniced in all winter, and it helped the egg production too.

Im "tickled to death" to think I've got in a good supply of dry oak leaves.

The man who has made a study of the breds he keeps, can make early selection of the cockerels that are not desirable to keep. It's economy to get rid of them early. The man who hasn't made the study, may kill his best birds. It pays to know.

Patronize your poultry shows. It's a good "ad" for you whether you win or not. It shows you are not afraid to come out in good company.

It is a little trouble to say I saw your "ad" in so and so when writing to an advertiser of a publication. It is a satisfaction to parties interested to know and helps the paper also. Do it.

When people begin to call you a "poultry crank," go around behind the barn and shake hands with yourself —for you are becoming a success at your occupation.

Ship your fowls in nice clean coops. They add to the appearance of the birds. Use coops you are proud to stencil. Properly cooped fowls are a traveling "ad."

SOUTHEASTERN WISCONSIN POULTRY AND PET STOCK ASSOCIATION.

The seventh annual exhibition of the Southeastern Wisconsin Poultry and Pet Stock Association will be held at the Opera House, Delavan, Wis., January 23-28, 1905. Everything possible is being done to make this show a record breaker. More cash specials, silver cups and other inducements are offered at this show than at any show in the state. It is Wisconsin's best poultry show in fact as well as in name. Every wideawake breeder in the middle west should make inquiry regarding this show. If you have birds good enough to win in fast company here is the place to enter them. To win at Delavan is a distinct honor and is worth many times the expense for advertising purposes. You will be accorded every courtesy if you exhibit at the Southeastern Wisconsin. The seventh grand premium list will be issued in December. Don't fail to get your name on the mailing list of the association. All inquiries will be cheerfully and promptly answered by the secretary, W. E. Peffer, Delavan, Wis.

GREENFIELD, OHIO.

The Greenfield Poultry and Pet Stock Association will hold their first annual show at Grenfield, Highland Co., Ohio, Jan. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14 and 16, 1905. Theo. Faulstich of Dayton, O., will judge the poultry and M. C. Simmons of Greenfield, O., will judge the pet stock.

FROM 20 INCUBATORS TO 20,000

That is the unbeaten record of the Prairie State Incubators: 20 sold first year—20,000 sold in 1903. Prominent duck and poultry breeders favor the Prairie State because it's always reliable and gives high per cent hatches. The United States Government uses them exclusively. Be sure to send for our free, illustrated catalog full of pictures—among them photos of incubator rooms where 20 to 80 of our machines are in active operation.

DOYLESTOWN, PA.

The Union Poultrymen's Association of Doylestown, Pa., held their first show Oct. 4 to 7. Doylestown is a fine town and the officers a lot of good, nonest fanciers who tried to give every exhibitor justice. There were about 500 birds shown, quite a number of the Trenton, N. J., winners being present. The Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes and Leghorns were the best classes, some of the winners being good enough to win in stronger competition. F. H. Castner and F. K. Wismer placed the awards, which seemed to give general satisfaction. Below is a list of the awards:

NEW BRITAIN, CONN.

Editor American Fancier:

The Connecticut boys had a Johnstown, New York show at New Britain last week and a right down good one. One of the largest shows and best I ever saw in Connecticut. Among the judges who recorded their doings on the score card were "Billy Atherton," W. H. Card, "Honest Dan" Lambert, and last but not the least, Alex. Peirce. It seemed good to see Alex. scoring games and Game Bantams two days. Dan Lambert, day and a half on Barred Rocks. Billy Atherton all day on Wyandottes. And "Wid" Card all day on Leghorns. So you may know there were some birds on hand. Geo. W. Mitchell was on hand with his beautiful Partridge Cochins and they are beautiful. Long lines of Buff Cochin Bantams equal to Hagerstown, Md., a large string of White Cochin Bantams, Partridge Cochin Bants and Blacks. Large classes of Orpingtons, in fact all varieties were well represented. Secretary Freeman and his assistant footed up the score cards and placed the awards as fast as the cards came in from the judges and everything moved on very smoothly—everybody happy and many good sales were made. Danbury was well represented and managed to carry home some of the New Britain money. In fact, I want to say it was a jolly good show run by a jolly good lot of fellows and a jolly good lot of exhibitors. And all honor to the management. D. A. N.

Below are the awards:

Burnie, Tasmania, Australia.

L. Sutton, Proprietor.

16 Aug., '04.

Messrs. Piser & Riddell,
Shushan, N. Y., U. S. A.

Dear Sirs:

I received the birds on the 8th inst. Considering the long trip, they were in fine condition. Of course soiled and broken in feathers, and the male in heavy molt, but all surprisingly vigorous. One hen laid on the 9th, the other next day, and both have laid regularly since. You could scarcely have a better testimony to the vigor of your stock. I am very pleased with them and if birds keep on doing well I should be able to grow some fine stock, as I have an ideal place for the business.

I know you will be anxious to hear from me, and I should be sorry if you did not receive this, so will you kindly acknowledge same?

Thanking you, gentlemen, I am,
Yours faithfully,
L. SUTTON.

[The above birds were Buff Wyandottes.—Ed. American Fancier.]

BIRDS AT ST. LOUIS.

(Concluded from November 19.)

WHITE COCHINS.—Cocks. First—A large bird, but not in the best condition, only partially through moult; neck and saddle not full; tail only about half developed. Good in length of feather; fine comb; very sound in color with short back carried at the proper angle; a little deficient in breast. A good bird throughout. Fifth—Bird in bad condition; not through moult and not showing in the best of health. Second, third and fourth awards were passed up on this account. Fifth bird is deep through, loosely feathered, but pretty hard to tell what he will round into. Color very good. Can say but little for him in the condition shown. Cockerels—Third—No first or second awards made. Cockerels not very well developed; young, but third bird shows promise of making a grand cock. Think the judge made a serious mistake in turning birds of this kind down to third place. Good in back, breast and body and fairly good in leg feathering. Fifth—Pretty well matured bird and far better than many that are winning firsts at some of our winter shows. We feel that the White Cochin men have been done an injury in skipping these ribbons; believe the leading judges in the country would have awarded them first and second money had they judged the class. This bird is too long on legs; has very good feathering; good in back shape; not well developed in breast and too flat. Taking it all in all he is worth the money. Hens—First—Quite a well finished bird; not quite through moult, but showing well withal. Short back, well cushioned. Very good in body, with nice soft feathers and plenty of them. Good breeding comb, but a little high. Color sound. Second—A little larger bird than first but not as good in Cochin type. A little long in back and body and not so well developed in breast. Very good in body and more feathers than we usually find on Cochins of this variety. Third—A smaller hen. Short back; tail somewhat pinched, injuring shape of cushion. Quite well developed in breast and body and good feathering. Quite a nice bird and worthy a prize. Fourth—Not so good in Cochin type—too long in back and only slightly cushioned; fairly good in body, but quite deficient in breast; very good in comb; color quite sound. Fifth—The shortest bird in the class; quite a bit of Cochin in her. Not shown in the best of condition; tail only starting. Good in depth of body and short legs; needs more breast development and needs about one month more to put her in show condition. Pullets. First—First class specimen and well finished excepting middle toe feathers; a little scant here. Plenty of feathers on sides of legs and carried well in front of hocks. Back a little longer than we like, but showing good cushion. Almost an ideal comb and very sound in color. Second—Quite small; would not weigh to exceed four pounds and not extra good in shape. Too narrow in back and only slightly cushioned. If the judge was going to follow out his line of prize birds as he did in cockerels, then he should have done the same in pullets, as there were two cockerels left out in the class that were of far more value than the pullets. Third—Another small bird. Take it all in all, not a bad specimen. Quite good in body, but deficient in breast. Shows pretty good plumage; tail about one-third matured; a little stiff in hock feathering and somewhat scant on toes. Bird lacks about two months of being old enough to show to advantage. Pens. First—Cock and four hens. Cock bird, aside of being out of condition—only about half through moult—a good one and equal if not superior to bird in single entry. Good breadth of back but saddle not full. Breast well down, but not as well developed as we like; plenty of feathers on legs and toes; good plumage all over. Hens not shown in the best of condition, only two of them having their tails full. Three birds in this pen we think quite a bit of; have about the right length; good breadth; short on legs and sound in color. Good pen throughout and worthy of first money in this great show. No second pen awarded. Third—Females in this pen show up fairly good. Male in bad condition and only an ordinary specimen; back too long, straight and narrow, and pinched in tail. Tail only slightly developed; two or three main tail feathers remain, others moulted out. In poor condition and only moderately feathered on legs. Two females show up quite good except that they are too small. In our opinion they will never reach standard weight. Good combs on hens and very good leg and toe feathering on three of them.

LIGHT BRAHMAS.—There was a protest entered, and sustained after the awards were made and the judge had gone hom. One entire exhibit was thrown out. Among them some of the winners. Will report this class as soon as we know just how they stand. With the exhibit referred to out of the class.

BLACK LANGSHANS—Cocks. First—A first class specimen, only lacking about thirty days of being in show condition; tail about half finished and hackle only about half out. Color rich; beetle green throughout, showing only the faintest trace of purple. Comb about the right size, but ends of serrates have been frosted. Good length of legs, standing broad and straight, and a specimen well worthy of the prize. Second—A better combed bird than first, but in other particulars not so good. Not near through moult; tail only about one-third in sides and lacking entirely in center. Good color throughout and about right length of back. Good in length of legs but a little scant in leg feathering. Nail missng on outer toe. Third—A smaller bird than either first or second; a little longer in back; one serrate out of comb; tail only about half developed, but apparently will be good in that section. Color sound throughout; only a little purple showing in any section. Legs and toes about the right length for size of spcumen; a little scant on outer toe feathers. Fourth—Good shaped body and back, but too short on legs. About one inch more legs would make a magnificent specimen of him. Comb about the right size. Serrations not long enough to compare with size of comb, and extra serrate on blade. Tail about half developed and carried a little high. Good in toe feathering, being strong on outer toe, with middle one entirely bare. Fifth—A smaller bird and not shown in the best of condition; only about half through moult. Tail only about one-third in and carried a little high and very much broken in center. Legs and toes about the right length for size of bird. Would prefer a bird much larger. Comb fairly good in serrations, but bad at rear. Legs scant in feathering. Cockerels. First—A large bird, standing well on a good pair of legs; back too short and tail carried in front of a perpendicular line; comb about the right size, showing some extra serrates on rear of blade. Breast not well developed and body too short. Color quite sound throughout. Second—A large bird; better in type than first; stands well on legs, broad apart. Fairly good shaped back, might have a little more saddle; neck only about half finished. Tail coming in nice shape; sickles showing about two inches beyond end of tail feathers. Comb coarse, extra serrations and twisted in bead work in rear of blade. Color good throughout. Third—A good bodied bird, but a little short on legs; well developed in tail; hackle and saddle about full. Comb, aside from a small spike in front and two extra serrates in center which undoubtedly had been removed, very good. Legs a little short for length of body and back. This bird posed on legs about one inch longer would have landed higher in the money. Color sound, showing a little purple in back, other sections being good. Fourth—A good big bird but not finished; bird shown at an awkward state, but going to make on of the best Langshans in the class. Good length of legs; well feathered on the outer side and outer toe. Comb coarse, extra serrations and badly serrated at the blade. Color good throughout. Fifth—A big bird, more after the old type of Langshans in body and back; a little short as bred at the present time. Tail only about half developed; standing away up on legs; the longest of any cockerel in the single entries. Will undoubtedly develop into a good cock bird, but shows awkward as a cockerel. Comb too small for a Langshan, entirely lacking in blade and badly serrated at rear. Color very good; only fairly good in leg and toe feathers showing a little white in outer toes. Hens. First—First class specimen in every section; good from beak to end of tail; tail might be carried about one degree higher and show back to better advantage. Sound in color; carries herself well and nicely finished. A bird that any good Langshan breeder would feel proud of. Best in her class. Second—Another good hen, but not so well shown as first; tail only about half in, some feathers being matured and some missing and tail carried on a horizontal, making back look too long. Color strong throughout. Good comb, eyes and legs. Another good bird. Third—A big bird; I should judge over standard weight. Not quite through moult, but showing well throughout; hackle breaks a little at junction of neck and back, and tail draws a little too far forward, injuring shape of back. Color throughout good. Comb has two extra serrates and does not finish up at blade as well as it should. A good hen and well placed. Fourth—A different type of bird from either of the winners. Body rather deep for a Langshan, more on the Brahma type. Outer toe not well feathered, showing one white feather at end of toe; tail about the right length, but carried too high; comb slightly twisted in front and unevenly serrated. Color good throughout. Fifth—A well finished hen, but like fourth a little low on legs; a little more body and breast than we like on Langshans; prefer to have a bird a little neater in build. Tail about the right length, but not filled in; needs a little more at sides. Comb almost ideal; one little extra serrate in front that might be criticised. Color sound in all sections and well feathered on legs and toes. The severest criticism we would make on this hen, is short on legs and heavy in body. Pullets. First—Not as well finished as we like, but a Langshan from beak to end of tail: the richest beetle green we have seen on a female this year. Good length; carries herself well and about the right length legs. Good leg feathers; nice comb, and with more hackle and cushion and about one inch more tail would be a wonder. This award well placed, not alone in shape but in color. Second—More after the old type of Langshan. A little short in back and tail somewhat spiked; legs somewhat short as compared to length and depth of body. Remarkably good in color; fine beetle green throughout. Comb a little uneven in front and rather high, looking more like a hen in this section than pullet. Thrd—A large bird, not quite through moult; neck and cushion being deficient. Good length of legs; about the right depth of body; a little bit longer in back than we like; tail carried about one degree to low down; color good throughout. A big bird and will make an elegant hen. Fourth—A different type of bird from the other winners—shorter in back; tail carried too high and to far forward; about the right length of legs; good body and breast; back and tail being her weak sections. Comb very much after the style of fifth hen; undoubtedly of same breeding. Fifth—Quite a swell little pullet; a little bit short in back and not quite developed in tail; carried breast down a little too low for this variety. All sections of the bird are good, but don't join together as well as other birds in the class. But little fault can be found with color, showing beetle green in neck and wing bows; a little dull in back color; tail about the right length and carried at proper elevation. About one inch more to length of back would make a phenomenal bird. Comb good at the rear, but only fair in front, one serrate being missing. Pens. First—One breeder in the class who came to the show with his own birds and had sense enough to take them out of the coops provided by the association and put them in coops where they could stand erect. Cock and four hens, all good in color. Cock a fine shaped bird, but not so large as two first birds in single entries. Hens good in color, but somewhat deficient in combs, showing signs of forcing for exhibition. Second — Cockerel and four pullets. All well matured and matching well in type. Cockerel fairly well finished; tail locking about three inches of its proper length. Comb too coarse, two serrates missing on blade, caused perhaps by injury. Comb a little large, shows signs of forcing. Color throughout good. Toe fethering on cockerel and pullets about all that could be desired in this variety. Females have the right length and depth and carry themselves well on the right length of legs. Third—Cock and four pullets. Cock bird not through moult, showing pin feathers in neck and back, and tail only about one-third finished. Pullets rather pinched in back and higher in tail than Langshan breeders desire them to be. Two pullets in pen showing quite a bit of purple. Females in this pen more after the type of Langshans bred some eight years ago and not what is desired to-day. Fourth—Cock and four hens. Not shown in the best of condition. Male bird quite ragged; also two of the hens in bad moult; only fairly good in type. Comb on one female turning over at rear and quite a bit of purple throughout. Hens were, no doubt, good pullets and show signs of having been a breeding pen and not put in the best of condition for this exhibition. Fifth—Cockerel and four pullets. Pullets shown in good condition and well finished. About the right length of back; quite sound in color throughout; cockerel right at gawky stage; tail only about half finished and carried a little too high. Comb of cockerel and pullets very good. Think this pen should have been placed fourth.

RED CAPS.—Not a large class, but espcially strong in males. First cock one of the grandest birds I have ever seen. First cockerel, bred from same male, another good one, but not so large in comparison as the cock.

HAMBURGS.—A strong class of all varieties, undoubtedly one of the largest ever shown in the United States and taking the season of the year into consideration, one of the best. There were some ragged specimens, especially in cocks, due to the condition of moult, but the winners in nearly every class showed up well and worthy the prize they won. One place where we did not quite agree with the judges was in the moon shaped spangles. We like these spangles cleaner cut; the black following web of feather and meeting at the shaft. It gives a better rayed appearance to the bird and is certainly what our western Hamburg breeders are trying to produce.

MISCELLANEOUS.

English Salmon Faverolles.—The classes, although not large, were of creditable quality. 1st cock a large fine bird with black breast and fine foot-featherinf, but the back a trifle brown; 2nd nearly perfect color, but less booting. 1st hen fine shape and good color; 2nd better color than 1st and equal form. Cockerels and pullets were typical birds, but late hatched. 1st pen equal to the winners in single classes.

Ermine, Black and Blue Faverolles were typical of the breed in form and excellent in color.

Lakenvelders were shown in full classes and were of the English and Dutch standard type. The 1st cock was a large sized bird, having a pure black hackle and tail with a rich black saddle; 2nd, fine in color, but loses in size; 3rd, good black hackle, but not so dark in saddle; 4th, good color, but loses in condition. 1st hen large size and pure white body, with dark neck and good black tail; 2nd equal in size and neck, but slightly lighter in tail; 3rd similar to last, 4th lacking in size, but good bird; 5th good size, but lacking in tail. Cockerels very uniform, 1st and 2nd seemed extra good. Pullets really good, 1, 2, and fine large birds with good dark necks and tails, 4 losing in size, 5th losing in color; 6 fails in neck and head, which were too light. The pens of old and young were composed of many birds which were fully equal to the winners in the single classes.

In Campines, 1st pullet was a fine well marked bird. Golden Campines were of good quality and marking.

Rose Comb Blues were good in color and size.

Frizzles fair in numbers but of good quality, all colors being shown. 1st cock a fine large Buff, 2nd a White Bantam, 3rd a R. C. Buff Bantam, 4th a good large bird. The hens were equally varied in size and color. Breeding pens were fine and the 2nd pen of large, well curled Buffs attracted much attention.

Silkies were in full classes and the firsts were birds of exceptional merit.

Sultans a small class, but good throughout.

Sumatras were unusually well represented for this very rare breed and of fair quality, although none were noticed that seemed exceptional. Rumpless a small class of fair quality and diverse colors.

There were also small classes of White Fluffs, White Wonders and Sicilian Buttercups.

Asiatic and American caponized fowls were well represented and were the occasion of much interest.

ROBINSON'S REVIEW.

It behooves one who would write of this exhibition of poultry with due regard to established standards in poultry shows, and at the same time with due recognition of both the difficulties with which the managers had to contend and the advantages of which they failed to make good use, to express his opinions of the show with caution.

Certainly, in so far as quantity of exhibits makes a show great, this was the greatest poultry show that ever happened; and, though many important classes drew their entries almost wholly from the central west, the section which would naturally be expected to furnish most of the entries, others were representative of every section. Considering the show as a whole, and solely with reference to the number and geographical distribution of entries, I think it may properly be classed as the most generally representative as well as the largest show that has ever been held in America.

Then, in point of attendance of fanciers, of representatives of the various collateral industries which have grown up with the development of poultry culture, and of representatives of the poultry press, this show was a record breaker; and it was in the events and incidents related to these features of the show that it was most satisfactory.

Never before in the history of poultry interests on this continent did so many people, representing so many phases of poultry culture, and such a variety of ideas and ideals get together. Never before did so many poultrymen, fanciers, and breeders, judges and show managers, theorists, inventors, manufacturers, writers and editors have such opportunities to extend their personal acquaintance among those interested in the same lines; and it seemed as if by common consent those present had resolved to make the most of these opportunities.

It was well that there was opportunity and disposition to make much of the social side of the occasion, for it was all needed to offset the unsatisfactory aspects of the show. Considering a poultry show as an exhibit of the choicest specimens of the fancier's art, attractively displayed, this show failed miserably in the second requirement. It is not reasonable to expect that at this season of the year the birds would show the development, the finish, and the condition which characterize the best strings of birds seen at the big winter shows. Making due allowance for deficiencies in these things, the birds in most of the classes which were good enough to win here were probably as good as will be seen anywhere this winter, but, as a rule, there were not more fine specimens in any class than it is usual to find in much smaller classes in the winter shows and at the best of the fall fairs, while the proportion of specimens which could not by any stretch of the imagination be classed as exhibition specimens or considered worthy of a prize where a respectable degree of excellence was called for, was larger than is usually seen in an important show.

These were the impressions gathered after several tours of the "barns"—sixteen (I think) in number—in which the exhibits of poultry and pigeons were placed, and after comparing notes with numerous visitors whose opinions on such matters were worth having, and getting from a number of the judges their estimates of the quality of their classes as a whole, it does not seem to me to be necessary to record a different general opinion of the classes. As to giving a fair estimate of the show, class by class, and trying to record correct impressions of the classes here as compared with classes which might be considered as having established the present standards of actual excellence as seen in exhibitions, I leave that task to someone whose powers of observation far surpass mine, I don't think I have ever been accused of diffidence in the matter of recording my opinions and impressions, but under such conditions as existed here it is really not safe for anyone possessed of only ordinary powers of vision to attempt to specialize in recording opinions of the classes, or to attempt close comparisons. Whatever risks one might feel disposed to take in describing classes he could see, I, for one, am not inclined to take any in describing fowls so housed and cooped that they could not be seen. To express the mildest possible opinion of this show, it was no credit to those responsible for it. The truth about it stated in brief is that it was a disgrace to the "fancy" and an imposition on exhibitors. "These are strong words and bitter," as the saying goes, "but they are true."

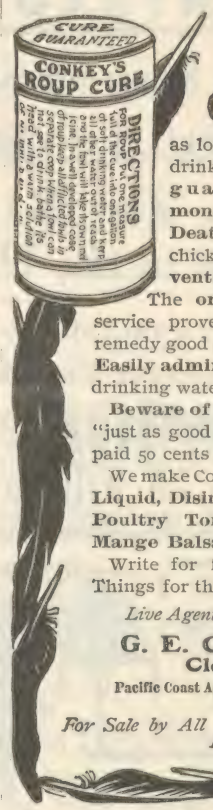
The "barns" in which the exhibits were placed were built for cattle. For this purpose there had been a row of stalls along each side, and over each row of stalls at a height of seven or eight fet from the floor, a platform for storage of hay, grain, bedding, etc. The windows in the sides of the buildings are none too numerous, and were so placed that but half of each window shed light below the platform, the other half admittng light above the platforms, and the light from the upper parts of the windows, obstructed as it was by the platforms, contributing little to relieve the gloom of the interior of the buildings.

And the coops—if such they could be called! They were built for this occasion, and for this occasion only. Let us hope that it will never again seem permissible to anyone in charge of a poultry show to use such things for coops.

When, at Rochester last winter, in the meeting of the A. P. A., the chairman of the cooping committee read the several communications he had received from parties from whom the committee had invited bids on cooping, there was among them an offer from Spratt's Patent, to take full charge of the care of the exhibits, to furnish coops, to coop the birds, to feed and water them, and, in short, to furnish everything needed and to do everything required in the placing, care, and return of the exhibits for about 60 per cent. of the fee which the cooping committee then declared it considered about right, and some time after definitely announced as decided upon. The general impression of those present seemed to be that this propostion, coming from a concern of the standing of Spratt's Patent, ought to be satisfactory. Making the cooping fee a dollar when all the work was to be done for about three-fifths of that amount, naturally came in for some discussion, and it was the situation, thus created by the cooping committee itself, that tended to confirm in many minds the idea that there was a "graft" in the affair, suspicions of which "graft" had been developing for some time, as a result of what information had from time to time leaked out as to the doings and intentions of the committee.

Most of those present at the Rochester meeting for a brief time took it for granted that Spratt's Patent would of course handle the show. Then whether in open meeting or privately, I cannot now say positively, (but I think the matter was mentioned at a session of the A. P. A.), it was given out that the management of the World's Fair would require all new coops. This announcement created the impression that there was a purpose to make conditions which no cooping company would accept, and strengthened still more the feeling that there was a "big graft" for someone somewhere.

Without any positive announcement to that effect, the interested public was led and permitted to suppose that "Spratt's" would coop the show—until after the entries were in. Then it was announced that the committee, finding it impossible to get a satisfactory contract with "Spratts," was obliged to build coops. They did. They improvised structures which would keep the birds in position behind the portions of wire netting to which their respective catalogue numbers were attached. I suppose we may call such things coops when it is necessary to speak of them. The word "coop" has a wide application. Yet, they certainly were not exhibition coops.



The frames, floors, divisions, and backs of these coops were roughly and unsubstantially made of such lumber as it is common to use for light shipping crates or boxes, when there is no occasion to make a package attractive in appearance, and the crate or box is to be used once and then thrown away. The front and tops were of poultry wire netting. Access to the coops was through the backs, which were of slats. The use of coops of such design made it necessary that there should be passages in front for observers. This, of course, greatly reduced the cooping capacity of the space used. The aisles for visitors were so narrow in some of the buildings that two ordinary persons could not pass without one first flattening himself against the coops on one side. When a big man or woman stood in an aisle it was a case of crawl under the coops to the next aisle and back, or go around. In some buildings about 200 feet long there were no cross aisles, and to go around meant a long walk over floors which offered about as many and the same kind of impediments to locomotion as would be found in a clay field ploughed wet and then baked by the sun. This was at a World's Fair poultry show which had been widely advertised as inaugurating new features which it was confidently anticipated would mark the beginning of a new era in poultry exhibitions.

It was in such buildings, in such coops, in such conditions that the greater part of this greatest show was exhibited to visitors to the exposition. The exceptions were the birds so fortunate as to be placed in the coops of the Kansas City show borrowed or hired for the occasion. The White Wyandottes being the largest class, and the hustling secretary of the White Wyandotte Club being on the ground and insisting on their right to the best coops, were placed in the Kansas City coops. What they left were enough for a part of another variety and for the turkeys. The geese fared badly. Fine specimens of the large varieties were put into coops the same size as those used for fowls—coops so small that they could not take a natural position—could neither stand erect nor lie at ease, and in these they had to pass two weeks.

It would have been possible by using more of the barns that were standing empty to have very much bettered the condition under which the birds were shown, but only as many barns were cleared—by removing the manure left by the cattle—for poultry as were needed to hold the exhibit by the closest crowding possible. In justice to the cooping committee and the superintendent it should be said that the responsibility for placing the show in the barns and giving it insufficient space is not to be placed upon them exclusively. Nor does it appear that the chief of the division is deserving of more blame than these subordinates. Indeed it appears that with the problem of handling the great number of entries which had been secured, immediately confronting them, they did as well as men could have done under the circumstances, and with the facilities and help allowed them by the management. For the much that they did at this time they deserve credit, but such credit as is given those who do their best to extricate themselves from predicaments which they ought to have avoided. No credit for the efforts of self-preservation in extremity should blind us to the folly that brought them to such extremity.

Here was an opportunity to give a poultry show which as a spectacle should surpass the best that has yet been seen. The dingy cattle barns were no place for a display of poultry The use of them at once placed this poultry show on a level with the shows at county fairs which make no suitable provision for their poultry departments. Frequenters of poultry shows have been accustomed to attend them in the best exhibition halls in the country. The great winter shows are held in such places as Madison Square Garden, New York; Mechanics Hall, Boston; the Coliseum, Chicago; and in other cities and towns, large and small, the use of the best, most attractive and best lighted hall is cheerfully paid for by the promoters of poultry shows, because in no other can the choice results of the breeders' skill and the fanciers' art be appropriately displayed.

Within a stone's throw of the barns in which the largest of poultry shows was immured was a building in every way suitable for making such a display of the poultry as would have been in every way creditable to all interested in it. This was the Horticultural building. I do not think I am in error in saying that this building offered a larger and more desirable hall for a poultry show than any permanent building in the country, with light all that could be desired, and with floor space sufficient for even this large show properly coopd and spaced, and that a superintendent accustomed to arranging first class shows would have put it all in here and had room besides to make many such special displays as are always relied on to add to the attractiveness of a modern poultry show.

Of course objections to the use of the Horticultural building for a poultry show can be made, just as objections have from the beginning been made to managing this show as other shows are managed. The fruit display was in this building at the time the poultry show was held. Perhaps, too, the managers would not consider such a thing. From first to last the ways of the managers of good poultry shows seem to have been the pet aversion of the managers of the St. Louis exposition. However, such obstacles as these were surmountable, or would have been had the interests of the poultrymen of America been in the hands of men with backbone enough to demand for poultrymen due and appropriate recognition of their industry, and force and diplomacy enough to get what they want. The only valid objection to putting the poultry in the Horticultural Building seems to be that the coops were more in harmony with the interior effects in the barns. Either that or those in charge of the coops were so properly ashamed of them that they wanted them in the darkest buildings on the grounds.

If I have dwelt at length on features that marred this show, it is because I feel that the best interest of all classes of poultrymen demand that shortcomings of such magnitude shall neither be glossed over for the sake of appearances or passed over in silence on account of those upon whom such criticisms reflect. With regard to the cooping it should be said further that I am reliably informed that Spratts Patent made concession after concession to the cooping committee until the last contract submitted offered to do the work for less than half the figures in the proposition read at the Rochester meeting, an offer which virtually amounted to giving the use of the coops free and charging only for food and attendance; with this they stipulated that they should be allowed space for a stand for the sale of their goods in one of the buildings, a stipulation to which the cooping committee either could not or would not agree. less to those whose relations with that most august body the board of managers of the St. Louis Exposition have bred in them a habit of unquestioning submission to the edicts of that body, all the reasons, excuses, and apologies offered for the conditions fanciers found at this show are good and sufficient, or seem so for the present. And doubtless with the complaisance which characterizes us easy going Americans in the mass, many will take at its face value the "official" vote of thanks, etc., which was secured from a meeting of exhibitors as a testimonial to their high appreciation of the efforts of those who in various capacities were responsible for the conduct of this show. But personal knowledge of the facts is too widely distributed for a made to order expression of sentiment to make any permanent impression, and the reader interested in the matter who may perhaps think this picture of conditions overdrawn will learn bit by bit things that will convince him that much more might have been said in criticism of the conduct of this show without approaching the limits.—John H. GOLD MEDAL ON INCUBATORS.

The gold medal was awarded the Cyphers Incubator Company, Buffalo, N. Y., at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, St. Louis, October 12, by the Superior Jury of Awards on the Standard Cyphers Incubators. A complete exhibit of these world-famous hatchers was made by the manufacturers in the Agricultural Building during the entire six months of the exhibit and a separate and still larger display of Cypers Incubators and brooders hatching and brooding hundreds of chicks was made in the Pavilion during poultry show dates, where thousands of visitors saw them in operation. The International Jury of Awards in awarding the gold medal to the Cyphers Incubator Company on its Standard machines pronounced them to be "practically perfect incubators," inasmuch as this was the only basis on which the gold medal could be awarded under the rules of the Exposition board of managers. Silver and bronze medals also were awarded.

The Complete Catalogue and Poultryman's Guide for 1905, to be issued by the Cyphers Incubator Company, the last forms of which are now being printed, (ready for mailing January 1) will contain twenty photographic reproductions of gold and silver medals awarded the Cyphers Incubators and brooders in England, Germany, Holland, Denmark, Belgium, Bohemia and other foreign countries. This book, which is to consist of 212 pages, 8x11 inches in size, and contain many interesting and valuable features relating to "Poultry Keeping for Profit," will be mailed free to those of our readers who will mention this paper when writing for a copy and will send the Cyphers Incubator Company at their home offices, Buffalo, N. Y., the names and addresses of two neighbors or friends who are interested in making money with fowls.

'Tis said the new manufactured eggs are hard to beat, and when just boiled, a hot proposition.

I recently saw described the farm, stock and method of one of New York state's best known farmers, stock raiser and poultryman. Besides doing a vast amount of public agricultural work, and increasing the general productiveness of his farm, he found time to evolve a prize winning strain of cattle, sheep, swine and poultry.

Having succeeded in all his numerous undertakings, the methods of such a member of our industrial world is worth studying.

Perhaps the main point is the fact that he bred animals and fowls that when shown were winners. Being a good judge himself, he selected foundations for his breeding operations that were successful from the start.

The above only illustrates the point sometimes overlooked: a poultryman must be a judge of quality himself, before he can appreciate the ability and calibre of his breeding pens.

The hen colony about New York is to have another $10,000 hen coop added to the list. James A. Bailey, the showman, who has contributed to the merriment of the masses on circus day the world over, is the man who seeks to rival Mrs. Howard Gould's hen palace.

It is always a pleasure to me to listen to German conversation, although my own Dutch is limited.

Two worthy Long Island truckers blew in on us the other day, and the tale they told in the tongue of the faderland about the perverseness of laying hens at this time of year, would draw sympathy from the Sphinx in Central Park.

Their tale of woe, after being put in English, was this: They had customers for fresh eggs, but a flock of three hundred head would not lay an egg. My eggs being stamped with the fancy name upon them, would queer their little private business for good and all. I was able to send them to an agg handler who would give them what they paid for, and unmarked, too.

A remark made by my visitors was only too true. They complained that in buying western poultry shipped to this market by the carload, alive, the loss by roup would destroy all chance of profit, besides inoculating the home flock with a brand of roup ten times worse than is ever contracted from contact with acclimated stock.

I admit it is a bad time of the year to buy live poultry. Several will, as my visitors said, be dead in the crate before you get them home, and a scourge of roup is a certainty.

But where a purchase is a necessity, try and make a selection from a freshly arrived car, and as soon as they get home, give each chicken a half teaspoonful of coal oil and keep them away from the other fowls. Rather a large dose, and a nasty one, but a winner and that is what counts. There is no remedy, either ancient or modern, that will act more quickly in both a preventative and curative sense. Perhaps there is distilled in the oil some of John Rockefeller's kindly benevolence, which will give a thousand to charity and squeeze ten million from the public through trade channels.

A writer, living in the vigorous climate of northern New York, does not advocate a policy of coddling and fussing to make his hens lay, but instead believes in warm, comfortable houses and good feed. Says a hen steping out of such a house in the snow does not have cold feet on the instant, but it is the hen already chilled or starved that weakens from the contact with snow.

The only Leghorn eggs we received early last winter came from a flock in northern New York that wasn't out of the house for four months.

Some salesmen attached to our wholesale egg houses here in the city ride to their work in automobiles.

Our hens are not working at present and do not need automobiles.

NEWARK SHOW.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

$300,000,000 IN POULTRY

Do you know that the government census of 1900 gives the value of the poultry produced in that year at very nearly $300,000,000? POULTRY SUCCESS, the 20th Century Poultry Magazine, is absolutely indispensable to every one interested in chickens, whether they be begnners, experienced poultry raisers or only keep a few hens. It is, without any question, the foremost poultry monthly in this country and readers of its articles on pure bred chicks and their better care and keeping have come to realize it is a plain truth, "There's money n a hen."

Regular subscription price 50 cents. 36 to 80 pages; beautifully illustrated, handsomely printed on fine book paper.

Special Introduction Offers: If you keep chickens or are in any way interested in them, we will send Poultry Success one year for only 25 cents and include a large illustrated practical poultry book free; or three months trial for three two cent stamps. Sample copy free. Address to-day.

Poultry Success Co., Dept. 17, Springfield, Ohio.

TWELFTH ANNUAL SALE.

We will have our Twelfth Annual Sale for the month of NOVEMBER of the World Wide Known Egg Producer,

BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC.

On account of the late Spring this year, there were less birds raised than ever before, so the demand for fresh laid eggs will be the greater.

To help supply this extra demand a little BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC in the morning mash will do the work. It starts the pullets laying early and keeps them laying all through the winter. It helps the old hens through moulting and gets them to laying before the very cold weather sets in.

Those who have used BANNER EGG FOOD AND TONIC once will never try anything else, as it does more than we say it will do.

The regular price is 1 lb., 25c; by mail 40c; or, 5 boxes, $1.00.

We will sell during the month of NOVEMBER only a 1 lb. box, 15c; by mail, 30c! or, 7 boxes $1.00, shipped via express or freight from New York.

This is a big saving to our customers, old and new, and those wishing to double their profits should take advantage of this special offer.

At these reduced prices, positively no orders filled before November 1st nor after November 30th.

We sell all kinds of POULTRY SUPPLIES and all are listed in our Immense Illustrated Poultry Supply Catalogue, mailed free. Send for one.

England's Big Event

Two Great Shows Held the Same Week at the Crystal Palace and Alexandra Palace, London—Comments of the Press.

We give below extracts from some of our English contemporaries of the two great shows held in London two weeks ago. The bitter rivalry existing between them has stirred the fancy abroad as it has never been stirred before. The outcome,while a surprise to even the management of the successful exhibitions, indicates forcibly the immense influence of a thoroughly aroused fancy fighting for what it claims as just and equitable rights to all, with favors to none and a determ. n to elevate the fancy to the high possible level. The Feathered World, in writing of the International Show held at Alexandra Palace, remarks:

The place of honor must this week be given to Mr. Thornton and the energetic band of workers who have proved that, despite the fact of other large shows clashing, the Fancy will rally to the support of a genuine effort on behalf of fanciers by fanciers. The waverers who shook their heads dubiously at the daring which ventured upon so effectual a protest against the conduct of the Crystal Palace authorities, must have been pleasantly surprised when they saw that the Alexandra Palace, with all its disadvantages as to site and drawback purely imaginary, by the way), had the magnificent total of 4,625 entries in poultry, as against some 2,550 at the Crystal Palace event, despite its traditions and prestige of thirty-six years.

The triumph was the subject of hearty congratulation by all who know how hard Mr. Thornton, his family, and the committee have worked before and also during the show for the success they so deservedly secured. Just as the F. W. goes to press comes the following note from Mr. Thornton,which speaks for itself:

Madam.—The success of our show has been so phenomenal that we are emboldened to ask again for the support of those clubs which are with us this year, and also for the co-operation of those clubs which, for unavoidable reasons, were not able to hold their club shows with us on this occasion. We shall not be satisfied until we have all the specialist clubs holding one huge show under our roof. We can accommodate all. Our sales have been good, nearly £700, and we have sold the record bird of the year in the Partridge Wyandotte cockerel bought to-day at auction for £165. This show will be held at about the same date next year, and I shall be glad to hear from club secretaries at once.—Yours faithfully, R. T. Thornton, Hon. Secretary.

B. B. RED GAME COCK
First at World's Fair, St. Louis, 1904.

Mr. Thornton's letter is welcome, as assuring the continuity of an exhibition, a win at which is thus proved to be the crowning event of the fancier's year. If the Pigeon Fancy but accept the invitation offered them last week, the International Show of 1905 might well hope to reach a total of five figures. Cannot Mr. Harrower, who with the Middlesex Columbarian holds the record for an exclusive pigeon show, join forces with Mr. Thornton,and give us an International Show of both poultry and pigeons? Cage-birds added would lend yet another interest to the exhibition and provide a pleasant gathering of all sections of the Fancy.

The following descriptions of varieties at the International we take from the Feathered World:

Faverolles (judge, Mr. Bradley).—Cock (7): 1, sp., Hawker, good muffing, sound greast, fair top color,shapely and large; 2, Green, more silvery hackle and back good breast, narrower body; 3, Upwood Farm, better shape body, not so good greast; 4, Rilot, nice shape, loses size; empty, Byrne. Hen (10): 1, Vale, good muffing, nice color, square shape body, rather narrow front; 2, Rilot, large, good head and color, more width of chest; 3, Byrne, good size and color, loses muffing; 4, Hawker large, good back and wing color, heavily muffed; r, Alcock, small thick-set hen. Cockerel (15): 1, Tucker, good size, sound breast, nice shape, deficient muff and beard; 2, Vale, long backed, Dorking type; 3, 4, Longworth, Dairy first, good breast, top color and shape the other lighter hackle and shoulder coloring, ugly comb, long back; 5, Rock, short on leg,good breast and head; 3, Hawker, good shape, breast and feet; vhc, Byrne. Pullet (16): 1, Alcock, taking fresh-looking pullet, good color and muffing, nice shape, good order; 2, Brown, the Dairy fourth, about in right place, excellent size and shape, too much comb, run light color; 3, 5, Vale, nice top color, smaller, fifth first Dairy, too washy color, now out of bloom; 4, Hawker, small, good breast front, nice top color. Black—Hen (10): 1, Vale, neat head points, glossy black, fair size; 2, 3, 4, Mrs. Jackson, second most lustre, third best muff and beard; r, Miss Edwards, shapely and well shown; empty, Woods; this first collection of the black variety did not seem to create a very favorable impression, they were thought to be too much like feather-legged. Orpingtons with the addition of muffing. Selling, 40s.—Cock (8): 1, Hawker, massive body, good feet and color; 2, Brown, very wide front, short legs, very heavily muffed; 3, Peters; 4, Longworth; r, Vale; hc, Middleton. Pullet (10): 1, Hawker, one of the long-backed type, good head points; 2, Peters; 3, r, Longworth, good color, narrow type of body; 4, Woods; vhc, Vale.

Lakenvelders (judge, Mr. J. P. W. Marx).—Cock (4): 1, Sandbach, good flow of feather, very stylish, fair hackles, clearest body color, comb twists badly at back; 2, Sandbach; smaller, not so clear in body, but denser hackle and tail; 3, Thorniley, good neck hackle and tail color, comb gone over; hc, Dyke. Hen (5): 1, Thorniley, clearest and whitest body, fair tail and neck; 2, Dyke, better neck hackles, creamy white; 3, Sandbach, not so good hackles nor so clear in body; hc, Bradbury, good neck hackle and tail, ticked on body. Cockerel (9): 1, two sps.. 3, Thorniley, clear body color and white neck, and tail nicely black, good style, the other loses saddle hackles; 2, Sandbach, good saddle, tail also good, not so clear on body as first; 4, Dyke, clear, pure white body, very fair neck and saddle; r, Graham, creamy body color, but densely black hackle, ticked on breast; hc, Shutt; c, Walop. Pullet (9): 1, Thorniley,pure white, good neck, fair tail; 2, Graham, fair neck hackles and tail, but not showing so much black; 3, Bradbury, best neck in class, fair tail, fails body color; 4, Halsted, fair tail and clear body, but a creamy white; r, Rilot; vhc, Sandbach; c, Walop.

Minorcas (judge, Mr. A. G. Pitts).—Without a doubt one of the finest collections of Minorcas ever seen at any show. It is gratifying to find the white variety provided for, although only five were entered. In both the open and novice classes the quality of the exhibits left little to be desired. Few of the birds were without cards. Mr. Knowles-Morgan swept the board with a really magnificent lot of birds, his winning pullet being ont of the best shown for many years. The judge's task must have been a difficult one. Cockerel (17): 1, sp., 2, Knowles-Morgan, first large comb with good, broad and even serrations, splendid lobes, good shape and texture, dark eyes, good legs and plumage, long,deep and shapely body, second younger,and not ready yet, grand shape of body and excellent carriage, lobes very shapely, and fine texture, comb well serrated, but weak; 3, Fursland Bros., tall and stylish, large shaped body, lobes of correct shape, comb with good wedge spikes; 4, Banfeild and Pearson, capital zody, good eyes, nice color, fair lobes and comb, lucky, we preferred r, Knowles-Morgan, grand body, shape and carriage nice color, lobes large, shapely and good substance,comb very straight and well cut, too much away from hackle; vhc, Ingold, nice quality, color and shape, well cut comb, lobes shapely but small; Hickton and Son, might have been in the money, grand pair of lobes, excellent comb, long shapely body, very stylish, the Dairy fourth; Eaton, capital body,nice color, good lobes, fair comb; Fordham, splendidly serrated comb, weak front, nice lobes, shapely and well furnished; hc, Webster, stylish, nice quality, good lobes. Pullet (15): 1, three sps., 2, 3, Knowles-Morgan, first really magnificent, as near the standard as possible, grand lobes of nice shape and texture, comb evenly and broadly cut, very depe, long and shapely body, nice colored plumage, legs and eyes, second comb nicely carried, with splendid serrations, grand carriage of body, not so big, very shapely lobes, third well cut comb, excellent lobes of good substance, long, but hardly so depe in body; 4, Fursland Bros., might have gone up one, comb well cut, excellent lobes, nice color, shapely and stylish; r, Hickton and Son, very fine quality and color, lobes of nice texture, tall and very stylish; vhc, Whitaker and Tootill, nice color, shape and carriage, medium lobes, comb deeply and broadly cut; Knowles-Morgan, beautiful-colored plumage, eyes and legs, nice lobes, comb not out; Smith, comb not out, but will make a good one, nice style; Fred Biggs, very nice comb and lobes, good shape, not a big one; Fordham, big body, good comb and color, fair lobes; hc, Fursland Bros., Renshaw, Mrs. Webster, Gibbins. White—Cock (5): 1, 4, Whitaker and Tootill, first pure colored, good comb, fair lobes, good carriage, not furnished, fourth very nice comb and lobes, good-colored plumage and legs; 2, Woodcock, capital comb, fair lobes, excellent carriage and plumage; 3, Webster, splendidly furnished, very nice lobes, shape, good carriage, comb not nicely serrated; r, Webster, splendid body, good lobes, pure color, well shown,fails comb. Novice—Cockerel (22): 1 Wildgoose, comb very nicely serrated, excellent lobes, good color, shape and carriage; 2, Brook, capital comb, nice lobes, good color and shape; 3, Granville Bros., might have won, comb straight and well cut, very nice lobes, excellent shape and carriage; 4, we missed; 3, Gorrill, good comb and color, fair lobes; vhc, Patterson, large deep body, good lobes, comb well cut, but shaky; Holgate and Nortcliff, very tall and stylish, splendid lobes, well serrated comb, spoiled by loss of a serration; Evans, capital comb, good lobes, weak on legs; Bignell, good comb and lobes; Marks, Saxton, Wilson, Sturch, grand bodied, excellent lobes, comb well cut, one serration short, or might have been in the money; Beavery, very good all round; Patterson, Lady Bickersteth. Pullet (16): 1, Beavor, tall and shapely, excellent color, comb well serrated, fair lobes; 2, Haslett, our choice for first very good, grand lobes, comb evenly cut and well carried long shapely body,just a little faulty in eye cere; 3, Renshaw, very pretty comb, well serrated, fair lobes, capital shape and carriage; r, Sturch, very nice colored plumage and eyes, comb well cut, but not out,shapely body; vhc, Smith, Howarth, Wildgoose, Haslett, Johnson nice quality; Dixon, very promising, excellent comb and color, not ready; hc, Evans, Sturch, another promising one; Hartley. Wyandottes (judges, Messrs. T. C. Heath and Wharton).—The United Club held their show in connection with this show. There was a record classification and entry, an average of about fifteen a class and thirty-seven classes provided. We never saw quality so good, many good birds being of necessity left out of the prize list, notably in silver pullets. Mr. Preston took the lion's share in the laced varieties, winning the silver pullet cup outright, also the 15 guineas trophy and two cups and special for best clean legged cock or cockerel in the show with his gold cockerel, unbeaten as yet. The gold Wyandotte cock of Mr. Preston wins challenge cup for best cock or cockerel, special for best laced Wyandotte, champion trophy best Wyandotte in show, special best clean-legged variety in the show, cup for best bird belonging to a subscriber, champion cup for best bird in the show. Silver—Cock (17): 1, Preston, beautiful laced breast, good bars, large size, fails bit on wing bows, hardly ready; 2, Bates, rich laced breast, good color and bars; 3, Muir Bros., good breast, nice color and head; 4, Henry, grand top nice breast and legs, good head, fails bars; r, Goldsmith; hc, Preston, Pickles, Holton, Russell, Ward (3). THE GREAT KANSAS STATE SHOW

The Kansas State Poultry Show is pleased to announce that the same liberal premiums as were offered last year will again be a drawing card for the sixteenth annual show to be held January 9-14. These prizes are: Gold medal first pen, $5.00 second pen, and $2.00 third; $2.00 first single bird, $1.00 second, and 50 cents third. Entry fee: Single birds only, 25 cents; pen $1.00 additional; same birds compete in singles and pens. The State of Kansas appropriates one thousand dollars,and all premiums are paid in cash, and promptly. Beautiful silk ribbons will be given for first, second and third prizes, and nicely printed cards for fourth and fifth, with words "Very Highly Commended," and "Highly Commended."

Four of America's leading judges will do the scoring, W. S. Russell, Ottumwa, Iowa; C. H. Rhodes, Topeka, Kan.; H. B. Savage, Belton, Texas; Adam Thompson, Amity, Mo. Mr. K. J. Muir, of Chicago, will judge the pigeons.

Topeka's beautiful eighty thousand dollar Auditorium will house the exhibit.

Last year this show had 2,975 specimens on exhibition, making the second largest show in the United States,Madison Square Garden alone exceeding it in entries. And 7,890 people paid to see the exhibition, often filling the hall to overflowing.

Come to the Kansas State Show and get in touch with the best birds and breeders in the United States. We will treat you right, you will get the most liberal cash premiums of any show in the United States, and you will be thankful you came.

Send for our grand premium list to J. W. F. Hughes, Secretaryfi Topeka, Kansas.

NATIONAL WHITE WYANDOTTE CLUB.

The executive committee of the National White Wyandotte Club has prepared the following big list of cash specials for the New York Show,where the annual meeting of the club will be held, the first week in January, 1905:

Cock—1st, $10; 2nd, $10; 3rd, $10; 4th, $10; 5th, $10.

Hens—1st, $10; 2nd, $10; 3rd, $10; 4th, $10; 5th, $10.

Cockerel—1st, $10; 2nd, $10; 3rd, $10; 4th, $10; 5th, $10.

Pullet—1st, $10; 2nd, $10; 3rd, $10; 4th, $10; 5th, $10.

Pen—1st $10; 2nd, $10; 3rd,$10; 4th, $10; 5th, $10.

Display—1st, $20; 2nd, $20; 3rd, $20; 4th, $20; 5th, $20.

The object of offering this fine list of specials is to make the White Wyandotte class the largest at this show, and the largest at any show this winter. To this end we wish to urge every member to send in a few birds,who can possibly do so. The entries at the New York Show are limited to 4,000 birds. We do not want any White Wyandottes to be left out, so urge you to write at once for a premium list to Mr. H. V. Crawford, Montclair, New Jersey, and get your entries in as soon as possible. Remember it will be a great reputation for the White Wyandottes to lead at this show, as they did at St. Louis, and your assistance is greatly desired.

The exact time of the annual meeting will be announced later.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1904.

The winter shows have begun in real earnest and there will be lively times ahead from now on.

Sanatoga, Pa., last week started off in fine shape in the Keystone state and to judge by the quality exhibited there it will take very good birds to win at the larger shows this season.

The large entries at the Herald Square Show, New York, this week, and the unusally fine exhibit at Danbury, Conn., at the same time indicate that fanciers are on the alert. These early shows are the forerunners of the big functions later on.

White Wyandottes are certainly enjoying a big boom. The National White Wyandotte Club offers 300 dollars in specials at the club show to be held at Madison Square Garden, New York, the first week in January. The details will befound in another column of this issue. This is "coming some," as the popular phrase of the day expresses it.

The efforts and hard work of Mr. Hallock, secretary of the above club, are directly responsible for the great popularity and big entries of White Wyandottes at our leading shows. We hope that this well-meant labor and enthusiasm will be rewarded in a manner that will reflect great credit and leave an unsullied reputation on the excellent club that has brought about this unparalleled popularity of a most magnificent variety of fowls.

We are still aware of the grand work accomplished by Secretary Mattison at the National Wyandotte Club of America in the past, and well remember the big cash specials annually offered at New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago, averaging four hundred dollars each year. The old club is barely alive to-day, but it would cut as wide a swath as ever, had not the personal ambitions and selfishness of a few destroyed the broad gauged policy and liberality that Mr. Mattison had formulated and carried out.

The danger in all these organizations is the crystallization or rather crystallization of power in the hands of a chosen few. The rank and file are sooner or later deprived of what they deem their just rights and then comes the inevitable distrust with attendant lack of interest and final loss of respect in the management.

It is the cliques that control the affairs of a club that bring it into disrepute. We had occasion not long ago, to call attention to an editorial in one of our English contemporaries, which rather severely but justly criticised the management of some of the specialty clubs and especially dwelt on the pernicious influence they exercised in the show room in regard to the selection of judges. We also said at that time, it was no idle dream and incidentally called attention to the fact that just such conditions existed in a smaller way in this country.

The methods pursued by some men to land a job of judging for a specialty club are remarkable for the audacity and utter lack of the fitness of things. It is a wheel within a wheel, so to speak. Even the most honorable members of a club are at times powerless to prevent the appointment of men that are either seeking free advertisement or have an object in view.

We are not inclined to be pessimistic and would prefer to shed rays of sunshine than drop clouds of trouble on the fancy. But facts are facts,and as such cannot be ignored.

Not long ago an old exhibitor and a well known fancier remarked to us: "Why cannot show managers select men to judge who are qualified to pass on their specialties regardless of good fellowship, club influence, etc. I have sent birds nearly every year to certain big shows, have taken the awards as made with complacency, but the limit is being reached when men with but a few years' experience in breeding fowls, and no particular record as exhibitors, are placed in charge of important classes. Why is this? I believe in specialty judges to a certain extent, but the judge mst be a master of his specialty and himself."

The above is only one of many comments we have heard and brings forcibly to mind the matter of judging heavy classes at important shows by specialty judges.

A man can pick out his best birds, put them in show condition and train them to the hour and carry off the coveted blue ribbon. Take the same man, place him in a show room and confront him with a strong class of his own favorites and the trouble begins. We have seen two of the best breeders of certain varieties of fowls, fail signally in picking the winners at one of the largest shows in America. They were completely rattled at the array of good birds, and being conscientious and honest, tried to do their best in the face of what they deemed criticism by the exhibitors. Had they to pick the best in a yard regardless of the fact that others would be interested, their judgment would have been swift and accurate. But they were worried and anxious in the showroom; consequently they became nervous and hesitated with the usual result, viz: They delayed their awards and thought it best to wait until the morning before they finally sent in their slips. The rest is obvious. This is a true picture of what we have seen and we can frankly say that years ago we felt just as these men did when placed suddenly in a similar position.

It takes experience, close study and everlasting be-at-it to gain the confidence necessary to handle big classes. Every honest and sincere judge will tell you that. The class of judges that depend on assurance and gall are not the kind to worry over such matters. They go it blind and very often succeed where the more nervous and conscientious man fails.

But the point we wish to make it: Show secretaries should be fanciers sufficiently posted and interested in the business to be able to pick the proper men to place the ribbons at their shows in the important classes especially. And they should have the nerve to announce their judges and the varieties they are to pass upon in the premium lists. It is th "only way."

Last year an amateur was selected to handle a most important class at a large show, because of his influence with the "powers that be." A few months prior to that show the same party had some of his birds disqualified for having the wrong colored shanks and feet at a show he exhibited at. And yet such men "butt in" where qualified men are barred out!

The best of judges make mistakes; the judge that does not is a freak. But the mistakes of an experienced judge are errors of judgment in tight places as a rule; not gross ignorance of the laws that govern quick and impartial judgment of unfair and disqualified birds.

The average exhibitor is honest. We have known him many years. Met him under all sorts of conditions and in all sorts of places. And to his credit be it said that never will he kick or squeal over a decision made by a judge he thinks is competent and thorough in his work. He may differ with him and in this he has a right to. Every man is entitled to his opinion and we have noticed that such an exhibitor as we refer to and there are many more, is ever ready to receive the judge in a decent manner, provided the judge is man enough to meet him on the same terms and discuss the situation or the awards.

It is a pleasure to both to "have it out" in the true spirit. The judge owes his explanation to the exhibitor who advances his opinion in a true sportsmanlike manner. There can never be ill-feeling betwene honest judges and exhibitors. As for the other kind, if they exist, silence is the only remedy.

* * *

We have gone into the above at more than the usual length simply because it is a very timely and burning topic. Much has been said in private that reflects on the judging and the exhibitors, judge and exhibitor being scored alike; matter has been allowed to see printers' ink reflecting on the integrity of officials and judges that a cleaning up of the atmosphere will do some good. And the sooner we know where we are at in this business the better.

* * *

We desire to call especial attention to a paragraph written by the editor of the Feathered World, England, re the International Show held at London, which, with other notes, is found on our title page. We refer to the following: "The place of honor must this week be given to Mr. Thornton and the energetic board of workers who have proved that, despite the fact of other large shows clashing, the Fancy will rally to the support of a genuine effort on behalf of fanciers by fanciers." It is the part of that sentence that should be burned into the souls of show managers. Fanciers support shows and make them pay, if that is in the contract. But a management must cater to the mass and not to a class of fanciers to maintain respect and influence.

The Premium List of the Madison Square Garden show is ready. In poultry we find that several new classes have been added, which will be very much appreciated by breeders of these varieties. Any one interested who has not received a Premium List should not fail to send for one. Address the secretary, Mr. H. V. Crawford, Montclair, N. J.

TO MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN BLACK MINORCA CLUB:

This is to give notice, that by a vote of the board of directors, our next annual meeting is to be held with the Boston Show, Thursday, Jan. 19, 1905, at 2:30 p. m., and it is desired that every member who possibly can will attend this meeting, as officers are to be elected and business of importance is to be transacted. It is to the interest of members to begin now to prepare to bring out a large exhibit. The Boston

Show will be the largest of the winter, and the best attended by wealthy buyers, hence the best show at which to sell stock and eggs, and premiums won at Boston, are among the best advertisements a breeder can have.

It is with reluctance that I ask for specials so soon after the club has responded liberally to a similar appeal for the World's Fair, but I believe it is for the interest of every member to make the list as attractive as possible, so that the Minorca Class at Boston will have prominence among other varieties. We have some specials donated already, which have been offered without solicitation, by members who donated liberally for the World's Fair, thus I am confident that others will wish to help, and I take this way to give them an opportunity. I hope everyone who receives this will give it attention and donate according to circumstances. All help will be appreciated and used to the best advantage of all who are interested in making the Black Minorcas the highest valued and most sought of all fowls. Please send specials at once, as they must be here before Dec. 3rd to have a place in the Boston premium list, and I wish to publish them in as many journals as possible before the entries close.

This is probably the last letter I shall address to club members as its president, having already held that office one year longer than I wished. The club is fortunate in having many members who are well qualified for this office, and I believe frequent changes are desirable to increase interest, therefore I ask members to come to the meeting prepared to release me, and elect a new president, and I take this time to thank the club as a whole and each member separately for the excellent assistance they have given me during the past three years while I have endeavored to serve the club impartially and to the best interest of its entire membership.

Should this letter fall into the hands of any member whose dues have not been paid to date, I hope it will not be laid aside until one dollar has been sent to W. B. Davis, Dover, N. H., to perpetuate the sender's membership, that this year may be a record-breaker in not recording a single member as dropped for non-payment.

Hoping that this last call for substantial co-operation will meet the usual prompt and generous response which has characterized such solicitations in the past,and assuring you that the club stands at the head of all specialty clubs in the friendly relation of its members to each other, and in its ability to advance the interests of the noble breed which it advocates, I am,

Fraternally yours,
GEORGE H. NORTHUP, Pres.
Raceville, N. Y., Nov. 22nd, 1904.

SANATOGA, PA.
November 22-26.

The eleventh annual exhibition of the Sanatoga and Schuylkill Valley Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association opened November 22nd, at the Pavilion, Sanatoga Park, a beautiful summer suburb and resort of Pottstown, Pa.

The building is an ideal one for a poultry show, being large and well lighted.

The first and second days of the show were devoted to judging the poultry and the building was closed to all except the judges and officers. It was a very welcome innovation and greatly appreciated by the judges, who could do their work quietly and without the crowded interference at most shows of this class while judging is in progress. It was a distinct advance in the method of conducting shows in this section.

Supt. Scheffy was a hard and faithful worker and we are indebted to him for much of the pleasure in handling the birds. But Sec. Kurtz and all the rest of the officials were in the same class, working hard and for the best interests of the show.

The sturdy honesty of purpose to have this show judged on time and without any possible reflection on the management in giving each and every exhibitor fair play, is to be very highly commended. We know whereof we speak.

The birds on exhibition, barring very few classes, were of the very best quality and in some varieties far above the average.

Space forbids detailed descriptions, but a general resume leads us to state that in the Barred Rocks, a strong class, the quality was very good. First and second cocks strictly first class, first hen a beautifully barred bird and splendid in color, with second and third good enough to show anywhere. First cockerel one of the evenest colored and best barred birds we have seen this season; second well shown, fine shape, comb and head, but lacks character in barring and evenness of color; third, a beauty in barring and color, but raw and undeveloped in shape. Pullets brought out a string of fine ones, first being similar to hen that won the big prize. First pen a very fine lot of birds.

Buff Rocks strong, first and second cocks being full of quality, although heavy in moult; hens not at their best. Cockerels fine, first winning on shape, size, head points and evenness of surface color; second will beat him later on. Pullets an elegant lot with little choice between the first three. First pen very even in color. White Rocks few, but had a fine old bird in the first cock and hen and two very promising cockerels.

Wyandottes weak in Silvers and Goldens as far as numbers are concerned, with a few goods ones in the money. Partridge and Silver Pencilled, while short in numbers, were good in quality, especially latter. White Wyandottes were fine, first cock being a grand typical bird, white as snow, first and second hens also up to a high standard. In cockerels, first was a beautiful bird in Wyandotte type and character, a small, neat, nicely shaped comb, set on a true Wyandotte head, a finely curved neck and back, deep and broad breast, fine yellow legs and feet, made a distinct impression on all who saw him. In plumage he was not ripe, showing greenness of feather that detracted somewhat from the soundness of the white plumage, but having white quills and being shy a moult or two of his real farm. We believe he will come out a hard one to beat at any show later on. Second and third cockerels were white in plumage, large in size, but lose in type. Pullets very good as was first pen.

Leghorns strong in numbers, Single Comb Browns bringing out a fine lot, notably cockerel heading first pen, the best cockerel being disqualifid for a very little white in face. Some excellent Rose Comb Browns were shown. Single Comb White Leghorns filled many coops and brought out some very fine specimens, notably the first three hens, first and second pullet and the first and second cockerels. The latter two were Leghorns all over, the first being well furnished with a full tail and white plumage and of typical shape, comb good, but a trifle too large; second a younger bird with a solid five pointed comb, set squarely on head without fold or corinkle, strong, clean lobe, good shape, but minus sickles and full of green feathers. With more age will be the best in the bunch. Pens all good. Rose Comb Whites very strong, first cockerel, first and second pullets and first pen being stars.

Buff Leghorns were fine in quality, notably first cock, cockerel, hen, pullet and pen. Black Leghorns averaged fairly well in quality.

Asiatics were not numerous, but of good quality. The same might be said of Minorcas.

Bantams brought out some fine ones in Game line and a notably good lot of White Cochin, a few very good Buff Cochins with several other varieties fairly well represented.

Female (6): 1, r, Cook and Sons; 2, Bull; 3, Eadson; hc, Lindner.

Malays. Judge, Mr. E. A. Parish. Cockerel (11): sp, 1, Dennis, tall and shapely, grand head and color, rich legs; 2, Eaves, hardly such a good head, somewhat rough feather, and smutty feet, good otherwise; 3, vhc, Huxtable, very good front, A1 shape, grand head and legs, beaten a trifle by color; 4, hc, Milner, a wee bit raw, but a good one indeed; r, Rowse; vhc, Cock; absent, Dennis, Frayn. Pullet (12); 1, vhc, Dennis, rare front, grand shoulders and type, excellent head,color, and legs; 2, Eaves, good throughout, hardly such a cruel expression, and somewhat smutty feet; 3, Forey, grand body and color, would have won had her centre toes been straight; 4, Milner, beaten by shoulders and brows, good type and color, rich legs; r, Hoskin; vhc, Rowse; hc, Huxtable, Olver.

Frizzles, not bantams. Judge, Mr. G. Feyner. Any age, either sex (8): 1, 3, Edwards, whites, 1st a big rosecombed cock, rich clean legs, fair curl, slightly yellow neck and wings, 3rd a well curled single combed hen, yellow tinged hackle, rich clean shanks; 2, vhc (2), Purdon, a typical black single combed hen, yellow tinged hackle, rich clean shanks; 2, vhc, (2), Purdon, a typical black single combed hen, rather out of form; r, Miss Marshall.

Any Other Distinct Variety. Judge, Mr. J. P. W. Marx. Male (11): 1, Hastings, big shapely sheeny Creve Coeur, good crest, grand comb, A1 feather; 2, 4, Smits, 2nd a black Polish,good shape and sheen, clean typical crest, very nice style. 4th a blue Polish, very good color and marking, bit weak towards the thighs, fair crest; 3, Beardsley, a really grand Scots Grey, rather dusky feet; r, Rev.Horner; vhc, Thomas,Mrs. Clements, Pendlebury. Female (8): 1, Thomas, a first class Creve Coeur; 2, Rev. Horner, a good crested gold Polish; 3, Gonegall, a typical Scots Grey, rather dark hackle; 4, Pendlebury,catalogued as a "pure blue rosecomb," no doubt mistaken by the judge for a "foreigner"; r, hc, Smits; hc, Mrs. Williams; c, Matthews.

THE ORPINGTON CLUB'S ELEVENTH ANNUAL SHOW. Judges, Messrs. Hew Crawford (rosecomb and selling), and V. B. Johnstone. There was an excellent turnout in this section, and the average of just over twenty-four almost equalled that of the buffs. The champion trophy for the best Orpington in the show went to the Rev. F. Sutton Dodd's black hen, but this was not altogether a happy selection in the minds of Oprington fanciers, many fancying Mrs. Wilkinson's buff cockerel or Mr. Preston's buff pullet. However, there is no gainsaying the fact that the black hen is a good one. Black Single Comb cock (18): 1,

SPECIAL 1905 ANNOUNCEMENT

CYPHERS INCUBATOR COMPANY

GRANT M. CURTIS President.

To the Interested Public.—

More Progress has been made in the past 15 months since the new management has had charge of Cyphers Incubator Co. than was accomplished in all previous years. A large claim, but we challenge close investigation. Notice the following improvements in the 1905 pattern of Standard Cyphers Incubators.

1. A right-angle lamp bracket, attachable without screws, self-locking, and which cannot be misplaced.
2. A rigid-bowl, seamless bottom lamp that will not "buckle" and cannot leak.
3. A solderless heater of heavy galvanized iron, tightly riveted to light-weight, gray iron castings, and guaranteed smoke-proof.
4. Mechanically perfected quadruple-action Thermostat, with increased power and more sensitive bearings.
5. Removable top diaphragm, so that upper felt can be dusted, cleaned and aired should occasion demand.
6. "Split" or double lower diaphragm; so that burlap chick nursery floor can be removed, washed, aired, replaced and space between burlap and felt quickly cleaned.
7. Positively uniform ventilation and equable temperature in all parts of the hatching chamber.
8. Better Materials, because more carefully selected, and better Workmanship because more critically supervised.

The Foregoing is Guaranteed.

But that is not all. With all these improvements added we have reduced the cost of production and have reduced the price of the machine accordingly, making a double victory for our patrons. Never were the Cyphers Incubators so good—never was the price so low. In the case of the this saves our customers from 12½ % on the smallest size to more than 20 % on the largest size. Our catalogue and guide tells the story. Sent free on request.

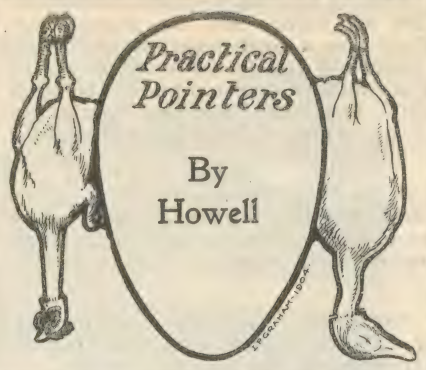
Gold Medal and Highest Honors were awarded the Standard Cyphers Incubator by the Superior Jury of International Judges at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, they declaring this "A Perfect Incubator."

TWO LOW PRICED INCUBATORS have been placed on the market by the Cyphers Company for the season of 1904-1905. These are strictly practical hatchers, built for those who cannot afford a Standard Cyphers.

FARM-ECONOMY 100 egg capacity. All complete, $10.00. Guaranteed to be a safe, practical hatcher. Stands waist high and every feature and attachment of the right principle and best quality. See 1905 catalog.



"BOYS CHOICE" INCUBATOR, 50 egg capacity—all complete, $6.50. A practical, well constructed hatcher. Just the thing to keep boys and girls at home, interested and profitably employed. 1905 catalog for full information; see opposite page.

(Concluded Next Week.)

Mr. Howell, associate editor of The American Fancier, will furnish weekly reports on the egg and poultry market and answer all questions submitted to him relating to commercial and practical poultry keeping. When replies are requested to be sent by letter, stamps must be enclosed and letters addressed to George E. Howell, 70 Christopher St., New York City.

Eggs.—Receipts for week, 38,400 cases. The supply of fresh gathered is no larger than last week. Storage is being pushed on the market to a greater extent. The supply of southwestern is more liberal, but of a disappointing quality. We quote nearby fancy selected, 36 to 38c. per dozen; choice grades, not equal to first quotations, 32 to 35c.; fancy mixed, 30 to 32c.

Western close graded fancy, 30c.; average shipments, 29c.; Kentucky, 21 to 29c.; Tennessee, 20 to 26c.; refrigerator, 21½ to 22c.; dirty eggs, 17 to 19c.; cracked eggs, 14 to 17c.; limed, 19 to 21c.

Live Poultry.—Receipts, 55 cars. The expected heavy trading for Thanksgiving was only partially realized. Prices, however, held fairly well, with a slight drop on fowls and turkeys. The latter were in greater supply than was anticipated and turkey was served Thanksgiving day in many homes, which at one time in the week the cry of war prices had discouraged the purchase of the national bird. We quote chickens 11c. per lb.; fowls, 11c.; turkeys, 15c.; western ducks, 80 to 90c. per pair; southern, 60 to 75c.; western geese, $1.62 to $1.75 per pair; southern, 1.25 to $1.50; pigeons, 20c. per pair.

Dressed Poultry.—25,176 packages. Jersey, Maryland and Delaware fresh killed turkeys, dry picked, average best run, 20 to 21c.; fair to good, 17 to 19c.; western, 15 to 18c.; spring chickens, Philadelphia, 8 to 9 lbs. to pair, per lb., 19 to 20c.; mixed sizes, 14 to 16c.; other Pennsylvania, 7 to 8 lbs. to pair, fancy, per lb., 14 to 15c.; State and Pennsylvania, mixed sizes, 12 to 13c.; Pennsylvania, under 5 lbs. to pair, 10 to 11c.; western, broilers, dry picked, fancy, 14 to 15c.; 8 lbs. and over to pair, large roasters, 11½c; average best, 10½ to 11c.; Ohio and Michigan, scalded, fancy, 12c.; average run, 10c.; other western, 8 lbs. and over to pair, scalded, fancy, 11c.; average best, 10c.; southern dry picked, 10c.; scalded, 10 to 11c.; inferior, 8 to 9c.; fowls, western, dry picked, 5 lbs. and over each, per lb., 12½c.; dry picked, average best, 12c.; Ohio and Michigan, scalded, 10 to 10½c.; other western, scalded, 12½c.; southwestern, scalded, 11 to 12c.; spring ducks, western, 14 to 17c.; spring geese, eastern, white, per lb., 16 to 17c.; dark, 14 to 15c.; Maryland, 13 to 14c.; squabs, prime, large white, per dozen, $2.75; mixed, $2.25 to $2.37; dark, $1.75 to $2.

The up-to-date shipper is quick to notice any change in price of the commodity he traffics in, and to rush or retard his products as the market goes up or down.

Where a standing order is given, or a contract made, the price does not, or ought not, to affect the fulfillment of the contract.

That the importance of a market guide is appreciated in journalism is attested by the fact that hardly a paper in the country, big or little, but what gives market quotations on the different necessities and luxuries of life. The scholar that will not learn when the lesson is put in his hand is a traitor to his own interests. Further, the great importance of placing on the market a superior article is but half-way appreciated by the grower.

Perfection only is wanted; the perfect goods bring the money. Some doubter says, how are we to overcome the thousand and one obstacles that are placed in our way when we try to produce the perfect article you demand? Learn, study, and profit by former failures. If the market was sought too late, be sure and get the next shipment in on time. If a blunder was made in the package or the packing, start right and act right on the next lot. Remember, the good price is always at the top, and there is always room at the top.

Things have reached a pretty pass when an editor of a poultry paper cannot judge a show because he might favor the birds of an advertiser in his paper. A judge dare not keep hens because he might favor some of his own strain of birds in the show room. An editor of a poultry paper must give no credit to a breeder, unless he is not an advertising patron, else he will be accused of giving a free advertisement. The only way to satisfy all is to hire only such aspirants as can prove their postoffice address is unknown to the world. Those making a failure as judges can be drafted into the editorial ranks, while the ultra-dumb can be pressed into the service as correspondents.

The poultry house floor will merit more of the poultryman's attention now that the Arctic days of winter have superceded the balmy summer days, and the fowls spend the time in the houses in search of warmth and shelter. The board floor is the warmest and dryest, therefore, from a sanitary standpoint the best, but the question of rats is an important one, where there is a hiding place, and as an extra inducement to colonize—grain, there is bound to be rats, and rats are destructive. They gnaw holes in the floor, and a mink or weasel follows the rat through the hole, when a terrible destruction of one's poultry is sure to follow, a loss only equalled by the continual daily plundering of grain by the rats.

The cement floor is rat and vermin proof and the practical floor for long buildings, but it must be well covered with litter and the litter changed often enough to avoid dampness, else rheumatism and cramps will turn your hen house into a fowl hospital.

For short buildings, the board floor, raised a couple of feet from the ground, is my ideal of the perfect floor. Here again the litter plays an important part by counteracting the effect of winter zephyrs that play about in this weather under the floor.

It is for this reason this plan does not work so well with long buildings. Unless a windbrake is put in every twenty feet, the wind would rush around with such violence it would carry an old hen off her feet in less time than it takes the currents that play around the Flatiron building to demolish an umbrella.

You all know the style of floors in your buildings. I have stated the defects in each. I hope the hints contained herein will be of value to some brother.

...Suggestions for Poultry Profits...

Eggs and Poultry are both commanding a higher price to-day than ever before, and for this reason, if for no other, you should supply your fowls with the best obtainable foods for a satisfactory output of eggs. In feeding poultry it is wise to bear in mind that the cheapest food is not that which COSTS THE LEAST, but rather that which gives the BEST RESULTS. Your poultry should not only be supplied with good and sufficient food, but also the Kind of Food that is Adapted to the Purpose for which the fowls are kept. Start your chicks with

BROWN'S BUDGET.

By G. O. Brown, Associate Editor.

It is time to call a half on some poultry breeders who are selling birds on their (the breeders') reputation. "What's in a name?" A record of prize winnings does not give a man license to send out inferior specimens at superior prices. But some breeders apparently think so. These remarks are prompted on account of some very poor * * * specimens we recently saw in Georgia which had been sold at long prices.

Poultry shows are educators, whether they are score card or comparison. There are a good many poultry shows being held now in the southern states. The southern fanciers know what they want, and when they pay long prices they don't want birds short in quality.

Some Georgia raised birds we recently handled at the Augusta show were fine specimens, and their breeding reflected credit to the owners.

The poultry industry—both the fancy and commercial sides—are rapidly expanding in the southern states.

The south has the advantage over the northern poultryman, as the hens can have pasture every month in the year.

Return egg crates along the lines of the southern railroads is an object lesson in contrast with the fact that only a few years ago these same railroads advertised on their menu cards that all poultry products served at meals were from New York state.

The man who advocates "clean the hen house at least once a week" is advising a method one seventh as cleanly as it should be.

Women are more successful with poultry raising than men. It is because they are neater and more tidy, have more feeling, and consequently look out more carefully for the comfort of their flocks. Many a man who goes to the shows and wins premiums on birds, doesn't deserve any credit for their good condition. A careful, ambitious and thorough-going woman has been the power behind the throne—but the men won't admit the fact.

Talking one time with a man he admitted that his wife looked after the chickens entirely. He admitted also that she even made the coops to ship the birds in that were sold. He told me at a show where his birds were winners, and I told him he should stay home and take care of the babies, and let his wife attend the shows and have a holiday.

I note that there were about 30 women who exhibited fowls at the St. Louis World's Fair. There are many women engaged in the industry. It is an occupation especially suited for a woman who is not afraid of a little work. The out-door exercise is a health promoter, and the business of a character especially inviting—as the real enjoyment women get out of it proves. Love of an occupation is half of the troubles overcome to start with.

The tameness of a flock is quite an index of the character of the owner. The condition the premises are kept in will often illustrate the class where the man belongs, whether he is a fancier, a cross between a fancier and a farmer, or just a "huxter." The fancier insists on strict cleanliness, the second named is satisfied with once in a while having the premises in a presentable condition; the huxter is satisfied with any old condition, as long as the fowls don't die before he can kill them.

The delay in the new Standard illustrates how to make haste slowly. The delay is causing those who have taken orders considerable annoyance, as they are unjustly blamed for not sending out the books. Brother Sewell should get a wild and woolly west hustle on him.

"Three hundred dollars" not enough, eh, for the secretary of the A. P. A. Still the woods are full of competent poultrymen for the position who would fill the office with honor and find plenty of time to attend carefully to all the duties. "Go slow and learn to paddle."

There should be some method so that all members could vote on important questions. Too often the membership of the American Poultry Association at the annual meetings is composed of the president and secretary and a few local members from where the place of meeting is. In no sense is the meeting representative of the members, geographically or otherwise. However, legislation, often of a very important character, takes place. There should be some way so that there could be expressions recorded of members who desired to be heard on any important question, and who are unable to be present at the annual meetings. It takes too few members to make a quorum.

DATES CHANGED—CHICAGO.

In order to secure what we consider, viewed from every standpoint, the best exhibition hall in the country, we are obliged to change the dates for our next show to December 10th to 19th, 1904.

The location we have been able to secure is right in the heart of the business district, convenient to all surface and elevated lines, an advantage that will mean a heavy paid attendance, which is of so much benefit to the exhibitor. Our cash and special prizes are as liberal as those offered at any show, and the entry fee remains the same, $1.00 per head for poultry, and 50 cents for pigeons.

The stock with which we are favored will be passed upon by a long list of prominent judges, insuring an intelligent placing of awards, and justice to all. We extend a cordial invitation to the bredeers and fanciers of the world to show with us, and in return promise them treatment that we are confident will prove entirely satisfactory, and secure their future support. For premium list, giving full list of prizes, both cash and special, please address the secretary, C. A. Damon, Morgan Park, Illinois. Fraternally yours,

Chicago Poul. & Pet Stock Assn.

THE CINCINNATI SHOW.

The Cincinnati Poultry and Pet Stock Association will hold their seventh annual show at Music Hall, Cincinnati, Ohio, January 17 to 21, 1905. After six successful seasons in which the entries have steadily increased, they are in better shape than ever to offer inducements to fanciers and breeders to attend this exhibition, and have arranged their premiums on a liberal basis. The entrance fee remains the same as last year, and includes cooping and feeding. All coops will be of uniform pattern and the show will be arranged in classes.

Music Hall is well arranged for exhibiting poultry, pigeons and all pet stock, and is easily reached from all parts of the city. The attendance has increased each year, and with the recent rapid growth, Cincinnati promises to become one of the best show cities in the west.

More interest is being taken each year by local fanciers and the membership in the association has doubled since last year. The judges secured are Charles McClave, F. C. Shepherd and S. B. Johnson, and negotiations are pending with several others, and there will be a full corps of competent judges to pass promptly on all exhibits.

Premium lists will be ready early in December, and will be mailed about December 10. Fanciers not receiving them will confer a favor by sending in their names to the secretary, A. E. Brooks, S. W. Cor. 7th and Freeman, Cincinnati, Ohio.

INCUBATOR PRICES REDUCED.

The Cyphers Incubator Company Makes an Important Announcement at the Opening of the Season.

Phenomenal Growth of This Company's Business — European Headquarters Opened—Also Two New Branch Houses Started in This Country.

An announcement of importance to the poultry industry in general comes from Mr. Grant M. Curtis, President of the Cyphers Company. It is to the effect that beginning December 1st, this company will make reductions in the prices of the improved Standard Cyphers Incubators, ranging from 12½ per cent. on the smallest size to more than 20 per cent on the largest size. (See pages five and six of this issue of The American Fancier for the Cyphers Incubator Company's large display advertisements announcing this reduction in prices and describing the important mprovements made in the construction of these popular incubators for the season of 1905).

Speaking of this reduction in prices, Mr. Curtis states: "We not only have reduced the prices, but are making a better incubator to-day than ever before. We can afford to do this. First, because of the phenomenal growth of the company's business during the past two seasons, enabling us to equip our factory with every labor-saving device asked for by expert mechanics, resulting not only in improved goods, but also effecting a great saving in the cost of manufacturing; second, because of increase in the capital stock of the company and the introduction of improved methods of doing business. The company is now saving a good deal of money in the purchase of materials by purchasing in very large quantities, paying spot cash and availing itself of every possible discount. We have decided that all this saving should go to our customers—hence the reduction in prices.

"We have gone still further this year to meet the demand for a popular priced incubator, by placing on the market two new machines. 'Farm Economy,' capacity 100 eggs, which we shall sell at $10,and 'Boy's Choice,' a 50-egg size, for $6.50. We are confident these incubators will meet with a large sale among persons who feel they cannot afford the Standard Cyphers. They are good, practical hatchers—not so good as our Standard make, but better, we think, than can be bought elsewhere at equally low prices."

Phenomenal Business Last Season.

"We had," writes Mr. Curtis, "a phenomenally successful season ending June 30, 1904, and everything indicates, so far as we are able to judge, that 1905 will far surpass it. Our good season the past year was particularly gratifying to us, not alone on account of the business done, but because it left us in a position to serve our customers to better advantage in the future. Our line of manufactures for 1905 is now complete and embraces not only several important improvements in our standard goods, but the addition of several new articles that we believe poultrymen will welcome and appreciate.

"Advance sheets of our new 212-page Catalogue and Guide for 1905 will be ready for mailing December 10th. These advance sheets will be mailed free to all interested persons who ask for them. They will be followed January 1st by copies of the complete book, which will also be sent free, postpaid, to all readers of your paper who will send us the names and addresses of two friends or neighbors who are interested in making money with poultry. The advance sheets referred to contain a complete illustrated description and all 1905 prices of our manufactures—which now embrace more than seventy different articles needed by poultrymen who mean business."

European Headquarters and Two New York Branches.

A significant indication of the growing importance of the poultry business at large is found in the rapid growth of the Cyphers Incubator Company's business. During the past few months this Company has established European headquarters at 121-123 Finsbury Pavement London, E. C. in charge of Mr. Wm. A. True as managing director, and has opened branch houses in Kansas City and San Frncisco. In Kansas City, the Cyphers Company has leased, for a long term of years, a complete milling plant consisting of 30,000 square feet of floor space to be used in the production of the Company's complete line of balanced ration poultry foods,and the manufacture of Alfalfa and Clover products. Referring to this recent expansion, Mr. Curtis says:

"Our trade in Europe, in the Central West and on the Pacific Coast has increased at such a rate that we found these new branches necessary if we are to handle our business properly and satisfactorily. For instance, we have general agents in most of the important trade centers on the continent of Europe and were compelled to get closer to them. We not only have opened general offices in London for the transaction of our European business, but also have arranged to manufacture Cyphers Incubators, Brooders and other bulky goods at Poole, in Dorsetshire, where a branch factory has been erected expressly for this purpose. This will enable us to fill our European orders in shorter time and with less expense.

"Our Kansas City Branch serves a double purpose: First, it places our goods closer to our trade in the Central West and Southwest, thus saving our customers both time and freight, and also locates our mill for the manufacture of poultry foods and Alfalfa and Clover products in the world's largest primary grain and alfalfa market—in the very heart of the source of supply of the raw materials—and this will enable us to manufacture a first class article at the lowest prices practicable. This mill will be in operation by December 15th. The installation of machinery began November 10th, and has progressed rapidly. It will be the largest and best equipped poultry food and alfalfa mill in the world, devoted exclusively to poultry food specialties.

"This expansion, which became necessary in handling the company's large business, is, of course, very gratifying to our company, but aside from that we look upon the phenomenal business enjoyed by us last year as a matter of encouragement to the entire poultry industry. When we consider a business that has developed as the Cyphers Company's business has developed—with its six branch houses that are complete poultry supply stores, now located in London, New York, Boston, Chicago, Kansas City and San Francisco, and its agencies in the most important cities of every civilized country on the globe, with its more than four hundred factory and office employes and a volume of sales that would have been thought impossible two years ago—when we consider all this, there is a good, strong, solid industry back of these important facts. This Company's present large business is possible only because of the magnitude, progress and prosperity of the poultry industry taken as a whole.

Cyphers Company's Business Policy.

"It has been our aim in building up the Cyphers Incubator Company to place it on a strong and solid foundation—to have our trade come to us in such a manner that it will stay with us year after year. When we started in business nine years ago we manufactured two articles only—an incubator and brooder. To-day this company manufactures more than seventy different articles, incubators and brooders included, for the poultrymen's use, and it is our desire to have all of them as near perfection as it is possible for human skill to produce. 'Boiled down and skimmed off,' the present ambition of every man who is contributing his lifework to developing the business of the Cyphers Incubator Company may be summed up in the following words: The manufacture of a complete line of the best goods for poultrymen at the lowest prices consistent with such quality as will meet the requirements.

"As for our 1905 Catalogue, it will be ready January 1st—not a day earlier nor a day later. We are now booking names for it. This book will surpass in appearance and subject matter the best of our past efforts. It will consist of 212 pages and cover, 8x12 inches, and contain more than 500 illustrations, including about 150 recent portraits of the best-known authors, fanciers, poultry judges, professors of poultry husbandry, proprietors of successful poultry plants, editors of poultry journals, etc. There will also be six special chapters devoted to poutry keeping for profit, telling how to use incubators, why they should be unsed, how to brood and feed chicks, etc., etc."

Their Success is Merited.

It is a pleasure for us to record the success of the Cyphers Incubator Company, because it is merited. The business of this Company has grown because the men in charge have made it a rule to give their customers good value, prompt service and fair treatment. In all the years this Company has been advertising in this journal, we have never known it to fail to satisfy any one of our subscribers who has become a customer of the company. Mr. Curtis has associated with him more than a dozen recognized experts and earnest workers in different departments of poultry work—men of standing and reputation in the poultry world. What they do, they do thoroughly, and upon a proper, we believe we should say, upon a scientific basis. Take for example, their poultry foods. These foods are not mixed in a hap-hazard manner, but are compounded in strict accordance with a chemical analysis of each of the various grains, seeds, etc., used in their composition, and the finished product in each case is put up in sealed bags, thus insuring delivery of the genuine article into the hands of the Company's customers. The experimental work of the business of the Cyphers Company is now an important factor. Constant study and many tests are being made in laboratory work, with the object of rendering the incubation of eggs and the brooding of chicks more certain and less expensive. It is not altogether a matter of business with these men; they take a just pride in their work. They are putting heart into what they do and the whole poultry world will profit by their work and progress. We shall await the Cyphers Company's new catalogue with much interest. Meantime such persons as are in haste to secure information regarding their incubators, brooders and poultry supplies will do well to send for this year's catalogue, a few of which are still on hand.

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

Herald Square

New York's First Large Show Draws Great Entries and Is Well Attended == Big Number of Exhibitors.

The first of the two great shows to be held in New York city came to an end December 3 at 10 p. m., after a week's run. It proved an artistic success in many ways, and created a thoroughly good feeling among exhibitors all along the line.

There was noticeable the confidence among the younger exhibitors that they were being recognized and classed with the old veterans. The old timers turned out in goodly numbers, and were met by an array of younger exhibitors. That made competition exceedingly lively, but withal good nature reigned except in a few rare instances, where several old timers clashed, and matters got so very warm that the judge was compelled to hide behind a soda water fountain in order to keep cool. But Pit Game fanciers are inclined to be a trifle scrappy, so we will let the matter rest and say nothing regarding the whys and wherefore of the trouble that ensued.

There was also a little storm in the Bronze Turkey alley and a few "Hot Tamales" were thrown around in the Minorca alley.

Still all this is to be expected.

To Dr. Paul Kyle belongs the credit for instigating and carrying through this fine show. He worked like a nailer, and never lost that easy, courteous manner, even in the face of extreme provocation, which made him a popular favorite with all exhibitors and others.

And the worthy doctor was up against some very serious problems and had to use extreme diplomacy in adjusting delicate propositions.

The press work was well looked after by Mr. Barnes of the New York Herald, and all the newspaper representatives felt thoroughly at home in his canctum sanctorum.

Our old friend, Mr. Fitzpatrick, of the New York Sun, as usual, did fine work for his paper, his breezy accounts of the doings being very much appreciated by the fanciers. But he is an old friend of the chicken men, and enjoys the visits to the shows as much as they do.

The Herald Square Hall is a beauty, with fine top-light in the centre, and good side-lights, the only drawback being the caging of the big birds under the balconies, where the light is not the very best. Supt. Gladney had everything ready on time, and the birds were cooped promptly and correctly.

The cooping was done by the Empire Cooping Company, in charge of M. F. Wemple, and when completed presented a beautiful appearance, everything being promptly and thoroughly done, the new coops showing to fine advantage.

Owing to the great number of entries and the fact that not enough Turkey and Pigeon coops had been ordered, Spratts Patent were called upon and supplied the deficiency with their famous wire cages. This was greatly appreciated by not only the management and Mr. Wemple, but by the exhibitors. It was a graceful act. The only fault we can find in the arrangements was the placing of the pigeon entries in the center of the hall, as it compelled the placing of many of the larger coops under the balconies. We believe that the pigeons and bantams tiered on the sides would have helped the judging amazingly.

The attendance was quite large and best on the day the price of admission was raised to fifty cents. The first three days twenty-five cents was charged, but the returns did not warrant such a price and a change was made. This led to much discussion, but we are of the opinion that New York is a fifty cent city and the results would have been better had that price been adhered to from the beginning. The judges who officiated were:

Poultry—J. H. Drevenstedt, T. F. McGrew, J. D. Nevius, W. Theo. Wittman, A. F. Peirce, A. J. Kreutter, Theo. F. Jager, George Murman, F. H. Castner, Charles M. Smith, F. W. Otte, Jr., G. W. Weed, Daniel P. Shove, Frank D. Ham, Theo. Hewes, John J. Yelton, Philander Williams.

Pigeons.—George Feather, F. H. S. Morrison, G. H. Spohn, Geo. F. Erbe, Harry Pockman, Frank W. Gorse.

Pet Stock—Dr. Henry O. Wolters, William W. Titus, J. Kammerer, D. Gooth, A. Koberlein, G. A. Hoerle.

Reports from regular correspondents of The American Fancier, giving brief accounts of what they saw, appear below, as well as the complete awards. Further comments will be found on our editorial page.

BANTAMS.

Bantams at Herald Square came out strong in numbers and excellent in quality; they were equal to any show in this country. This, together with good cooping, feeding and satisfactory judging, made it an ideal exhibition from a fancier's standpoint.

B. B. Red cocks, a strong class; winners typical games; not much choice between the two; balance of class good ones. B. B. R. cockerels, another hot class; first, a nice, small bird, but does not have the reach the 2d cockerel has. B. B. R. hens, a large class; 1st, typical shape; 2d, good color, fails in reach; balance of class contained some grand ones. B. B. R. pullets, an exceedingly hot class; winners of 1-2 worthy of special mention, as they were two of the finest seen out this season. Brown Reds not a large class, but good in quality.

Red Piles, first cock a very reachy bird, but trifle coarse; balance very close up. R. P. cockerels not a large class, but very fair quality. R. P. hens a good class; winner a neat little game, fine in neck and head; balance extra good. R. P. pullets, a good class; 1st worthy of special mention.

G. Duckwing cocks good throughout, but winners fail trifle in size, but good in reach. G. D. cockerels very fair, but undeveloped. G. H. hens a good class, fit for any show. G. D. pullets, only one, but a good one.

Silver Duckwing B. cocks, a nice class; winner, nice reach, fair top color. S. D. cockerels, 1st a good one in reach, but trifle brassy in color; 2d, close up. S. D. hens, winner, nice, small bird, very reachy. S. P. pullets, another good class; 1st, good reach, nice size; 2d, good bird, but larger.

Birchens—A small class; winning cock and pullet worthy of special mention. Whites were fair quality, but 1st cock was a grand, reachy bird, and won easy. Winning cock and hen in A. O. V. class were a good pair of B. R. Old English Game Bants. Also a good Wheaten pullet was shown.

Buff Cochins—A good class. Winners of exceptional merit; 1st cock, nice, small bird, good color, wins easy; balance good ones. Buff hens, about the strongest class seen in New York; winners way up in quality for shape and color. Cockerels, not a large class, but winner of exceptionally good shape and color. Pullets, a large class; 1st pullet a beauty, wins easy; balance very good ones. Black cocks a good class; winner a very good one, but winner of 7th to my mind would have been an easy 2d. Black cockerels, a good class, but nothing out of the ordinary for quality. Black hens, a hot class; 1st wins easy; some unplaced birds might have been in the money. Black pullets, very fair quality.

White Cochins came out strong in old birds, and some of the finest hens ever seen clashed together. The winning hen was a miniature Cochin. In young stock the quality was very good, but need more time.

Only a few Partridge Cochins were shown, but of fair quality.

Golden Sebrights, a good class, but rather heavy laced throughout; 2d hen, a good shaped bird.

Silver Sebrights, also a very fair class, but also inclined to be heavy laced.

Black Africans, cocks, 1st, a good one; 2d, fails inlobe. Hens, 1st, a good one in shape, fails in comb; 2d, good shape, better comb, might have won. Only one cockerel, good shape, fails in size. Pullets, a nice class of typical birds.

White Africans were good; winning cockerel worthy of special mention.

White Japanese were another good class, winning cock and hen of exceptional merit.

Black Tailed Jap were of fair quality, but not equal to Whites.

A. O. V. Jap. Bantams—The winning females were exceptionally fine specimens of Gray Japanese Bantams.

Black Japanese Bantams—Not a large class, but fair in quality.

Light Brahma Bantams were strong in numbers and quality, and some of the St. Louis winners had to make room for others. First cock, typical shape and good color; 2d, small, but fails in head points; balance close up. Hens, 1st, a model Brahma; 2d, close up; 3d, fails in tail. Cockerels, 1st, good color, could be better in shape; 2d, better shape, but fails in hackle. Pullets, 1st, good color, fair shape; 2d, good shape and color, fails a trifle in covert lacing; might have won.

Dark Brahmas, small, of ordinary quality.

A number of Malay Game, Indian Game, Barred Rock and Silky Bantams were also in line to be admired by the large crowds in attendance.

A. O. S.

LEGHORNS.

Classes small, winning Single Comb Browns and Buffs had the quality of the exhibit and were the bright spots that illuminated a very dull part of the stage; on White Leghorn cock,hen and pullet, the birds winning second prizes were entitled to the blue ribbons in the opinion of Howell.

INCUBATORS AND SUPPLIES.

The incubator and supply men were out in full force. Col. Russ had a great assortment of poultry keeping appliances, and was the only make of incubators hatching jack rabbits.

Dave Smith of the Pineland Company was able to keep the young chicks hatched during the show comfortable and contented, despite the fact that no lamps were allowed to be lighted, which speaks well for his machines.

I also noticed the new and old Cypers, the Model, Cornell and other makes. But as I stated, the lack of heat was a great handicap to all.

GEO. E. HOWELL.

MINORCAS.

S. C. Blacks showed well filled classes and excellent quality all through. 1st cock a grand bird, immense size, perfect in shape and sound color. 2nd well up; a fine bird with beautiful head points. 3rd typical Minorca. Hens, 9 in class. 1st hen a wonder in size and color; 2nd out of condition, but a winner later on. Rest of class very strong. Cockerels (13)—1st in my opinion placed wrong, a large rangy bird, poor comb; should have changed places with 2nd, a beauty in the pink of condition and an easy winner. 3rd crowded 2nd very hard, but loses on size. Rest of class showed up well, with quality enough left for any ordinary show. Pullets—1st, a good bird, just fit; 2nd and 3rd a credit to their owner; will come some later on. Only 2 pens shown, but both fine.

R. C. Blacks loomed up with some really fine birds. 1st cock a typical Rose Comb and standard weight; 2nd well up. 1st hen well shown, with good color and shape. 2nd loses on comb, but a star every other way. 1st cockerel stood alone in his class; 2nd, Leghorn all over. S. C. White Minorcas, classes small, but good quality all through, except cocks. First hen and pullet were gems. Rose Comb

WYANDOTTES.

The outpouring of Wyandottes was the second greatest of any in the show, the Plymouth Rocks leading by 38 birds.

A fine testimonial to the efforts of the untiring and genial president and secretary of the new New York show, and a fitting tribute to this, the greatest market in the world, to have on exhibition so many specimens of the greatest market breed in the world.

All varieties were well represented and winners of such uniform excellence that I failed to see one section of any first or second prize winner open to serious criticism; indeed,some of the more radical asserting it was the largest display of Wyandottes ever seen at a metropolitan show, great as some displays of the breed have been.

I am willing to stand on record as saying, it was the most even large display of high class Wyandottes I have ever seen in this city or any other.

As usual at big shows of late years, the whites were the banner class of the division.

In the thirteen pens the three leaders were closely matched, the first headed by a great male mated to four grand females; 2nd, same type; 3rd, in females contained the four stars of the xhibit, but the wale was inferior to the heads of the other two families.

When I say stars, you can let your imagination climb to any point of excellence, and not go astray.

The awards on cocks, twenty-four, brought out an example of strenuous kicking, not over the awards or by an exhibitor, but by a champion of a type relegated to the rear, a nice little bird, but there were eight others the judge liked better. Sentimental preference for a bird cannot change the accepted type.

The winner turned up in an old battle scarred hero of the show ring, and it was no disgrace to be beaten by such a bird.

Thirty-one hens faced the starter for the race for prizes,and more good ones were distanced than some of us have ever seen.

Thirty cockerels and forty-six pullets, all of the same high type as previously referred to, completed the class.

The first prize Silver Wyandotte cock and hen had the quality of a class of forty-six birds.

Golden Wyandottes, twenty-seven, birds not so finished as other varieties.

Partridge Wyandottes, thirty birds; winners show great improvement in double lacing and striping, shape grand.

Silver Pencilled, twenty-five birds, shape and pencilling truly Wyandotte, the 2nd prize cockerel the best shaped bird of the breed I ever saw, but his under color was disappointing, allowing his competitor to beat him out for first.

The Blacks were black diamonds in the rough.

The Columbians have improved one hundred per cent. in the last year or two. Theo. Hewes, the sage of the Inland Poultry Journal, says they are the coming Wyandotte, by Theo. is a long ways from home.

Buff Wyandottes, a class of sixty-seven.

The first prize cock was not in full plumage, but there was no room for daubt as to his right to win, 1st and 2nd hens looked to be old New York winners. The first prize cockerel had about the nicest shade of buff, evenly distributed over each feather from skin to tip, I have ever seen.

The first pullet was a beauty, matured, good shape and color, 2nd grand in color, but rather young.

GEO. E. HOWELL.

S. C. AND R. C. BROWN LEGHORNS.

Brown Leghorns unfortunately were double tiered and in a poor light,in this one one of the lightest, brighest show halls in America. Regrettably, too, some very good birds had to be passed on account of misplaced and miscolored feathers.

Single Combs: Cocks—1st a nicely colored bird with good green sheen wherever required; 2nd, strongly failing in this latter, with especially good comb and even red color. In light coop would appear the better bird. 3rd, a nice evenly balanced bird, failing to 1st in color and to 2nd in comb. Hens. 1st a nice, soft, well colored specimen, well shown; easily the best bird in his class, well trained and shown in his prime. Well balanced,all around good bird. No serious fault anywhere, save perhaps short in thighs. 2nd, better in station than 1st, but otherwise lacking to him in all around excellence. 3rd a good one, fair in all sections. Pullets. 1st, fine in shape, color, color of legs, and condition. Just a little sign of brick and shafting. 2nd and extremely clever specimen, but lacking in condition and color of legs to 1st, 3rd with more age or size could easily have been 1st. An absolutely even shade of light brown all over, in combination with an exceptional hackle for so light a bird. In pullet class were several large, in pink of condition,laying pullets, but poor in color, that to the uninitiated would seem deserving a prize. Rose Combs. Cocks, 1st a cock of the excellence and type of 1st Single comb ckl; 2nd, excellent comb, rather too dark red; third not as good in comb, but an excellent bird. A fine class of cocks. Hens. 1st, a bird with size, shape and color to burn. 2nd close to 1st in these things, but darker in shade of color; 3nd, smaller, but of that nice light shade of brown. Ckls. Little too choose between 1st, and and 3rd, all being smart, well developed specimens, shown in finest condition. Pullets. What is said of first three cockerels applies to pullets likewise, but hardly equal to the three winners in hens or up to the three winners in single combs in color, although in size and shape their equals. Pens. 1st a very even pen of fine colored females and as an all round pen closely crowded by 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th pen lacking in color of females.

W. THEO. WITMAN.

WHITE WYANDOTTE CLUB.

The annual meeting of the National White Wyandotte Club will be held in Madison Square Garden, Jan. 5th, 1905, in connection with the New York show. At this meeting the officers for the ensuing year will be elected, and a large attendance of the members is desired. The club is offering $350.00 in cash specials at this show, and has done much to advance the popularity of the White Wyandottes, some of the results of which were seen at the World's Fair Poultry Show, where the White Wyandottes led all other varieties,with the largest class of one variety ever gotten together. There were over 800 White Wyandottes on exhibition and they occupied one entire building 200 feet long, with eight rows of coops extending the full negth of the building. The building was decorated with red, white and blue bunting, and at each end were fastened long streamers with the words, "THE MOST POPULAR VARIETY IN THE WORLD."

The 1905 club catalogue will be issued in a few days, and a copy will be mailed free to any person sending their name to the secretary, Ross C. H. Hallock, St. Louis, Mo.

AMERICAN BUFF COCHIN CLUB.

The American Buff Cochin Club was organized at St. Louis, Oct. 28, 1904, with the following officers: President, J. J. Hare, Whitby, Ont., Canada; vice presidents, T. A. Hefner, Cedar Rapids, Ia., and Leslie Parlin, St. Paul, Minn.; secretary, Lee Potts, Thornton, Indiana.

The president, Dr. Hare, who took the initiative in the organization of this new specialty club, in his introductory address, stated that breeders of the grand old Buff Cochin should get together in an effort to put this variety where it ought tobe, on its merits.

He stated that the show qualities of the Buff Cochin are everywhere recognized, and that the club should not allow the fact to be lost sight of that this is the greatest of all show birds. But he claimed that its utlity qualities were not so commonly known. Dr. Hare claimed that the Buff Cochin deserves to rank as one of the leading varieties as a utility fowl. Certainly every breeder of Buff Cochins will vouch for this claim.

At one time the Buff Cochin was more widely bred than any other variety.

It surely is the duty of every lover of this grand old variety to help push it again to the front. Much can be accomplished by a good specialty club.

It is likely that cash prizes will be offered at two leading shows this season.

The annual dues were placed at $1. Send the $1 with your name to the treasurer, Mr. Lee Potts, Thorntown, Indiana.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1904.

The Herald Square show, New York city, is over, and has made history in more ways than one.

It was a bold and hazardous undertaking to start another show in Gotham. But Dr. Kyle had the courage of his convictions that it would prove of benefit to the poultry fancy, and carried it to a successful conclusion from the poultry fanciers' standpoint. Whether it panned out financially, we are not at present able to say. It was a big undertaking for one man to handle, and he succeeded where others less enthusiastic and energetic would have failed.

The entries were large and many new faces were seen in the exhibition hall. Still, the older fanciers and exhibitors were very well represented, and as a whole we must concede that the array of birds exhibited was up to a very high standard, and in some classes as fine as ever seen at a New York show.

We were disappointed in the number of Asiatics exhibited, but the quality was strictly first class and made amends for the paucity of entries.

The American classes were large, notably Barred Rocks. White Rocks made up a fine lot, as did the Buffs. There were birds in the Barred variety that came up to a very high standard and some that will be seen at Madison Square and Boston later one, one unplaced cockerel being especially strong in Rock points, shape and barring especially. First cock was very strong in type and fine in color, with second very close up. It was a pretty difficult job for the three judges to handle, as the awards will show.

Partridge Plymouth Rocks came out in rather large numbers and had some exceedingly fine birds among the winners, while the pen of Silver Pencilled Rocks shown by Mr. Wittman was of the finest possible quality in color and pencilling.

Wyandottes came to the front with quality to burn. Silvers, the old standbyes, brought out some rare specimens, notably first cock, cockerel, hen, pullet and pen, all of the same modern open-laced type, with the others trailing with plenty of quality.

Partridge Wyandottes furnished a few surprises, the quality being simply excellent all through, with some good enough to win in the hottest competition. One of the best class of this variety we have handled.

Silver Pencilled Wyandottes a nice lot, as were the Blacks, and the Columbians indicated quality of a high order.

Buff Wyandottes made a grand showing, the quality being very even throughout, with type and color as good as we have seen in the winners.

White Wyandottes were the banner class in numbers and had quality not only in the winners, but in those outside the ribbons. It was a beautiful class to handle, as all birds were in fine fettle. First cock a grand one in type and color, with second close up and third coming fast. Hens had a type and color in first that was Wyandotte all over, but the others were close on her heels. Cockerels very strong, first a little gem of compactness and curves, solid as a rock, white plumage, fine head and good comb, good yellow legs and beak, a real star. Second just a trifle behind in shape of breast and head points, but will make a great one later on. Third, another comer. In fact, there were quite a few not just ripe that will be heard from at late shows. In pullets, first same type and style as first hen, with several close on her heels in color and shape. First pen a beauty, headed by a grand male; second, another fine one.

Leghorns were not quite as numerous as we expected at Herald Square, as no particular efforts were made to hold club shows, but there were some mighty good specimens there, as will be noticed by the comments of our reporters on another page. We were rather disappointed in the White Leghorn alley, as there were birds unplaced that came rather close up to the old original Leghorn type of graceful carriage and good head points. For obvious reasons we must decline to comment on the work of the judge. It seems that too many types are before the adjudicators of to-day.

Plenty of "the old guard" were on hand, men that have grown gray in the fancy and still can attend poultry shows minus financial returns. It did us good to see them talk over old times in the good old way. Call it "The Simple Life" if you will, but it breathes the thoroughbred spirit every time.

The Hon. D. A. Nichols and the Hon. A. F. Peirce were both at Herald Square, the former as exhibitor, the latter as judge. And where can you find a greater pair in New England?

Doctors A. A. Parker and "Benny" Thornton were in the Game Bantam alley, and where can they be matched as a pair?

Rare old Philander Williams and Harry Waldron, that prince of pigeon fanciers, were very much in evidence, and talked over the good old days of the fancy, in the Herald Square Hotel.

That reminds us of the fact that the Herald Square Hotel made "a hit" with all the fanciers stopping there. It was genuine hospitality and square treatment for all.

Dr. Beckett of Salem, N. J., is again in the arena and started well at Herald Square with his Silvers. He had Dr. Trist, another Silverite, with him, and incidentally got "Big Theo" Hewes to become a Silverite, so we are up against a trio of Silver Wyandotte champions in the future.

The fact that Silver Wyandottes created so much discussion indicates what is in store for the breed in the future. Even "Georgy" Howell, our associate editor, is getting the old fever and had a hard time to get away from the Silver alley.

But more of Herald Square later.

There was another great big little show on last week and that was Danbury, Conn. There were something over 550 birds there and the quality was supreme. Of this more next week.

Walden, N. Y., is on this week with over 1,100 entries, and some 300 White Wyandottes. Stamford, Conn., is also on with a fine show. Both will be reported in due and ancient form.

* * *

Mr. George "Pan" Burgott, Lawtons, N. Y., sent seven letters and three telegrams to New York announcing his desire to be present there last week. He failed to materialize and will no doubt put in appearance "on time" at the Madison Square Garden show, the first week in January.

We are glad to state that Mr. H. V. Crawford, secretary of the Madison Square Garden show, was a frequent and interested visitor at the Herald Square show.

THE BOSTON SHOW.

The officers for the Boston Poultry Association for the year are as follows: President, Francis H. Appleton, Lynfield, Mass.; vice presidents, Geo. B. Inches, North Grafton, Mass.; Edward Brooks, Milton, Mass.; Oliver Ames, North Easton, Mass.; Augustus Hemenway, Canton, Mass.; secretary and treasurer, Samuel H. Roberts, Pawtucket, R. I.; executive committee, C. Minot Weld, Readville, Mass.; Walter C. Baylies, Taunton, Mass.; Arthur R. Sharp, Taunton, Mass.; superintendent of poultry, T. Farrer Rackham, East Orange, N. J.; superintendent of pigeons, C. E. Twombly, Boston, Mass. The officers are the same as in the past, with the exception of the secretary and treasurer. This means that the show to be held in Mechanics' building, Jan. 17-21, 1905, will be run the same as the shows have been and every effort will be made to make the coming show equal to any of the previous efforts. But, then, everyone knows what the Boston show is and what the management stands for. It requires a large number of judges to pass upon the birds in this, America's greatest show, and the management has always secured the best talent obtainable. The special judges that have been engaged for the coming show are as follows: J. T. Cothran, New Rochelle, N. Y., Hamburgs; W. C. Denney, Rochester, N. Y., Buff Plymouth Rocks and Buff Wyandottes; Dr. N. B. Aldrich, Fall River, Mass., R. I. Reds; F. W. Rogers, Brockton, Mass., Partridge Wyandottes; W. R. Graves, Springfield, Mass., White Wyandottes; Halstead Scudder, Glen Head, L. I., Barred Plymouth Rocks; George H. Northup, Raceville, N. Y., Single Comb Black Minorcas. These judges have been engaged for these special classes, but they may be assigned to additional classes. The remainder of the classes will be judged by the following: Sharp Butterfield, Windsor, Ontario; W. B. Atherton, Randolph, Mass.; H. B. May, Natick, Mass.; Henry S. Ball, Shrewsbury, Mass.; C. A. Wheeler, Brighton, Mass.; J. F. Watson, Nashua, N. H.; H. H. Bumford, Waltham, Mass.; T. F. McGrew, New York; P. Williams, Taunton, Mass.; T. F. Rackham, East Orange, N. J.; George V. Fletcher, Belmont, Mass.; J. H. Drevenstedt, Johnstown, N. Y.; R. G. Bailey, Newark, N. J.; W. J. Stanton, New York, and J. F. Crangle, Simsbury, Ct. The pet stock will be judged by T. C. Turner of New York, and the cats by T. F. Rackham. The pigeon judges will be announced later. The management believes that this is as strong a list of judges as was ever invited to judge a poultry show. The prize money will be the same as in the past—$5 for first and $2 for second, and there will be the usual long list of cash specials. There will be a score of the $100 champion cups for competition, a new one being added this year for the best male Partridge Wyandotte. The entries close Dec. 31, but should be made as early as possible, for no entries will be received after the last pen has been filled. The premium lists should be in the hands of the fanciers before the 15th of December, and anyone who has not received one by that date should write to the secretary, S. H. Roberts, Pawtucket, R. I.

CORRECTION.

Editor American Fancier:—I see in the report of the New Britain show you gave Fernwood Farms 1st on S. C. R. I. Red cockerel, which should have gone to Sunbeam Poultry Farm. There were eight birds in the class.

POULTRY INSTITUTE AT JOHNSTOWN, N. Y.

A very interesting Poultry Institute was held in this city on Dec. 2 and 3. Mr. T. E. Orr, Dr. E. M. Santee and Prof. J. E. Rice were the principal speakers. The meetings were well attended and much interest was shown. The questions of feeding and housing were thoroughly discussed, also the question of single and double mating, Mr. T. E. Orr expressing himself strongly in favor of single mating for all breeds, to which Dr. Santee and other prominent Brown Leghorn breeders strongly objected, claiming that it would be impossible to produce as large a percentage of birds that would meet standard requirements by this method. Prof. Rice could not reach Johnstown until 2½ hours after the meeting had been called, but the audience unanimously voted to wait for him, and the question box solved the problem of making the time fly. Space forbids a detailed report, but the discussions and lectures were all interesting and instructive and were thoroughly appreciated.

THE HERALD SQUARE SHOW.

ORPINGTONS.

Single comb buff cocks. 1st, nice shape and even in surface color, but white beneath, in hackle and part of tail. 2nd, better in color and only a trifle inferior in shape and top. 3rd, color not even, breast fair. 4th, black in tail and small. 5th, wing not sound in color, shape good. 6th, excellent all through, plenty of top or style, nice color, shape little narrow at tail,which was carried awry, or could have gone at the top or second to second winner. Hens. 1st, poor type and breast only fair. 2nd, excellent shape and color, white in lobes. 3rd, most even and sound in color, as good as any in the class, least defective. 4th, just a fair stamp. 5th, black in tail.

Cockerels. 1st, easily ahead, capital top color and type, comb fair. 2nd small and uneven in color. 3rd, as good as any except hackle color; easily ahead of 2nd or 1st, considering comb of winner, turns over Leghorn-like. 4th, big, unsound in color; others not above the average. Pullets a better lot, fairly well placed on what is understood as buff in American classes, but the Orpington buff is darker, richer and more aproaching a red. 1st, good color, small; 2nd, even in color, but not clear in tail; 3rd, nice color, white in lobes; 4th, only of fair type; 5th, fairly good; 6th, better type and color; one with comb tips gone, as good as any in the class, with a very young, immature one equal to any in Orpington color.

Rose Comb Buffs were judged chiefly on American idea of color, and comb and head seemed to be considered before the low, deep body and top in males. Buff Wyandotte classes were much more uniform, and though of a lighter hue, were more sound and even in color. This general criticism is perhaps better than an individual one where the judges' awards were difficult to follow.

S. C. Black Orpingtons. A fine display, much better than the buffs in size and shape in hens, top and finish in cocks. It was hard to detect color defects, in the position they were cooped, and these remarks are made on somewhat superficial examination in this regard. Cocks. 1st, appeared brownish, instead of a green sheen, with black undercolor, high on legs and not of approved Orpington shape and type. 2nd a much better bird in type, and color right; certainly darker, nice top; lobes with white. 3rd an excellent, low, big chunky bird truly Orpington, and being right in lobes and good in color, might have been first. 4th, nice stamp, white in lobes. 5th, a nice bird. 6th, shape and color good, comb poor. Hens. 1st, easily on shape and color. 2nd low and of nice shape, color fairly good. 3rd not as low nor equal in type. 4th a better bird all through. 5th quite a nice shape.

Cockerels. 1st a grand youngster, large, low, excellent in color, but with small bone and thighs for such bulk. 2nd also an excellent bird of the right type, good in shape, size and color. 3rd not up to this standard, but a nice bird. 4th wants time. 5th fair shape. 6th would go up with better breast. Pullets. 1st and 3rd the best two in class, size and shape, a trifle in favor of 3rd; condition of 1st better. 2nd, much below these generally. 4th lacks size.

S. C. Whites. Cocks. 1st, extra fine shape, color hardly equal. 2nd, big bird, not as correct in shape and type. 3rd, fair color. 4th long back and not white. Hens. 1st, shanks spoiled type; 2nd much better and typical, but not in form. 3rd as good as the first and somewhat like it in shape. 4th, something of the correct type. Cockerels. 1st, good bone for an Orpington, but a little long in back. 2nd, excellent, except in color. 3rd, equal to any in class everywhere. 4th fair. Pullets. 1st a moderately good bird in good form; 2nd a little long, but low and shapely. 3rd capital type. Condition poor; 4th a trifle Cochin-like in head, but equal to any in body and color. 5th, average. 6th, similar.

There could not be any difference of opinion in the small class of R. C. Whites. Firsts were easily first, and in Jubilees the most glaring divergence was in males cocks and cockerels) where the second was far superior to the first in shape, breast, color, tail and wattles.

EDWIN H. MORRIS.

GEESE.

Toulouse.—A capital display. Old ganders. 1st, on bone, dewlap, lacing and size; 2nd and 3rd close, latter should beat former later on; needs time only; 4th, a goose. Old geese. 1st superior to 2nd in color and keel; 2nd, about equal otherwise; 3rd rightly placed; 4th a gander and hence 5th should have been 4th and is a fine big goose, wanting time for keel, etc.

No competition in young and placed correctly.

Embdens had some fine specimens placed well.

The Africans goose and gander were Brown Chinese in color, neck and head. Africans are generally gray; these were brown, and have longer necks, with dewlap.

EDWIN H. MORRIS.

TURKEYS.

A splendid lot, good in size and plumage, especially the bronze. Old cock. 1st, good size, color and wing, narrow tail. 2nd a little inferior in top color, and much beneath; 3rd chocolate on tail in place of bronze. Cocks (1903). 1st splendid bird, easily ahead on size, shape, color and width of tail and markings. 2nd good in color, smaller and not deep. 3rd, size only; color fair, wing poor. 4th small, but of good color. 5th better bronze on back and as good as 2nd elsewhere. 6th color, size and wing inferior. Placing that seemed to accord with merit on superficial examination. 1st right, 2nd third, 3rd fourth, 4th fifth, 5th second, 6th right.

Cocks 1904. 1st on size. 2nd equal in color, both good, not in size, better bone, will beat rival later. 3rd good, nearly equal 2nd. 4th elegant wing and about as good as any placed over it, on color, size and bone. 5th needs time.

Hens old. 1st and 2nd, color in favor of 2nd, size of first. 3rd too red and smutty in secondaries. 4th wide, color of primaries not good. Hens (1903). 1st, on size tail and color; 2nd not as strong in color. 3rd close for second, hardly as good in bone, though. 4th, right; 5th, color fine, bone good, tail fair.

Hens 1904). 1st on color, 2nd good color and tail; 3rd nice wing and color. 4th also good in color; 5th small; 6th fair. Placing only fairly correct.

White cocks, old. 1st, largest; 2nd, only a little inferior in size, otherwise a nice bird. Cocks (1904) placing not understood. Hens fairly well placed, size and color good. Black Turkeys. Four birds, grand green sheen and of good size, no competition.

EDWIN H. MORRIS.

LAKENFELDERS.

The strongest display ever seen in America. Four exhibitors battled for the prizes with 29 specimens. After the smoke had cleared away, we found that the decision is still left in the balance. There was glory for all and final defeat for none. Specially to be mentioned are the first prize and special winning cock of Dr. Phelps and the first and special winning pullet of Newfield Farms. These two represent what we consider the ideal shadow or sheets in male and female. The 6th cockerel would have won on size, being a well matured specimen close to the age limit, but far too much black striping on back and wings. The 1st cockerel from general apearances seems to be a full brother to the first pullet, nuf sed. Keep up this line and progress must come.

FAVEROLLES.

Small classes, winners in Salmon having the required fifth toe separate and clean black breast in males. A good pair of Ermines took second.

THEO. F. JAGER.

WATERFOWL AT HERALD SQUARE SHOW.

Goose and duck alley was a well filled and attractive corner of the Hall and the specimens present were true standard representatives of all general utility breeds and of a few of those kept for fancy or ornamental or sporting purposes only.

Pekin Ducks, a strong class. 30 entries in the single classes and five breeding pens. The first old duck exceptionally fine type,very prominent in keel and the ideal shape for market meat production. The second old drake a fine stationed specimen, but lost winner's place on account of flatness of breast. Rouen Ducks, both old and young, shown by one exhibitor,surpassing any seen lately. The lacing and color of females splendid and size and horizontal carriage, entitling each and every duck present to glory in a blue ribbon. Cayuga ducks, an all black, green sheened collection, that being bred on the shores of the Cayuga lake, testify to years of painstaking care and breeding in perfecting them to their present high quality. One pair of Indian Runners, from the Sandy wastes of far off Kansas, took the blue. May these Kansasites breed more winners and come again to win. They are the goods, all wool and a yard wide. In Muscovy Ducks, both white and colored, competing for the champion old drake special. Mr. Carpenter's drake captured it. It seems that some breeders are still adhering to the "marked much with white" strain. This is a pity. Let us have the colored variety as near all black as we can and in that way we are sure to get vigor additional to an already vigorous breed and beauty to burn.

The old White Muscovies were uniform in quality and minor differences decided the wins.

Blue Swedish, W. Call and Decoy Ducks, of good quality in small classes.

C. W. King had the best of it in Toulouse Geese, winning most points on large, well filled birds having dewlap.

Embdens were of fair quality. A pair of B. China Geese were wrongly entered as Africans.

In pens we found 2 good pens of Rouens, the second losing on account of too dark color of drake and ducks, and in Cayugas weight alone decided the winners. THEO. F. JAGER.

ASIATICS.

Light Brahmas. Cocks. 1st, one of the best birds shown for year, very large, grand shape, with extra fine head and comb, strong hackle, good white back, good and broad, tail well spread and a fine color. 2nd a large bird, fine shape, strong in head points and hackle, broad cushion, but showing too much black. Tail good and well carried. 3rd, a very good bird, in color, shape, not quite so large as first and second. 4th,, a bird good enough to win in ordinary class. Balance of winners, birds that the owners can be quite proud of. Hen. 1st, 2nd and 3rd, almost identical in shape and general type. Good comb, head and eye, exceptionally strong in hackle. Good shape in back, tail nicely laced, well carried and open. Balance of winners, good strong birds in color, shape and carriage. Cockerels. 1st, a large, well matured bird, remarkably good in shape, with good head point, strong in hackle, tail well carried, open and a good color. 2nd, a bird that will when better matured, probably equal the first. 3rd fails to first and second, especially in saddle, showing too much black for the present standard. Balance of winners, very good birds, worthy of their places.

Pullets. 1st, exceptionally fine in shape, strong, well defined hackle, fine back, good open tail well laced, a typical Light Brahma. 2nd, a very clean cut, well shaped Brahma, with good hackle, comb good, but fails in general outline to first. 3rd, a very promising bird, of true Brahma type, and strong color point. Balance of class of very good quality.

Dark Brahmas. 1st cock. Large, fine shaped Brahma, with good head point, strong hackle, his color with exception of a little too much frosting on fluff and a slight tinge of color on wingbow is excellent. 2nd, a better bird in general color than first, but lacking in size and carriage; his only fault.

Hen. 1st, a typical Light Brahma in shape, fine, clear, well defined hackle, good tail, with strong, well defined pencilling, well carried back over cushion and down over fluff and thigh, an exceptionally good one. 2nd, a little too dark in color, otherwise equally as good as first. 3rd and 4th, good birds.

Cockerel. 1st, very fine bird in color, comb, eye and feathering, but lacking maturity, when of age he will be in much better shape.

Pullet. A very good, clear, well defined bird throughout, well worthy of a first in stronger competition.

Black Langshangs. 1st cackerel, a nice bird in shape and carriage, fine color, good comb and eye, somewhat lacking in size. 2nd, a bird that is in top line, very good, but for American fancy entirely too long in leg; the same may be said of the third.

Pullets. 1st, 2nd, very strong in Langshan type and carriage, fine color, but we think not so large as is generally shown. 3rd, a very tall bird of good color, but lacking in proper outline. 4th, 5th, very long in leg, and nearer an Indian Game in type than Langshan, good color, good eyes and comb, but like 2nd and 3rd cockerel, not what would be called a good type of Langshan.

Whie Langshangs. Good birds, but not in the best of condition. J. D. N.

Owing to delay in mails one or two special reports of Herald Square show have failed to reach us in time for this week's issue.

HERALD SQUARE CACKLINGS.

Talk about beautiful displays, those of the Lathrop Co. of Rochester, N. Y., and George L. Harding, Binghamton, had them all coming some. Ask Lathrop for a catalogue; also where he gets his original ideas.

Not in recent years have we seen anything in Standard Buff Cochins that surpassed the exhibit of Chas. Magee. Simply beautiful, that's all.

We are glad to see back in the ranks of Minorca breeders, H. W. Billard. He has not forgotten how to produce the proper kind, judging from the quality of the birds he exhibited.

In fact, the Minorca alley was hotly contested and pretty evenly divided. The first cock of E. R. Collins & Son, a wonder. Same may be said of Klee Bros.' 1st hen, Chas. A. Kahle's 1st pullet, and Rowland Story's 2d and 3d pullet. They showed good breeding.

In a class of 31 singles and 5 pens, Klee Bros. won 4 firsts, including pen, 2 seconds, 1 third and others. Well, well, well.

That the people who visited Herald Square show had money to spend was very evident from the large amount of business done by the exhibitors, the sales reaching up into the thousands. Many individual birds brought $50.00, $100.00 and $150.00, and in some instances even higher prices.

* * *

One of the exhibits that attracted attention was that of the L. W. Norton Co., an automatic, self-feeding drinking fountain. A continuous stream of fresh water is always before the chicks, thus insuring health and lessening the chance of disease from gapes, etc.

Dr. Whittier of Kent, N. Y., wore his usual castor oil smile, but a little more pronounced. $400.00 is what he got for his operation on White Leghorns; quality knocks.

That Partridge Plymouth Rocks are getting very popular was shown by the large entry. The exhibits of Chas. A. Kahle and F. A. Keller were a credit to the breed. The Buff Rock pullet that won first for Mr. Kahle in a class of 20 was also a stunner.

In S. C. Rhode Island Reds, Frank D. Read cleaned up pretty much the whole bunch. On 46 entries he captured 3 firsts, 4 seconds, 2 thirds and others. He says he has no knock coming.

White Rocks were a whole show in themselves. 70 singles and 11 pens, as a whole the finest bunch ever put together. Chapman and McQuilliande, Greystone Poultry Farm and M. P.Turner divided the honors.

* * *

Our artist, Mr. A. O. Schilling, is too modest to mention the fact that he cleaned the deck in Buff Cochin Bantams. Nevertheless it is true, for Mr. Schilling knows Buff Cochin Bantams from beginning to end and has them going some all the year around.

ENGLAND'S BIG EVENTS.

THE BUFF ORPINGTON CLUB SHOW. Judges, Messrs. F. Bloomer (males) and H. Abbott. The display throughout was very good indeed, and it was undoubtedly the best of the season. Both judges made a point of aiming for shape, and in this respect we were pleased to see that Mrs. Wilkinson's cockerel especially stood out, being of as good type as any black. Single Comb cock (12): cup, 1, Cook and Sons, rare size and type, sound color, very short shanks; 2, Golding, a trifle leggy, and beaten by bulk, very good otherwise; 3, Mrs. Wilkinson, big and typical, good short shanks, hardly full hackle; 4, Moryson, in somewhat rough feather, and wants fulness of breast; 5, Bell, rather long legs, good in other respects; r, Richardson; vhc, Whitfield, Thomas; hc, Percival; c, Cook; pen 865, Thomas, very seedy. Hen (18): cup, sp, 1, 5, Mrs. Wilkinson, 1st big and shapely, grand color and legs, spoilt by a twisted hackle, still she won well, 5th beaten by size only, a good one; 2, 4, c, Holmes, 2nd big and typical, close up, 4th just a trifle leggy, and touched on tail; 3, Mrs Smiles, rather dark, but level, wants bulk; r, Cook and Sons; vhc, Garton; hc, Cook, Thomas; c, Cass; absent, Thorniley. Cockerel (41): cup, 1, 2, 4, Mrs. Wilkinson, 1st rare shape, grand head and color, A1 bulk and size, won well, 2nd hardly so massive, and not yet furnished, 4th good, but small; 3, Whitfield, good short legs, capital body and color, well beaten by size; 5, Procter, good type and size, rather dark color; 6, Golding, hackle not full, good otherwise; r, Richardson; vhc, Cass (2), one, pen 886, a real good one that could have been in the money, we thought; vhc, Preston, Moryson, Turner, Entwistle Bros., Brown; hc, Trotter; c, Turner; absent, Thorniley, Col. Sandbach, Cook and Sons, Entwistle Bros.; over age, Mrs. Andrews. Pullet (43): sp, 1, Preston, rare size and bulk, sound color, one of the best we have seen; 2, vhc, hc, Holmes, just beaten by size, a good one; 3, Mrs. Wilkinson, wants width only to make a "topper;" 4, Cass, grand color and type, narrow yet, and unfurnished; 5, Turner, rather small; 6, Hobart, nice type, trifle long back; r, hc, Entwistle Bros.; vhc, Bell, Percival; hc, Cook, Golding; c, Thomas (2); Messrs. Cook's sp, Mrs. Andrews; absent, Mrs. Wilkinson, Cook and Sons, Entwistle Bros., Fellowes. Novice cock or cockerel (29): sp, 1, 2, vhc, Montgomery, both big and shapely, 1st rather better color; 3, Thompson, well beaten by size, not ready; 4, Mrs. Harker, comb too beefy and inclined over, and rather long legs; 5, Dr. Corner, gets tail up a bit, deep level color; r, Fildes; vhc, Payne, Dutton, hc, Birks, Payne, Batty, Geut; c, Hobart, Jamieson; absent, Brigstocke. Hen or pullet (31): sp, 1, Mrs. Smiles, big, and typical throughout; 2, vhc, Hobart, just a trifle narrow; 3, Dr. Corner, rare good type and color, beaten by size; 4, hc, Thompson, pale lobes, good otherwise; 5, Cowe, similar; r, Mrs. Bell; vhc, Woollard; hc, Montgomery, Folds, Mrs. Drew; c, Riche, Holland; absent, Salvation C. P. F., Batty, Brigstocke. Selling, £5 5s., male (21); 1, Trotter; 2, Mrs. Wilkinson; 3, Morris; r, Golding; vhc, Taylor, Cook, Dr. Corner, Thompson; hc, Turner, Shaw, Rigg, Percival; c, Mrs. Bell. Pair of females (16): 1, Golding; 2, Turner; 3, Horsley; r, Provost; vhc, Cass, Percival, Taylor; hc, Mrs. Smiles, Corrie; c, Col. Sandbach, Travers, Davenport. £2 2s., male (20): 1, Mrs. Drew; 2, Hicks; 3, Gent; r, Cook; vhc, Taylor (2), Hunter, Mrs. Wilkinson (2), Morris; hc, Thomas; c, Askew. Pair of females (21): 1, Dr. Corner; 2, Morris; 3, Percival; r, Golding; vhc, Miss Edwards; hc, Hambley, Large; c, Pendlebury, Askew, Adamson.

Bantams at the Crystal Palace are commented on in Poultry as follows:

Modern Game Bantams made a good show, the number of entries and quality of the exhibits giving Mr. J. Sneddon, the judge, something to do, and he did it. In most varieties competition was keen, but in black reds the Parbold birds could not be denied their places. Black red cockerel (13): 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, vhc, hc, c, Ainscough, all champions, no lumber about any of them. Pullet (10): 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, Ainscough, 1st very smart, good short feather and sound color, plenty of reach, a description that applies to the lot; r, Col. Annand; vhc, Hopkins. Duckwing or Wheaten hen (8): 1, 4, Stretch, 1st good old hen, very fit, grand color and style; 2, 3, Barnes, 2d not such good color, 3rd very smart and stylish, not at her best; r, Coutts; hc, Firth; c, Ambler. Duckwing cockerel (9): 1, Barnes, very tall, good color and shoulders, not the best of leg color; 2, Furness, plenty of reach, very stylish, well whipped up; 3, Smalley, good short back, clean on breast, color not up; 4, Ainscough, stylish, rather big; r, Coutts; hc, Hon. G. Sturt. Pullet (11): 1, Ainscough, hard and short feathered; 2, Furness, very small and small, good reach; 3, 4, Barnes, 3rd good color and style, larger, 4th carries her tail rather high, but good in other points; r, Coutts, jun.; vhc, Firth; c, Smalley, Hon. G. Sturt. Pile cock (11): 1, Mitchell, short back, tall and stylish, clean breast, good on top; 2, Lambert, larger, good wings and breast; 3, Orme, good shoulders, nice head and wings; 4, Binns, grand style and color; r, Coutts; vhc, Firth, Smalley. Hen (10): 1, Smalley, very smart and clean looking, good head; 2, Stretch, grand little hen for shape; 3, r, Firth, good reach and well shown; 4, Roose, good type, fair color; hc, Furness, Smith. Cockerel (15): 1, Stretch, a little gem, nice front, fine bone; 2, 4, Binns, 2nd rich color, very tall and clean limbs; 3, Coutts, jun., finely drawn, reachy, nice head; r, vhc, Walton; hc, Roose. Pullet (8): 1, Binns, best reach, very good style, breast, and wings; 2, Stretch, hardly ready, but promising well; 3, 4, Firth, 3rd good color and small, 4th too strong in color; r, vhc, Smalley. Birchen cockerel (8): 1, 4, r, Hartley, a good trio, little fault about any of them; 2, Hon. G. Sturt, rather heavy lacing, good reach and shape; 3, Stretch, hardly ready; vhc, Stevens; c, Shepherd. Pullet (11): sp, 1, 3, r, Hartley, 1st a little gem, small, short back, very sound color; 2, Stretch, fails on breast, very small; 4, vhc, hc, Hon. G. Sturt, good shape, color not up; hc, Shepherd. Any other color cock or hen (8): sp, 1, 2, King, blue laced; 3, Wright, fair blue, rather big and feathery. Sebright silver cock (13): 1, Preston, beautifully laced, good headed, shapely bird; 2, E. Wright and Co., grand shape and dense markings, not such good head; 3, Heywood, distinctly laced and shapely; wants better leader and more work on comb; 4, Sharrock, nice comb, lobes, and leader, hardly so well laced; r, hc, McCreath; vhc, McNaught, Burleigh; absent, Tostevin. Hen (10): cup, 1, r, Heywood, small, beautifully laced, good shape; 2, McCreath, not so small, but distinctly laced, neat head; 3, vhc, Geary, sweet all round, and nice lacing; 4, Hon. Miss Sturt, not so boldly laced, but shapely; hc, Burleigh. Cockerel (12): 1, 4, Preston, 1st beautifully laced, sweet head and shape, 4th hardly so shapely, but grand lacing and head; 2, McCreath, hardly so good in tail, but well marked otherwise, and shapely; 3, E. Wright and Co., densely laced except on tail, shapely and nice head; r, Geary; vhc, Leno Donkin, jun.; hc, Serjeantson. Pullet (14): cups (2), 1, 4 Preston, 1st very small, superb lacing and shape, 4th bold lacing pale face, good shape; 2, Wright and Co., good lacing and shape, not so well marked tail; 3, McNaught, trifle larger, but grand lacing and head; r, Burleigh; vhc, Geary, Heywood; hc, Scatcliff. Gold cock (4): 1, Heywood, beautiful rich ground, splendid head and lacing; 2, 4, Rev. Sergeantson, 2nd shapely, good lacing, not such good head, 4th pale ground, nicely laced; 3, Hon. Miss Sturt, shapely, ugly head. Hen (11): cups (2, 1, Bowler, beautiful shape and lacing, rich color; 2, vhc, hc, Rev. Sergeantson, good lacing and shape, A1 color; 3, Geary, not such rich ground, good lacing; 4, Young, larger, hardly such rich ground, good shape; r, Cordrey; vhc, Heywood. Cockerel (8): cup, 1, Leno, rich ground, large, white in lobes, A1 lacing; 2, McHalland, nice head, shape, and color, wants tail marks; 3, Bolmer, neat comb, paler ground, nice head; 4, Heywood, shapely and good head, not so distinctly laced; r, Mrs. Airey; vhc, Geary. Pullet (9): 1, Bolmer, small, even ground, distinct lacing, good shape; 2, 3, Geary, 2nd beautiful shape, not such even ground, 3rd good all round; 4, Leno. Rosecomb, Judge, Major Crowther. Black cock (7): sp, 1, Heys, beautiful comb and lobes, good feather; 2, Wright and Co., fine head and lobes, not so shapely; 3, Bindley, fair all round; 4, Loggie, hardly so shapely, good form and head; r, Lambert. Hen (3): cup, 1, Wright, good all over, and very small; 2, Little, just a trifle larger, but grand specimen; 3, Urwin, not such good lobes. Cockerel (8): sp, cup, 1, 3, vhc, Wright and Co., grand all over, A1 head; 2, 4, Bindley, 2nd trifle larger, A1 comb and lobes. Pullet (9): sp, 1, 2, 3, 4, vhc, hc, Wright and Co., a grand even team; r, Lambert; hc, Little. White cock (7): 1, sp, 2, 3, Purdon, very typical lot; 4, Anderson; r, Urwin. Hen (5): 1, 4, Purdon, good all over; 2, Anderson, small and smart head; 3, Urwin, nice head and plumage. Cockerel (7): cup, 1, Anderson, grand in all points; 2, Bindley, not far behind; 3, 4, Urwin, 3rd beautiful feather and shape, 4th not so shapely; r, Purdon. Pullet (6): 1, 4, Purdon, small head and shape; 2, Copeman and Son, close up; 3, Urwin; r, Downer.

SANATOGA CHIPS.

Barred Rocks as usual showed up strong in numbers with quality par excellence. Wm. B. Wisler set the standard last year for male birds; this year he made good in the same class, the females going to M. R. Shaner, the veteran breeder of Barred Rocks, who showed a string of beautiful hens and pullets. It was our pleasure to inspect his stock at home and a more uniform and beautiful lot of females than the 200 he raised this year would be hard to find.

The Bantam alley was represented by old veterans like J. B. Hoffman and D. G. Witmyer, who made a fine display of these little beauties in Ornamentals and Games respectively.

This calls to our mind the fact that Hoffman & Yerger breed White Wyandottes and Buff Rocks that always find a place among the blue and red.

Sanatoga as usual held its record as a Buff Rock centre and R. M. Trate wore a broad smile of satisfaction after the awards were placed. His 1st and 2nd cocks were grand specimens, with color to burn. He also carried off highest honors at Harrisburg and Reading.

Next year Sanatoga promises to surpass all former efforts. Plans are already on foot to hold the largest and best managed show that has ever been held in this section. The material is here to do it with and with the interest and determination that have marked the progress already made, success is assured. In the line of cash specials and valuable silver cups, this show will be a record breaker, making the twelfth annual show given by this association.

Silver Pencilled Wyandottes, while a small class, showed excellent quality. The cockerels and pullets exhibited by L. B. Custer being topnotchers. We expect next year to see this class well filled.

Competition was very keen in the White Wyandotte alley, this popular variety bringing out some grand birds. Among the successful exhibitors were Scheifley & Thomas, winning the cream of the class. This firm also breeds some excellent Barred Rocks.

Kurtz & Newhard had the birds and got the silver water pitcher for best display of Leghorns, also the beautiful silver cup for best display of Rocks, Wyandottes and Leghorns. Nuf sed.

The biggest scoop on any one variety in good competition was made by A. J. Fell on Buff Leghorns, winning 5 firsts on 5 entries, with the class all filled. A cleaner lot of birds would be hard to find. He also called the turn at Hagerstown and Trenton.

One of the exhibits that attracted a great deal of attention were the pedigreed Scotch Collies of Sam S. Bliem. They were a credit to the show and added to Sam's bank account, as he disposed of several fine specimens. He also breeds some White Leghorns that show the standard requirements.

When a woman enters the ranks, look out for your laurels. This came true in the Buff Rock alley. The record made by Mrs. Bertha Kerlin stands almost alone. Look up her winnings in the list of awards.

GEO. W. WEBB.

TABASCO SAUCE.

Suppose all hands think I am dead, but you can bet your boots I ain't.

Just got back from St. Louey. Walking was good. Waited for the dough for judging—but, well!

Oh, dear! I saw so much, heard so much, that really, my head swims.

Georgie Bates gave me a crack tother day. Bates thought I was funny till I stepped on his toe; then he thought I wasn't. Be a thoroughbred, George.

Say, Drev., that St. Louis show was a corker in more ways than one.

Talk about rules! That "breeders' name rule." Gee, how it was soaked!

Birds that one man brought to show were bought by another, right there under the nose of the judges and management.

Even some of the officials bought birds to show; yes, they did.

One exhibitor claimed that some one pasted a feather on one of his birds to have it disqualified, and it worked.

Some one asked Roundabout Robby to join the A. P. A., and he said, "No, sir-ee." Yes, he did, because I was right next to him when he said it.

Still, a few were foolish to part with the coin.

It's all right. Some day the A. P. A. will do something. Mark my words, will do something.

I saw Papa, Mama and "Willie" Denny, but the kid was left home. Congratulations, Willie!

The "Com. of 5" did everlastingly do some tall squirming about the Standard. Say, Drev., you're a foxy guy to stay at home.

I saw so many faces that I had not seen for years, that I was awfully tickled.

Dear old Sternberg—as good natured as ever, more wit than ever, fatter than ever, more polished than ever, but to save his soul couldn't get a good juicy steak even for money.

Old man Rhodes, he and I had many a pleasant chat talking about old times, and about me. It seemed as if he liked my stuff.

Emery also was there; Williams, Butterfield, and a whole lot of us old ones.

I had many pleasant chats about "West Point." One remarked that he liked a joke, but he drew the line on personal appearances.

All right; won't say 'nother word. Your wish will be my pleasure.

Link Orr did not do a thing but chase petticoats, and Tom Orr chased rainbows.

Those coops and grounds were the limit. The men were all right, but conditions were a farce.

And as to judging, you have read about it in the papers, and I'll drop a hint. Not one writer has had snap enough to say what he thought as regards cooping, feeding and judging.

Read over the reports, and if you cannot see it was a labored report, I'll eat my hat.

The utility men had a meeting one day—yes, a meeting, but the report was gobbled up by A. F. Hunter, and I presume it will be published in that latest of his.

Hewes and Curtis were both there. But say, boys, get together.

Sid Conger must have lost his pull, as there was nothing doin' in his alley.

I. K. was absent. Wonder if I. K. could apply the decimal on some of those girls on the Pike.

Hawkins says he sold most of his good "uns," so he did not send.

Billy McNeil—how he can taffy the women! William should have been a minister. What a flock he could have gathered!

Shureman is rubbing it in pretty hard.

I presume Theo. Hewes could have had a reporter there if he wished.

Did you notice how serious F. B. White looked while speaking at the Missouri banquet. Gee, but Frankie meant what he said.

After all is said and done, we had a big time. It was a big show, there was big lying, big scheming, big all the way through, and sometimes, I think, a big fake. More later.

WEST POINT.

LITITZ, PA., SHOW.

The Lancaster County, Pa., Poultry and Pigeon Association will hold their second annual show in Rudy's Hall, Lititz, December 27 to 31, 1904. This will be the largest and best show that will be held in the Keystone state this season. Judging by the premium list, the association is now putting out, this may be the case. Besides the regular premiums, they offer one hundred and eighty choice specials; eighty of these are in cold cash. Valuable specials in merchandise will be exchanged for cash if desired. The specials are so arranged that every exhibitor will have a chance to win one or more, even if his number of entries is small.

Chas. T. Cornman, F. G. Bean and Geo. W. Webb will judge the poultry and H. A. Koons the pigeons.

For premium lists, etc., address,

J. W. BRUCKART, Sec.,
Lititz, Pa.

FELLOW MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN R. C. BROWN LEGHORN CLUB.

With the advent of new officers comes the beginning of the new year for our Club. Be charitable towards the failures of the outgoing officers and resolve that you will assist the new ones in every way in which it is possible. There is one point in which the Club is thoughtless. It is expected that the Secretary should do all the work, kindle all the enthusiasm and bear all the blame. This thing should stop here and now. It should not be necessary for him to be obliged to ask that the dues be paid. As members we have no more right to neglect to pay our dues than he has to refuse to receive them.

One thing which helps all breeds is "the good word spoken in season." Remember at least once during the year to write a short article for some of the poultry or agricultural papers calling attention to some of the merits of our breed and thus win it friends. There will be no trouble in finding good things to say.

I hope that each member will feel in honor bound to send in the name of at least one new member before the beginning of a new year. It would help the breed greatly if more of the members would show their birds so that we might know where the best stock is to be found. There is no advertizing medium so good as the show room, no criticism so perfect as the comparison of our own birds with others.

In retiring let me thank you all for unfailing courtesy and patience. During the summer the pressure of my own business has crowded out nearly everything which I had planned to do for the Club. Mr. Algea will take up the work with enthusiasm and do much which was impossible for me.

Again thanking you for all your kindness, I am,

Yours truly,
SARA A. LITTLE,

Clyde, N. Y.

RHODE ISLAND RED CUP FOR NEW YORK.

The owner of the silver cup won for the best exhibit of Rhode Island Reds at Rochester, 1904, offers the cup for the best exhibit of Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds at New York, in January, 1905, the owner to compete. Breeding yards are to count twice as many points as single entries, and all birds competing must have been bred by the one in whose name they are entered. The name of the breeder and the age of the bird entered as a hen must be set forth in an affidavit when required. In case of a protest, the protestant, the leading competitor and the judge shall decide on a judge to decide the protest, but Dr. Aldrich, as the judge whose decision no one will dispute, shall be the first choice, if he can be secured, costs to be charged to the protestant. In case of a tie between the owner and a contestant, the owner shall retain the cup.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

The Electric City Poultry and Pet Stock association at a regular meeting held Wednesday night, Nov. 16, selected as judges for the annual show to be held the first week in February, W. C. Denny, F. B. Zimmer, J. Y. Bicknell and W. J. Stanton; show to be judged by comparison; entry fee, 50c. single bird, pens, $1.00. Cash specials will be large and a large exhibit is guaranteed. The following directors were elected: Geo. Van DeVeer, W. F. Smith, Dr. A. T. Sitterly, J. L. Whitmyer, C. W. Reiter, N. V. W. Heck and W. J. Rosecrans. The auditing committee elected is Dr. A. T. Sitterly, Geo. Pfaffenbach and Chas. Lombard. Letters from intended exhibitors point to a large show. The society regret very much that J.H. Drevenstedt's previous engagements barred him from judging at the coming show.

THE NATIONAL SINGLE COMB BUFF ORPINGTON CLUB.

The National Single Comb Buff Orpington Club, only recently organized, have already received members from half the states in the Union, also several life members. The club wishes to announce that they will offer their handsome silk badge, which is the finest ever offered by a specialty club to any member winning a first premium at any show in the U. S. Where there are ten or more members in one state the club will offer one of their beautiful silver cups to be competed for by members only. They also wish to announce that their emblem is now ready and will be mailed to any member upon receipt of 25c. The Club has just issued a neat circular which together with application blanks will be mailed to any parties interested in Orpingtons.

HARTFORD'S GREAT POULTRY SHOW.

Arrangements have been completed for the eighth annual exhibit of the Hartford-Manchester Poultry Association at Foot Guard Hall, Hartford, Conn., January 24-27, 1905. This spacious building is in great demand, being one of the largest floor space buildings in New England, well lighted and admirably located, two blocks from depot. Many new features have been decided upon and the show is held after most others, that all birds may be in condition for exhibiting. To win at Hartford means to win at about the fifth largest show in the country. Entry fees have been decided upon at 50 cents per single bird. Prizes to be first, $2; second, $1—if eight or more entries in class,if less,prize to be, first, $1; second, 50c. Pens, entry fee $1. First prize, $5; second $2—if eight or more entries, otherwise first prize $2, second $1.00. Five ribbon prizes will be awarded in each class, besides hundreds of dollars' worth of specials. This exhibit will be a strictly poultry show with Bantams and Pigeons in the dining hall. The building can accommodate most any number of birds which will be received, cooped, cared for, recooped and returned by Messrs. Clayton & Freeman, Plainville, Conn., who with their patented Nutmeg coops have won much praise.

For further information and suggestions, communicate with the sec'y, F. O. Groesbeck, Hartford, Conn.

WHITE ROCK CLUB SPECIALS.

The American White Plymouth Rock Club is offering to poultry shows this winter five handsome silk ribbons, one each for the best White Plymouth Rock cock, cockerel, hen, pullet or pen shown by a member. The club also offers a membership free (from April 1, 1905, to April 1, 1906) for the highest scoring male shown by an exhibitor not a member. In addition to this the club will put up a silver cup in every state paying fifteen or more members at the time of holding the show where the state meeting is held No specialty club in the country offers such inducements to fanciers. The chance for competing for these valuable specials is open to members only. If you are not a member or have not paid your dues as such, do so at once and get in line. The coveted specials are well worth striving for and you may as well have them as anybody else. One dollar puts you in good standing until April 1st, 1905. For beautiful club catalog, application blanks, etc., address the national secretary and treasurer, Seth W. Gregory, Deyavan, Wis.

THE AMERICAN BUFF PLYMOUTH ROCK CLUB.

The annual meeting of the American Buff Plymouth Rock Club will be held in connection with the Madison Square Garden Show, New York city, at 2:30 p. m., Thursday, Jan. 5, 1905.

It is to be hoped there will be a large entry of Buff Rocks, and that every breeder who can will attend.

The premium list had gone to press before I could make this announcement. The list of specials will be published soon, or information regarding them can be obtained by writing

W. C. DENNY, Sec's and Treas.,
Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. Howell, associate editor of The American Fancier, will furnish weekly reports on the egg and poultry market, and answer all questions submitted to him relating to commercial and practical poultry keeping. When replies are requested to be sent by letter, stamps must be enclosed and letters addressed to George E. Howell, 70 Christopher St., New York City.

Eggs.—Receipts for week, 36,679 cases. There is no change in market conditions. Most of the fresh laid eggs are being consumed in the locality in which they are laid, the universal cry being, can get more at home than they are quoted in the market.

The few so-called fresh, arriving at this point, of such doubtful quality there is little satisfaction in handling them. We quote:

Nearby fancy selected, 40 to 42c. per dozen; choice grades, not equal to first quotations, 35 to 39c.; fancy mixed, 34 to 36c.

Western close graded fancy, 32c.; average shipments, 30c.; Kentucky, 23 to 29c.; Tennessee, 22 to 28c.; refrigerator, 21½c to 22c.; dirty eggs, 17 to 20c.; cracked eggs, 14 to 18c.

Live Poultry.—Receipts, 27 cars. chickens, western, 11c per lb.; southern, 10c. Fowls, western, 11c. Southern, 10c.; turkeys, old, 10 to 12c.; western ducks, 80 to 90c per pair; southern, 60 to 70c.; geese, western, $1.62 to $1.75 per pair. Southern, $1.25 to $1.50. Pigeons, 20c per pair.

Dressed poultry.—Receipts, 26,642 pkgs. Jersey, Maryland and Delaware fresh killed turkeys, dry picked, average best run, 21 to 22c.; fair to good, 17 to 19c.; western, 15 to 18c.; spring chickens, Philadelphia, 8 to 9 lbs. to pair, per lb., 19 to 20c.; mixed sizes, 14 to 16c.; other Pennsylvania, 7 to 8 lbs. to pair, fancy, per lb., 14 to 15c.; State and Pennsylvania, mixed sizes, 12 to 13c.; Pennsylvania, under 5 lbs. to pair, 10 to 11c.; western, broilers, dry picked, fancy, 14 to 15c.; 8 lbs. and over to pair, large roasters, 12c.; average best, 10½ to 11c.; Ohio and Michigan, scalded, fancy, 11c.; average run, 10c.; other western, 8 lbs. and over to pair, scalded, fancy 11c.; average best, 10c.; southern dry picked, 10c.; scalded, 10 to 11c.; inferior, 8 to 9c.; fowls, western dry picked, 5 lbs. and over each, per lb., 11c.; dry picked, average best, 10c.; Ohio and Michigan, scalded, 10 to 11c.; other western, scalded, 10½c.

Spring ducks, Maryland fancy, 14 to 15c.; Ohio and Michigan choice, 13 to 14c.; other western choice, 12½ to 13c.; spring geese, eastern, choice white, 16 to 17c.; dark, 14 to 15c.; Maryland, 13 to 14c.; western choice, 12 to 12½c.; fair to good, 9 to 11c.; squabs, white, $2.75 per dozen; mixed, $2.25; dark, $1.75 to $2.00.

The unexceptionally small supply of turkeys and high prices demanded, offers an opportunity to engage in turkey raising that ought to prove attractive, and induce many more growers to engage in growing the great national bird.

Appreciating this fact, I was able, while at the Herald Square show last week, to obtain an interview from the dean of turkey culture, Mr. George Wolfe, Seneca Falls, N. Y., who is undoubtedly the most successful raiser and exhibitor of Bronze turkeys in the country.

Mr. Wolfe tells me he sets his eggs under his turkey hens all together, his brooding turkeys being under partial restraint, and in this way he is able to have them lay and hatch in such places as he wishes. Mr. Wolfe has been a turkey fancier since he was ten years old, and after thirty years' experience with the domesticated turkey, he finds they are wild enough naturally, without introducing any wild turkeys in his flock. When the young turkeys are hatched, they are confined for three days; they are fed little and often, stale bread and sweet milk, grit, a little pepper and occasionally a chopped onion. After the third day they are given their liberty day and night,

Until six weeks old they are kept free from lice by frequent and thorough dusting with insect powder. The bread and milk diet is continued until the grasshoppers appear, when they get no more feed until fall, when they are given just enough corn and oats to keep them in good healthy condition.

The loss by accident, wet weather and animals that prey upon them, reaches ten per cent., a very low average, and proves Mr. Wolfe to be an adept and watchful handler.

He says the largest turkey he ever grew, weighed forty-seven pounds at maturity. The magnificent yearling tom he had on exhibition last week, now weighs forty-two pounds and promises to weigh as heavy, and win as many prizes.

In his most successful year he raised two hundred and fifty.

In conclusion I wish to thank Mr. Wolfe on behalf of the Fancier readers, for the information he gave me on the subject.

THE AMSTERDAM SHOW.

Editor American Fancier:

Dear Sir:—In your Nov. 26 number I noticed a letter from Mr. N. W. Rosa, Schenectady, N. Y., in which he asks "What is the matter with the Amsterdam-Fuller show? I hear that it has fallen through." In justice to the Amsterdam fanciers who contemplated holding a show this winter, I wish to state: Firstly, that the show was intended to be a strictly local fanciers' association, and I cannot see wherein Mr. Rosa gets the "Amsterdam-Fuller" combination, as there is no section of our busy city called "Fullers," as I know of. We are still contemplating the holding of a show, a fanciers' show, (with no strings tied on to each member of the committee of 20). Our fault is we have no hall or suitable room for holding a large show, in this otherwise booming city, and if we do hold one Mr. Rosa need not have any misgivings, as we will not conflict with Schenectady's dates in the least.

NEW SINGLE COMB BROWN LEGHORN CLUB.

At a well attended meeting of Brown Leghorn breeders at the World's Fair, St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 29th, 1904, the old club of above name was reorganized as same had been practically dead for some time. A committee was appointed to revise and redraft a new constitution and by laws. W. Theo. Wittman, Allentown, Pa., was elected temporary chairman and C. A. Dutton, Trempealeau, Wis., temporary secretary. Permanent organization, adoption of constitution and by laws, etc., will be completed at the next annual meeting to be held at Chicago, Wednesday, January 25th, 1905, at 2 p. m.

This club is a sure go, and every breeder should send in his application at once. Five very fine special ribbons will be offered this winter at one or more leading shows of each state for members only, besides offering a dozen extra special ribbons and cash specials at National Fanciers' and Breeders Association Show, Chicago, January 23rd to 28th, 1905. For application membership blanks and further information, write to

C. A. DUTTON, Sec'y,

GEYER'S SCURVY CURE FOR POULTRY was the first article introduced to the public for this purpose, which has been thoroughly tested in the last ten years by many of our brother fanciers who are willing to say with us that there is no other article on the market like this that can be relied on to do its work properly. It is something that the poultry fancier, who appreciates his fine birds, needs very much. What looks more disgraceful than a fine flock of chickens, many, or all of them, having their legs coated with a thick, hard, scabby crust which is called scurvy? It spoils the appearance of the birds and is very annoying to them. It is also contagious. Here we have a sure cure for this ugly disease. By following the directions we guarantee that it will take off that ugly, hard coat and leave the legs clean and smooth and give them their natural color. It also has no equal for healing sores and frosted combs and wattels. It makes them very bright and red. It is just what the exhibitor wants to prepare his birds for the exhibition room. Some of our customers tell us that they have tried it with good results for weak legs. We only ask you to give it a trial. It is put up in tin boxes. Money must accompany all orders. Price, 25 cents. Address, G. A. Geyer, Florin, Pa. 560tf

COLUMBIA POULTRY FARM.—A sacrifice sale of prize winners and this year's breeders to reduce stock. Write for prices. Augusta, Ga.

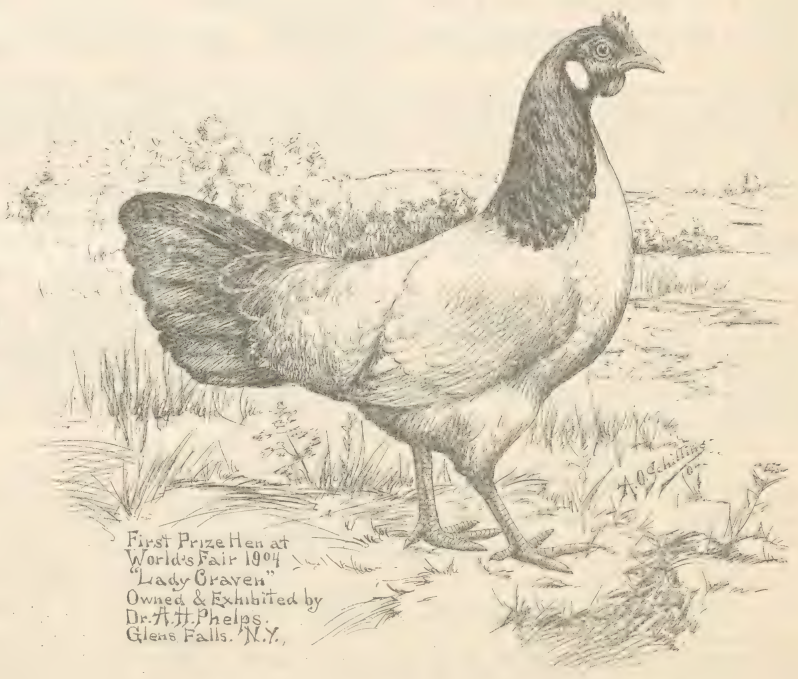
A Very Successful Show = Attendance Good and Some Exceptionally Strong Classes.

The poultry show held by the Augusta Poultry and Pet Stock association, at Augusta, on Nov. 14-20, was a grand success in all respects. It was carnival week, and while the many other attractions may have somewhat affected the patronage, there was, nevertheless, a good attendance day and night. The members of the club are enthusiastic gentlemen, who firmly believe in quality, and they are genuine fanciers, who see more in their pets than the mere value in dollars. The judge who handles the fowls raised by the Augusta club members, can easily tell the fowls are bred by fanciers who love their birds, their tameness proves it, their good condition and weights further prove it. It was a little too early for a show so far south, as the birds are considerably later molting there than north. Many of the specimens would score higher later in the season. Some of the classes were very strong in quality. The White Wyandottes lead in numbers (nearly 70)) and the winners were good specimens, quite ideal in shape, good white, and good legs and beaks. Barred Rocks came next in numbers and average good quality. First cockerel, fine head points, was good in shape, even in color throughout and well barred with straight bars.. Second cockerel also good in color, off some in head points. 1st hen, large, good even color, well barred, clear beak and legs; 2nd hen, stood close in competition, but weaker in neck; 3rd hen, will be a very fine one when molted out; pullets, 1st and 2nd very little different and complete molting might reverse the awards.

Indian games—A very strong class both in numbers and excellence. When completely molted, some of the specimens will be high scorers. They were in better condition than any other fowls. After the winners were picked, "there were others" that seemed deserving. The Black and White Minorcas were fine specimens—as good as are found in any show.



Black Leghorns—A good class of typical, clean cut birds, good in color and head points. Buff Leghorns, winners, were good clean buff, and birds were of good size. Brown Leghorns, very good quality in the winners, males showing good rich color, fine penciled saddles and head points very good. The females, an even lot, with the good color satiny backs so desirable.

Buff Orpingtons, a small class, but the winners were good specimens, both in shape and color.

Bantams were out in considerable numbers, and average of a high order. The Black Breasted Reds were a battle royal in competition, very little difference in the scores, and probably a rest of one lot would result in enough improvement to reverse the awards. The winners were simply "way up in G" as far as style and carriage goes. 1st cock, a stylish, good stationed bird; 1st cockerel, a grand little beauty, a comer; 1st hen, clean cut, typical carriage, fine head; 2nd hen, also a fine specimen, not quite so good in color. 1st and 2nd pullet, very close. The second appeared to be overshown—tired. Later on would doubtless down the first. The same severe competition existed in Red Pyles. Golden and Silver Sebrights were considerably beyond the average Well laced and good color prevailed. Buff Cochins, the winners were remarkably good specimens, fine in shape and color. Would stand a chance for honors at any show.

The pigeon display, while not large,

was most decidedly a quality affair. The birds exhibited by Messrs. H. P. Burum, of Augusta, and R. E. Riley, of Atlanta, would grace any pigeon display. The honors between these gentlemen were quite evenly divided, but if the awards had all gone to either one of them, there would not have been a kick. That's the kind of gentlemen that compose the Augusta club. They have confidence in the work of of the judges, and when they get beaten they are satisfied, and never one of them steps up and laments about better birds they had left at home, etc. There was not the lest sign or intimation to let the judge know who owned a single bird—not a question asked him about any of them until the awards were made. The judge's money wouldn't pass in Augusta, the show badge was an open sesame to every entertainment. It was intimated the judge had either renewed his youth or had reached his second childhood, for he not only took in with some of the members of the club, all the side shows, but actually looped the loop, rode the camel and elephant, and was joggled in the topsy--turvy house. Through this medium — the American Fancier — the judge desires to express his appreciation of the many courtesies extended him and to especially thank Rev. Frank M. Hauser, for his ride around Augusta's belt line railway, with the entertaining description of the grand old homes pointed out. Anyone who visits Augusta should take this ride, and visit the cotton storage warehouses also. Two things will then impress the visitors mind—one, the fact that he has seen some of the most ideal homes in this country—the other, that he will see why "cotton is king."

The officers of the Augusta association are:

J. Willie Levy, president.
W. R. Munday, vice-president.
J. W. Killingsworth, secretary.
Dr. W. C. Cleckley, treasurer.
Leonard F. Verdery, superintendent.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The good old time-honored saying, "Trust in Providence," was amply exemplified at Providence last week, when the R. I. Poultry Association held its 19th annual exhibition.

The show was a success from every point of view. The attendance was good, the quality of the birds A1, and in numbers they had too many. The whole official staff were in attendance and did the work of their respective positions without a hitch; the banquet on Thursday night was attended by the most prominent people of the state.

The birds were a grand lot, with quality way up. Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes, fit to compete in any place; Javas, with classes filled and A1 specimens at that. A grand lot of Langshans, a nice lot of Leghorns and Minorcas, small but good classes of Hamburgs, Polish, La Fleche and Houdans, and a bang up good lot of Bantams throughout. The water fowl and turkeys were quite a show in themselves and there was the largest display of pigeonsthat Providence has ever seen. The principal awards follow:

Having occasion to pass through the Jewish quarter on the lower East Side, I could not help observing the ancient method of handling poultry as practiced, we presume, from time running back as far as history has been prescribed for the benefit of the coming races of mankind.

In the quaint little poultry shops which line Suffolk and adjoining streets, the carcasses of all kinds of poultry lie on the counters, cut up but not plucked of feathers, the parts most desired, like the loin of a beef, are the ones taken first. Where the whole carcass is bought it is killed and dressed before your eyes.

What first attracted my notice was the pictures painted on the windows, invariably of yellow and green, supposedly to represent live chickens and ducks, but I give you my word the brush was not held by a Sewell or a Schilling.

The President, in his annual message to Congress, advises a census of all live stock to be taken annually. Should this be done, the poultry keepers will have cause for congratulation. Nothing will help more than a complete understanding of the industrial conditions of the business.

To commence with, the high price of grain will necessitate a readjustment of values and a new proportionment of the number of dozens of eggs per year a hen must needs lay before a profit from their keep can be expected; the same with table poultry.

It is true, the value of eggs per dozen and poultry by the pound has gradually risen,but whether they have kept pace with the cost of production, only a comparative table will determine.

While on the subject, I would like to say the only way to keep hens as a business, is in a business-like way. The profits lie between the cost of feed, shelter and care, and the money received in eggs and poultry. It does not take much bookkeeping to find this out. Guesswork might be the easier method, but one has no facts to fall back upon.

If the dairyman has a cow which does not give as many quarts of milk in a year as he thinks she ought, he sells her, but not having given any thought to the laying qualities of his hens, they may be eating their heads off a couple of times a year, and he none the wiser.

The long-headed poultryman has a way of sorting out and separating his flock into divisions and sections. He putshis laying hens and pullets in one section, he subdivides tosuit the conditions and traits he notices in his colonies. Gradually he works his every day layers into pens by themselves, also the robust and hearty feeders, the mischief makers, the modest and retiring dispositioned ones are finally herded by themselves, then the trap nest comes into play, so that by the time the breeding season arrives, he is ready to mate up intelligently and systematically.

It does not need a fortune teller to convince us such a man is moving ahead.

A beginner upon asking a few general questions on poultry matters, of the accredited scribe to one of our contemporaries, replies in this vein: "If you do not you will be out money and if you should you will be liable to lose money." A problem both ways.

Another says, "a medium sized hen ought to have at least eight feet and small ones six feet." At that ratio a large one ought to have twelve feet.

One of the lady scribes on a western journal says, "It is never too late to mend." The trouble with most of us is, we haven't time to mend at all, weather is against it.

Speaking about the weather, give the hens a good old-fashioned feed of corn to have in their crops at bed time. If the chill has been taken from it, by setting the measure of corn behind the kitchen stove, so much the better; just so much less animal heat will have to be expended to warm it, consequently just so much more energy to convert into eggs. A hot mash in the morning served with ice cold water on the side, is not congenial for more reasons than one.

Water from a spring which does not freeze over is the thing. Go to the spring, and water at once, then dump; repeat at noon and night.

Unfortunately, nature has not fitted out every chicken farm with one of her drinking fountains, more's the pity.

Whatever the source, it is worse than useless to leave water standing in a fountain when ice will form on it.

Personally I prefer the individual fountain. The continuous system of watering is open to the following criticism: Suppose in the first pen was a hen afflicted with the roup, every succeeding pen must drink that roup-inoculated water. This is a defect which no doubt can be remedied.

A WONDERFUL MAINE HEN.

Orono, Me., Nov. 19.—After five years of careful breeding for egg production, regardless of all other accomplishments, Prof. George M. Gowell,agricultural expert at the University of Maine,has succeeded in obtaining more than forty hens that have yielded more than 200 eggs apiece in a year and has produced one hen which has laid 251 eggs within twelve months, thus beating all previous reported records in egg yield.

This hen, known to the records as No. 617, is a small Plymouth Rock of pure strain, though not shaped according to the standard type. She is not only under the size demanded for perfect specimens of the breed, but her wing barring is imperfect and her neck is too slim for her body.

In spite of her defects, as viewed from the standpoint of the fancier, she is in actual performance the most valuable hen in the world, being capable under average Maine conditions of returning to her owners a net profit of 176 per cent. a year.

The figures, which have been passed upon and approved by expert bookkeepers, are deduced from counting the average cost of food and subtracting the total expense of subsistence from the income derived from eggs at the average prize paid in Maine, which is 18 cents a dozen.

Prof. Gowell has devoted himself almost exclusively to breeding hens for a specific purpose for the last five years. Beginning with 1,000 hens divided into flocks of about twenty hens and two cockerels to a pen, he has employed trap nests and been able to get at the exact performance of every bird.

The first year the best record was 220 eggs, laid by a Plymouth Rock pullet. There were eleven other Plymouth Rock hens that exceeded 200 eggs each the first year, though of the 500 White Wyandottes only three reached the 200 egg class.

The next season the most prolific hens in their respective classes were put in pens together, and eggs saved from these were kept for hatching. Again the Plymouth Rocks outstripped the Wyandottes in egg yield by great majorities, so from that time on until the end no further attention was paid to the Wyandottes.

In speaking of his labors, Prof. Gowell says that the problem of developing a flock of hens that will beget chicks to maintain or outstrip the ancestral records, is beset with many difficulties. After reaching a certain point in inbreeding, the physical stamina of the fowls degenerates, and the birds die from a too intimate mixture of allied bloods.

The hen known as No. 617 is vigorous and apparently health. She is active beyond the usual conduct of hens, and bids fair to live for years.

From her and two other hens, each of which has laid 246 eggs in a year, Prof. Gowell is saving eggs for the hatching of still more prolific fowls. What the limit is going to be he cannot tell. He hopes to arrive at the hen which will lay 300 eggs in a year and yield a net profit of 200 per cent., though he is not at all certain that the fowls are capable of doing so much without physical collapse.

It will take four or five years longer to decide the question either way. Meanwhile,he thinks he has originated a breed of fowls that Maine farmers and poultrymen can keep with an assurance of profit.—N. Y. Sun.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1904.

The committee of five that have charge of the publication of the New Standard of Perfection are being severely criticised for the delay in issuing the latter. Some of the press comments are not only caustic but instructive."

This committee is composed of Fred L. Kimmey, Ill., chairman; D. Lincoln Orr, N. Y.; T. E. Orr, Pa.; Grant M. Curtis, N. Y., and J. H. Drevenstedt, N. Y.

Four of the above committee met at the St. Louis World's Fair, the writer of these notes being absent, owing to business engagements.

It seems now that several of our editorial brethren are imbued with the idea that, if we had been present at St. Louis, we might have shed light on the delay of issuing the Standard. Not being an incandescent arc Cooper-Hewitt electric, or Welsbac gas light, we are unable to shed illumination, but we can give a few facts.

* * *

By wire we were called to attend a meeting of the publication committee at Buffalo, December 12. Chairman Kimmey, Grant M. Curtis and the writer met at the Arlington Hotel at 9:30 a. m. Owing to engagements, neither Mr. T. E. Orr nor Mr. D. Lincoln Orr could attend.

* * *

The work of preparing copy for a printer of a technical work of the magnitude and importance of the coming Standard of Perfection is no easy task. It has taken weeks and months to get this copy condensed and crystallized down to a point where it will appear to the best advantage, and at the same time be so plain and clear that the veriest tyro can grasp its meaning. Much of this work has been done by interested and earnest workers who have received not one cent for their work. The records will prove this.

This work was completed, as far as human beings can do it, on Monday, December twelfth, nineteen hundred and four. The first one hundred and twenty-five pages of copy are at the printers. Proofs of the pages, type, etc., have been passed upon and corrected, and the book is under way and will be pushed as rapidly as possible toward completion.

Now as to delay in getting illustrations. Mr. F. L. Sewell was instructed to make additional sketches, which added to the time originally figured on as necessary to complete the work. It made no specific contract with Mr. Sewell when these sketches should be ready at the time, and every member, we believe, is just as much annoyed at the delay as those who anticipated the Standard in December. But building a new book is like building a new house. We plan to have it completed at a certain time, when some contingencies arise that delay matters.

We will further state that all illustrations, except thirteen, are ready, Mr. Sewell having completed eight since the close of the St. Louis World's Fair.

The above are plain statements of facts. The committee of five has tried to do its best to give to the poultry raisers of the United States, Canada and the world at large, what will be a credit, typographically, historically, scientifically and grammatically, to poultry literature. It has, furthermore, endeavored to carry out to the best of its ability the instructions of the Revision Committee, as ratified by the American Poultry Association at Rochester, February, 1904.

The illustrations on our title-page this week give an excellent idea of the Wakenvelder fowl. These two birds were the winners at St. Louis and are owned by Dr. A. H. Phelps, Glens Falls, N. Y. Mr. Schilling, the artist, has caught the type nicely.

* * *

Mr. R. F. Alden, the veteran Silver Wyandotte breeder, has made his home at Scranton, Pa., having accepted a lucrative position there. He will be in the show arena again in a few years.

The American Fancier published at Johnstown, N. Y., by J. H. Drevenstedt, reached our desk ten days ahead of any other paper published with a complete list of awards at the World's Fair. The Fancier is a weekly, and gives all of the important events as a matter of news.—The Michigan Poultry Breeder.

Editor Barnes, being a first class newspaper man, appreciates the value of early news and is not afraid to give credit to contemporaries for the good work they do in this direction.

That cartoon of Schillings' in the December Canadian Poultry Review is a very good one and touches up "Bismark" Butterfield, "Billy" McNeil, "Dick" Oke and Editor Donovan in fine style.

Speaking of McNeil, Poultry Life of America remarks:

"Billy" McNeil, the genial, whole sole fancier from Canada, was on hand. He exhibited a big string of birds.

"Little Willy" could well afford to go there with a new pair, knowing that the Canadian government would duplicate all prizes won. But he needed them on those grounds.

Mr. W. H. Overbaugh, Hanover, Pa., the erstwhile Buff Rock champion, is now actively engaged in breeding White Plymouth Rocks, and judging town in October, will be a dangerous from the record he made at Hagerscompetitor in the future at all the big shows.

Herr Wilhelm Russ, the Vesey Street monarch of poultry supplies, has come out boldly with something new, and which seems destined to prove a big winner, viz.: A Five Dollar Brooder. It is the result of years of experience and its looks do not belie its value.

* * *

The Walden, N. Y., show, held last week, had 286 White Wyandottes by actual count, with quality that would surprise the old-timers at the biggest of shows. In fact, the show was a big surprise in numbers and quality. Full particulars will be found in the special report written for The American Fancier.

BOSTON SHOW.

Mechanics' Building, Boston, will be the center of attraction for poultrymen from all over the world during the week of January 17th next, at which time will be held the ninth annual Boston Poultry Show. There were over seven hundred individual exhibitors represented at the last Boston Show, and the management is quite anxious to extend this list so as to enroll every state in the union among its patrons. Prizes, regular and special, have gone as far north and west as Dakota and as far south as the Carolinas. Join with the fanciers' delight and send some birds to Boston.

The Boston Show is not a sectional gathering, it is the breeder mecca where they can go with or send their stock with the full assurance of proper care and safe return, and with a feeling of confidence in having the most competent judges pass upon their merit. There are no favors nor favorites at Boston. True merit alone is considered in the placing of awards in all departments, a clear field and favors to none have been the corner stone for success with the Boston management.

Boston has always led in the offering of regular and cash specials. It will be the same this season; a win at Boston not only carries with it the highest credit and compliment of the season, but in addition more money than has ever been paid by a Poultry Show in this country.

Premium lists will be ready for distribution any time after December first, entries will close December 31st. All who desire a premium list can obtain one by writing for same to PORTO RICO.

Reached this tropical island Sept.29. While the visit was for other purposes than raising poultry, my eye was open for anything in that line that should present itself.

The climate is warm and moist. The range of the mercury was from 70 degrees in the morning to 83 degree during the hours from one o'clock to four, with a shower or so in the afternoon, though sometimes coming in the forenoon and night. These are of short duration, but generally make up in quantity, being a downpour while they last.

There was scarcely a day during the two weeks' stay that it did not rain either during the day or night. These conditions were very fine for all vegetable growth and there was no lack of green stuff for the birds. The months of February, March and April are said to be the dry ones, when but little rain falls.

Everywhere chickens are to be seen and nearly all are small and of a gamy appearance, long of leg and of all colors. But few thoroughbred fowls are on the island. In my trip a few White Leghorns, White Wyandottes, Plymouth Rocks and also a few Partridge Wyandottes were seen. The experience of the Americans with their pets was all alike, so far as I could learn. Until the chicks were three months old, roupy conditions prevailed and a large part of the hatches would die from that cause.

The way of raising was to allow the old hen to run loose with her brood and trail the little ones through the wet grass after the showers. Often they were not under shelter during the showers, so that though the temperature was warm the chicks would become roupy and die; but after they became three months of age, they thrived well. The native chicks did not seem to be so troubled. Probably different treatment by the Americans would very much change the conditions of their flocks. Lice are troublesome 365 days in the year. The "chigger," a flea, also gives some trouble. The "mongoose," a little animal similar to a weasel, also is troublesome,but the worst foe to the thoroughbred stock is the native Porto Rican, as they seem to be very fond of that class of stock.

Poultry is brought to market alive by the natives and is also peddled about the towns in the same way. In the market place at San Juan you will see the birds tied together by the legs standing or sitting on the floor of the space allotted to the market man among a mixed lot of Porto Rican vegetables and fruits. Young stock brings 10c to 30c each. Fowls, 25c to 40c.

Eggs are small in size and generally bring 1½c to 2c each, the natives generally bringing them to market in small quantities carried in a cloth bag or sack.

Nearly all the Americans on the island are located in San Juan, a city of over 30,000 inhabitants, or in the suburbs, and they would be glad to get poultry and eggs, as they used to in the states.

FOOD SUPPLY.

There is no trouble to raise corn there, as I saw it in all stages of growth from that just coming up to that dry on the stalk. Sweet potatoes are also continuously in supply.

Rice, upland, does well. Bran, middlings, etc., would have to be shipped there from New York; meat scraps probably also, though the refuse from the markets could no doubt be obtained and ground up if the effort was made. Insects are numerous; worms likewise.

The soil is generally sandy on top, with a hard subsoil. The island is rocky and rough, hilly and mountainous, abounding in streams of various sizes.

No one that I saw gave their poultry the care that breeders in the states usually give it, and for that reason it is impossible to say whether the roupy chicks could be avoided by different treatment. Ducks and geese do splendidly and there is a good market for them, too. AMERICAN.

THE OBJECTS OF ASSOCIATION.

Last spring the Viroqua, Wis., fanciers formed an association,not for the ordinary purpose of holding exhibitions, but simply to encourage the breeding of fine fowls and to economize in the matter of advertising. It is the aim of this association to use every available effort in causing the breeders of scrubs to take up the pure varieties, and to farmers and all others who have facilities for keeping fowls, the advantages of pure bred stock over mongrels is pointed out. Already there is manifest evidences of improvement in the stock hereabout, many who never kept standard varieties having discarded their "dunghills" and taken up more profitable kinds, chosen according to the advantages afforded by the premises and circumstances of the parties concerned. At the recent county fair, where until this year, but few pure breeds were exhibited, nearly all of the most popular kinds were shown, and the exhibit was a revelation to all who witnessed it, and did much to stimulate interest in the right direction. It was considered that by joint advertising a great saving of cost could be made, and it so seems. For instance, instead of fifteen or twenty fanciers issuing individual circulars, all join in issuing a large one, covering all the breeds kept here. Not only is the proportionate cost of printing less, but considerable is saved in postage. When Jones sends out one of the circulars, Brown and Smith have the benefit of riding on the same postage stamp, so to speak. Each circular sent out by individual members advertises stock for its whole "push." No winter show will be held here this winter, but many of the members purpose showing at Sparta, our neighbor city, where we understand members of the La Crosse and Winona associations will also contribute many exhibits,no shows being held in the last named cities this winter.

The officers of the Viroqua association are F. H. Graves, pres.; J. H. Bennett, sec.; W. S. Arnold, Chas. Thompson and Jno. Casson forming an executive committee. This committee is vested with authority to investigate any charges brought against the members, and any member caught in dishonorable dealings with patrons will, if found guilty of misrepresentation or fraud, be compelled to adjust matters to the satisfaction of the parties concerned, or be expelled from the association. In other words, the association is in a measure responsible for the actions of its members. Patrons are supposed to deal directly with the member breeding the kind or kinds wanted, the names being supplied by the secretary, president or any other member. Letters received by the secretary are turned over to the members with whom parties wish to deal, each breeder fixing his own prices and dealing as he sees fit, so long as he is not guilty of fraud. A MEMBER.

PARTRIDGE WYANDOTTES AT BROCKTON, MASS.

There was a record entry of Partridge Wyandottes, the largest exhibit ever held in the world, and the quality of the birds excellent. There were 118 singles and 4 pens.

Cocks. First cock, elegant Wyandotte shape, grand color and a credit to his owner. Fair comb and good size. 2nd a grand colored bird, lacks in comb and breast, otherwise a good bird. 3rd, another good bird, but light in color, good Wyandotte shape. 4th, good shape,nice color, lacks in tail and breast.

Cockerels. First, one of the best shaped birds ever seen, grand color, particularly strong in saddle and hackle; grand shaped tail. 2nd, another nice bird, lacks in shape breast, too long on back, but a good colored one, ought to make a grand breeder. Third, a good bird, elegant striping, saddle and hackle rather light in color, with the best colored wing ever seen on a bird, a trifle high on leg,ought to make a hot breeder, mated right.

Hens. A grand class. The first an elegant pencilled hen, good shape, a credit to her owner. 2nd, another good pencilled one, loses on shape. Pinched in tail. 3rd good shape, off in neck, not quite finished, tail not half grown. 4th, a good bird, off in comb and eye,good even color throughout.

Pullets. 1st, a beautiful pullet, good shape, well pencilled, smooth comb and fairly good on leg color. 2nd, another grand colored pullet, one of the best colored in the class, off in shape of back and breast, not at her best yet. 3rd, a grand comb, loses in color of back, poor leg, otherwise a good bird. Fourth, a nice bird, good shape,smooth comb, trifle light in eye; legs a trifle smoky. As a whole the class was a grand lot and considerable improvement has been made the last few years, and to-day we have birds equaling in color and pencilling the best Partridge Cochins. There is a steady demand for them, several three figure offers being refused for winners in cockerel, hen and pullet classes.

THE WINNERS.

Cocks.—1,2-4, J. B. Hadaway; 3 O. H. Leavitt; 5 Fernwood Farm. Hens—1 W. R. Fretz; 2 Rogers & Packard; 3-4-5 J. B. Hadaway. Cockerels—1 W. Jackman, 2 E. J. Robinson; 3 J. C. Macomber; 4 Rogers & Packard; 5 J. B. Hadaway. Pullets—1 J. C. Macomber; 2 J. B. Hadaway; 3 C. F. Early; 4 F. C. Burbank; 5 F. E. Atwood. Pens—1 J. B. Hadaway; 2 Rogers & Packard; 3 A. H. Leach; 4 Fernwood Farm.

$100 challenge cup, best 2 males and 4 females, to J. B. Hadaway.

$75 Par. Wy. breeders' cup, best young pen bred and owned by exhibitor, to J. B. Hadaway.

PLYMOUTH ROCKS AT HERALD SQUARE.

Barred Rocks a large class, 31 cocks, 45 hens, 53 cockerels, 58 pullets and 14 breeding pens. There were eight awards in all the classes. In quality of Barred Rocks, we believe the females had a little the best of it. First, second and third hen were especially strong; also first, second, third and fourth pullet. In cock birds, first was a good one, but a trifle rangy in shape and carried tail a little high. Second bird a very closely barred specimen and one quite a number of exhibitors had figured on for first ribbon. Cockerels, two of the best were left out on account of unfinished condition of hackle and saddle, making the birds look a little bit awkward to win. One more month will certainly land them at the top. One of these, owned by Frank D. Ham, will undoubtedly make one of the best show birds out this season. Second pullet was undoubtedly the best colored female in the pullet class. A little under size placed her back.

White Rocks another large class and especially strong in quality. Many old birds were in finished plumage and shown in the pink of condition, especially first cock and first and second hens, also first pen, composed entirely of old birds, and second pen composed of old stock. In young birds, first, second and third cockerel,and first pullet were the best finished in their class. Another fine exhibit of young birds was third pen, but handicapped a trifle by one of the females not being quite full in tail. Fourth, fifth and sixth pen, all young birds, was a good exhibit, but not as well shown as birds in first and second pen, but a word to the wise is sufficient, and it is dollars to doughnuts that this same exhibitor will make the White Rock alley awfully uncomfortable for the breeders in the next two years. He has size and shape and all he needs is a little more experience in fitting for exhibition and he will make the best of them very uncomfortable while the ribbons are going up. The eighth pen would have landed higher in the class had the male been in a better finished condition. This bird was too small to match the females, but with the quality they have and the experience gained by the exhibitor at Herald Square we expect to hear more of them later.

First, second, third, fourth and fifth on cockerels (in a class of 23) all went to one firm. These birds have the peculiar finish that has made the White Rocks famous all over the world. They are absolutely white, with proper length of back and body, good depth, stand well on their legs and comb and eye that but little fault can be found with them.

Buff Rocks was not a large class. There was some good quality, but not as much as we had expected to find. Quite a few of the old birds were just coming through moult and showed some of the old and new feathers in the same sections, making them look somewhat ragged. Perhaps the evenest colored bird in the class was first hen. Mr. Hayner also won fifth cock and seventh cockerel. In males, first and second cockerels were the closest competition in the class. With two weeks more time second might win over the other bird. This one award took more time than any other three in the Buff Rock clas. Only three pens and nothing especially strong in any of them.

RHODE ISLAND REDS. AT HERALD SQUARE.

We were pleased to find so large a class of Rhode Island Reds—eighty-eight single entries and six pens and all of such good quality. Especially was this noticeable in the cockerels, in both the Rose and Single Combs. So much so that quite a number were not placed, the competition being so close. The most typical female that we have seen in the Rose Combs was the first pullet, grand in shape, fine head, good comb, strong in eyes, and elegant in both surface and undercolor. About the only cut that would be given her would be on tail, being a little too light.. 1st Rose Comb cock, good in shape and color; also in eyes, little off in tail. 2nd cock, large bird, good head and eyes, little off on comb and wings, dark color. 1st hen, shape and color good, weak in eyes. 2nd, large size, even in color, off on comb, strong in eyes. 1st cockerel, good head and eyes, strong in color, little high in station, tail carried too far forward. 2nd, blocky body, short, quite good in color, somewhat off in shape and tail. 1st pullet as mentioned above. 2nd pullet, so much like the first that she must be an own sister, little off on tail. 1st Single Comb cock, a large bird, good in color, little rangy. 2nd, good shape, wins on color, little light in under-color. 1st hen, strong in color and shape, good eyes, off in comb. 2nd, good shape, but off on comb, color a little mealy. 1st cockerel, large bird, deep red color, comb little large. 2nd, short body, good head, good in color. 1st S. C. pullet, shape and color good, fine head, strong in eyes. 2nd, good in shape and color, little off on ear lobes. This class, coming in rotation with other American breeds, placed them in the darkest part of the hall, which made it very hard to do them justice. DAN'L P. SHOVE.

WALDEN, N. Y.

The 9th annual show of the Wallkill Valley and Hudson River Poultry Association was held at Walden, N. Y., December 6-7-8-9. This show proved to be the surprise of the season and was one of the best shows ever held in the state and by far the largest and best ever held by this association.

The officers of the association labored under great difficulties, as the entries were too large for the space at hand and they had to improvise a large number of coops, but in spite of all this the show was well handled and nearly all of the exhibitors were well satisfied. Great credit is due to Secretary H. W. Millspaugh and Supt. Minturn. If there is a better show secretary than Hector W. Millspaugh we do not know where to find him. Supt. Minturn is an old hand at the business and knows how to keep things going.

Four fine silver cups were competed for and were awarded as follows: Fred Woodruff, the cup for the largest number of points won by a single exhibitor; Edgar Briggs, the cup for the best exhibit of any one variety of Wyandottes; Harry Sherwood, the cup for the best exhibit of Barred Plymouth Rocks, and H. D. Craig, the cup for the best exhibit of any one variety of Bantams.

The judging took two days and was done by J. H. Drevenstedt, assisted by Miller Purvis and Theo. F. Jaeger.

White Wyandottes, as usual, were the largest class in the show; in fact, the class of this variety was one of the largest ever seen in the show room, numbering 286 birds, divided as follows: Cocks 14, hens 25, cockerels 22, pullets 35, old pens 17 and young pens 19. The quality was equal to anything ever shown at any show. The largest exhibitors in this class were Woodcrest Farm, Edgar Briggs, C. W. Peak and F. W. Corey and when these four breeders meet in one show there is certainly something doing in White Wyandottes. The first cock is an old winner and as good a bird as was ever bred. First hen also as good as they are made. First cockerel a beauty, fit for any show, and first pullet was fine, being perfect in head points. First pen of fowls as even a lot as any man can show, being fine in color and all of one type. First pen of chicks were grand and the cockerel in this pen was as fine a male as there was in the show. Third pen also contained a cockerel nearly, if not quite, as good as first cockerel. Taken as a whole, this lot of White Wyandottes could scarcely be excelled.

Silver Wyandottes were a fine class of 57 birds. This was a better lot of Silvers than is usually found outside of such shows as New York. Quality fine in the winners with first cock, cockerel and pullet probably the most noticeable birds.

Buff Wyandottes a strong class of 59 birds with first hen, cockerel and pen of chicks the best birds in the lot.

Partridge Wyandottes not a large class, but the quality was of the best. First cock and hen and first and second pens of chicks were especially good.

A few fine Silver Pencilled Wyandottes were shown.

The Wyandottes were the largest and strongest classes at this show, they numbering almost 500 birds out of a total of about 1,200 shown.

Barred Rocks were a fine class of 73 birds with birds of the highest quality among the winners. First cock, first pullet and first pen of fowls being worthy of special mention.

White Rocks were a good class of 65 birds. The winners were strictly first class all through. This variety certainly made a fine showing at this show.

A fine class of Silver Penciled P. Rocks were shown by F. W. Corey. First hen and first cockerel were of great quality, being very fine in color and markings. A few Partridge P. Rocks were also shown.

Brahmas and Cochins were conspicuous by their absence. What Light Brahmas were shown were of fine quality.

Buff and Black Orpingtons were represented by some good birds. Some extra good Black chicks were shown.

Rhode Island Reds brought out large classes and showed up finely. This breed seems to be making good progress judging by the quality of the birds shown here. We thought that the Rose Combs were somewhat better than the Single Combs. First pen of Single Comb chicks were the best in this variety, while in the Rose Combs, first and second cockerels, first and second pullets, and first, second and third pens of chicks were all extra fine. These three pens of Rose Comb chicks were the most uniform lot of Rhode Island Reds we have ever seen.

Leghorns brought out some good classes. S. C. Whites and R. C. Browns were the most numerous. The winners in these two varieties were strictly first class all through. S. C. Buffs a small class of extra nice birds all shown by one exhibitor. S. C. Black Minorcas were a class of 47 birds and the winners were good enough for any show.

Bantams were quite numerous and of good quality all through. Buff Cochins showing up well with some grand little Cochins among the winners. Golden and Silver Sebrights were also good.

Bronze Turkeys were fine, with some great, big ones. Quite a number of Ducks and Geese were shown. Pekin Ducks were quite numerous and the quality good.

This show was remarkable in regard to the large number of different varieties of poultry shown and the large classes and high quality of the more popular varieties. It took the very best birds to get a ribbon at Walden and every one of the successful exhibitors can well be proud of their winnings there.

The Association and its officers are a fine lot of fanciers and they well deserve the support which they received and we hope that they will be able to do as well another year.
